"The majority (Bolsheviks) which defeated the minority (Mensheviks) (at the 1903 conference), reperesented a definite policy," he writes. "They were what he might call the 'whole-hoggers' of socialism, and for this reason were called Bolshevik (i. e., the biggest, or those who go in, for the biggest things). The minority represented the moderates, of thin edge of the wedge's party, hence styled mensheviks (i. e., the smaller, or those who go in for smaller things)."—London Globe.

ATTEMPT MADE.

London, Sept. 1. — Depatches state that an attempt on the life of a British general was made at Murman.

The Silent Heroes of the War

THE men of the Merchant Marine—do you ever give them a thought?

The whole submarine campaign is aimed to frighten this non-combatant force off the seas. For then—

Britain, France, Italy would face starvation.
Our armies could not fight.
Canada would be wrecked commercially.
The fight for liberty would be lost.

Yet governments make no official recognition of this heroic body of 300,000 men who toil day and night in danger of death. No provision is made for pensions, or relief for their dependents.

We must admit our debt to the widows and orphans of the 15,000 men of the Merchant Marine, who have gone down, victims of the U-boat. Our cry must be—

"They Shall Not Want."

In his famous speech of August 9th, 1918, Premier Lloyd George said:

"During the past two years Germany has made two distinct attempts to force a decision—one on the land and one on the sea. The land offensive might have been disastrous, but the sea offensive, if it had succeeded, would have been final. If the submarines had succeeded, our armies in France would have withered away. No Americans could have come over to assist us and the French troops. Ammunition could not have been shipped and we could not have sent the necessary coal and material to enable France and Italy to manufacture munitions.

"If France, Italy and Great Britain were threatened with starvation the war would have been over before this stage had been reached."

THE soldier is rightly remembered with gifts, separation allowance and pension. He is honored, as is his due.

The men of the Navy are provided for and their dependents are not allowed to suffer want.

But the seamen of the Merchant Marine—facing death in a hideous form at their daily work, risk all at the call of duty.

It would be a lasting disgrace to allow the widows and orphans of the noble 15,000 to suffer hardship, other than the loss of their dear ones. Those who died on the sea are calling to you now.

"The Girl Who Had No God"

By MARY ROBERTS RINEHART
Author of "The Man in Lower Ten," "The After House," Etc.

Talbot tried a new method. "It's a wealthy congregation," he explained. "It is not much for them, and it's safety for us. If we let Boroday go up, and he thinks what he will about us, he can make it bad for all of us."

Elinor turned on him.

"I don't care a rap for the congregation. Do you think that he will let that money go without a struggle? The moment it goes into the offertory it ceases to be money and becomes a divine trust to him. He'll fight and some one will be killed."

It dawned even on Talbot after a time, that her solicitude was for none of them. When he realized it at last he sat back with folded arms, and frowning brows. Here was mockery for sure; old Hilary's daughetr, reared on pure violence, and in love with a parson!—old Hilary's daughter and successor, defying the band in its hour of need, and quoting a divine trust, in extenuation!

In view of her attitude, there seemed to be nothing to do.

"We'll give it up, of course," said Lethbridge, after a pause.

There had never been any drinking in old Hilary's house. Only abstainers were ever taken into the band. But it was the custom of the two older men to remain at the table over their cigars, giving Walter and Elinor a half-hour together. That night, when Elinor rose from the table, Huff, although he rose with the others, made no move to follow her. She looked back from the doorway, a slim, almost childish figure, with beseeching eyes.

"You must all try to think kindly of me," she said wistfully. "I care for you as much as I ever did. You are all I have, you three. It is only that I—have been thinking."

For the first time since the organization of the band there was quarreling that night in old Hilary's paneled library. At the end of an hour Walter Huff flung out of the door, white with fury. He stumbled through the garden toward the garage, muttering as he went. In the rose alley he met Elinor.

"I was waiting for you," she said simply.

Huff stood before her, and the anger left his face.

"You're the one thing in all the world I felt sure of." His voice was heavy with despair.

"I've been thinking about Boroday——"

"Elinor, how far have things gone between you and this man at Saint Jude's?"

She recoiled.

"I hardly know him."

"You think about him."

She looked down into the valley.

"I think of the things he stands for. It just seems to me that, when a man like that, not a dreamer at all, but human and—keen, when he believes all that he does——"

"It was Ward on the ridge-pole, the one who nearly fell?"

"Yes."

"And you were frightened?"

"It made me sick. I——"

Quite suddenly he crushed her to him. It was as if he meant to drive away this barrier between them by sheer force of his love for her. But, although she held up her face for his kiss, he released her as suddenly, without it.

"You're crazy about him," he said thickly. "I'm not blind. I'll get him for this."

CHAPTER VIII.

Saturday evening it was the custom of the Bryants to entertain the rector at dinner.

Now, in his absence, it was the assistant rector who dined in the paneled Jacobean dining-room of the Bryant house, swallowing her unctuous dictation as to church policy with his dinner.

Not that Ward was mild. But he had an easy way of listening to the advice of his various influential parishioners and then going ahead and doing as he liked. In non-essentials he always yielded. To him the Church was so much bigger than its ritual.

That evening Mrs. Bryant had taken up the question of women in the choir.

"Frankly, Mr. Ward," she said, ignoring her fish, "I do not approve of it. It's the feminist movement, I tell you. Before long they'll want to be on the vestry."

Ward glanced up, half smiling. The pear-shaped pearl, which usually hung at his hostess's withered throat, was, naturally, not there. From the pearl to the parish-house, from the parish-house to Elinor— thus in two leaps of Ward's mind he was far from the subject in hand.

"As President of the Chancel Society," said Mrs. Bryant, "as honorary President of the Woman's Guild, I protest against women in the choir."

Back to the choir with a jump came Ward's errant mind.

"I wonder," Ward reflected, "whether a matter of tradition and custom will prevent women from singing in the heavenly choirs!"

Mrs. Bryant stabbed at her fish. But she had not finished. There were many things about Saint Jude's that did not please her. The burial of old Hilary Kingston had been one. She seized on that.

"A non-communicant," she snapped. "An infidel, an atheist! The daughter is living alone up there at this minute. It isn't respectable. It's a bad example to the girls in the village. The house is full of men all the time."

Ward put down his fork.

"That must be a mistake."

"It is quite true. Servants talk, you know. What can you expect? Raised out of the Church, with no belief, and, of course, no moral instruction."

Ward bent froward over the table.

"That is a very serious statement, Mrs. Bryant." His eyes were like steel. "Of course you are not basing it merely on what you hear from servants?"

Mrs. Bryant flushed, a purplish spot in the centre of each sagging cheek.

"I do not gossip with the servants," she said shortly. "It is common talk. And there are other things. Machines come and go from the house at queer hours of the night. The girl spends a great deal of money. Where does she get it? Where, for that matter, did old Hilary Kingston get it?"

Thus challenged, Ward had nothing to say.

After dinner he left early, but he did not go home. He went up the hill. As he strode on he remembered many things. The girl was without the sheet anchor of any belief, adrift and alone, an he had made no attempt to help her unbelief. Although it was after ten, the house was still lighted down-stairs, and he went without hesitation into the garden.

Thus it happened that he saw Elinor in Huff's arms, saw him thrust her violently from him, and rush away across the flower-beds, leaving her there alone.

Ward remained in the shadows. To save his life he could not have spoken to Elinor then. Under his constrained exterior he was in the thrall of the fiercest jealousy. This little fair-haired girl, to whom his God was no God, had taken a powerful hold on him.

Elinor, who slept little that night, saw the light in his window until it faded into the dawn.

Elinor went to the early Communion the following day. The church was dark. There were hardly two dozen people scattered over the building. She sat far back and was heavily veiled. When the congregation knelt, she knelt. An old woman in the next pew gave her the prayer-book open at service. On her knees then went Elinor and listened to Ward's fine voice echoing through the empty building.

The morning was warm and the windows open. The odor of burned wood from the parish-house crept in.

"Thou shalt not steal," Ward read from the Decalogue, and the people said:

"Lord have mercy upon us and incline our hearts to keep this law."

"Thou shalt not steal."

In the palm of her left glove Elinor had the Bryant pear-shaped pearl.

Ward had not seen her. He went through the service reverently, with an impressiveness of voice and bearing that showed how real it was to him. And in his voice, reading, exhorting, commanding, there were tender notes that caught Elinor's breath in her throat.

When the service was over, she rose from her knees and dropped the Bryant pearl into the alms-box by the door. The congregation, small and scattered, was still kneeling. The doorway and the alms-box were in twilight.

Drawing down her veil, she went quickly out into the sunshine.

At the eleven o'clock service Ward announced the burning of the parish building.

"It is not my intention to make an appeal," he said simply. "The parish-house was built to fill a great need; that need still exists. If our church is to be an element in the daily lives of the people of this town, we must have a meeting-place for them. For the worship of our God, the church building is sufficient, but if religion is to you the thing it is to me, the broader religion of universal brotherhood, the church building is not enough. "Thou shalt love thy neighbour as thyself."

Seventy-eight thousand dollars was taken up in the collection at Saint Jude's that morning. Over fifty thousand was in checks, the rest was in cash.

Walter Huff, sitting alone in the back of the church, had watched Ward intently through the service.

A BUILDER OF HEALTH

Nothing can be of greater assistance in building up the system than Dr. Chase's Nerve Food, for this food-cure forms new, rich blood, and nourishes and restores the feeble, wasted nerve cells. Gradually and naturally the body and mind regain vigor and energy, and you feel again the joy of living which comes only to people in good health

No Cause for Alarm.

An unfortunate impression has got abroad, according to Mr. Fred Abraham, Chairman of the Garden Section of the Food Board, that home canning is dangerous on account of boltuism, a form of ptomaine poisoning. This has been given currency through some remarks made at the recent medical congress held in Hamilton. "Boltuism is not a new disease, nor can it occur if vegetables are thoroughly sterilized," said Mr. Abraham. "If all home canned fruits and vegetables are cooked poisoning cannot occur. This point has been missed by a good many readers and has caused anxiety in the minds of amateur gardeners who fears are naturally easily aroused in the absence of knowledge. It is especially unfortunate that any misapprehension should exist at a time when every ounce of food that can be produced will be required. I, therefore, strongly urge everyone who can produce garden truck to do so on the widest possible scale. Women and children can eppecially help in this branch of production."

The Biious Habit

Some people have bilious spells about ever so often until they get to be a habit.

The liver is at fault. Get the liver right by using Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills, and the bile will not collect in the blood until it poisons you.

There is no one organ in the human body which has so great a control of health as the liver. Hence the far-reaching effect of this treatment.

FASHION'S FORECAST.
By Annabel Worthington.

A dear little apron to keep the little maid's dresses clean and to make her look pretty besides is sketched in No. 8856. The diagram shows how simple it is to make, for the yoke is all in one piece and it is slashed at centre front so that the apron can be easily slipped on over the head. The front and back sections are hemmed on the edges and they are gathered to the lower edges of the yoke. A narrow belt is attached to each side of the front section and buttons at the back. Lawn, percale or chambray may be used for making.

The child's apron pattern No. 8856 is cut in four sizes, 2 to 8 years. The 8 year size requires 2⅛ yards of 27 inch, or 1⅞ yards of 36 inch goods, and 1⅝ yards braid.

OUR DAILY SHORT STORY

When Khaki Calls

By M. E. Stanton

It was evening and the big office buildings were discharging their quota of humanity, who, though still in workaday garb, stepped forth briskly into the crisp autumn air, conscious that the chains of toil were loosened for a few brief hours and that they were free to play, relax and to take their little parts in the comedies and tragedies of social life.

Ann Donovan was one of a group of animated, chattering girls that emerged from one of these immense beehives of industry. They lingered for a moment on the sidewalk, laughing and talking, then scattered on their various homeward ways.

Ann started off, but had only gone a few feet when a quick step sounded behind her and a pleasant masculine voice said:

"Hullo, Ann! What's your hurry?"

It was annoying. Why would Tommy insist on waiting for her every evening? Of course he was pleasant company, and all that, but—well, a girl likes to dream sometimes, and that walk home in the evening, along the quiet, shaded streets, was the only bit of time out of the whole busy day she might have for herself.

"Good evening, Mister Regan," Ann managed to respond, taking a certain satisfaction in using her most formal prunes-and-prisms tone, usually reserved for impertinent salesmen or persistent book agents who invaded the office.

"Why so distant, Acushla? Doesn't Tommy sound good to you any more? That mister stuff doesn't listen natural comin' from you to me." And the cheerful Tommy softly hummed:

"Pack up your troubles in your old kit bag.

"Them's my sentiments every time. Fellow that wrote that song must have been a real fellow. One who knows that a smile makes the digging easier, whether you're digging with a shovel, or a pen or a—a sword."

Tommy's voice faltered a little on the last word, and he gazed a trifle anxiously and uncertainly at his silent companion.

"Er—Ann, there's something I've been wanting to tell you, and I don't see why I mightn't as well tell you now."

Ann was panic-stricken. Why could not Tommy be satisfied with things as they were and not begin treading on dangerous ground. Besides—and this was the real reason—a certain resentment had been lurking in the background of Ann's mind for some time with reference to this same Tommy Regan. How could he sit tamely behind a desk and watch other fellows, dozens of them, marching away to "Carry the starry banner over seas?"

Tommy was a strapping, stalwart youth, clean-cut and pleasing to the eye. Aggressive and intelligent, he had in him the making of a splendid American soldier.

But he had not enlisted when the nation-wide call for volunteers went forth, nor had the long arm of conscription as yet reached out for him. He and Ann had never directly discussed the subject. It was constantly in Ann's thoughts, but a certain hesitancy had prevented her from introducing the topic, and though she had skated dangerously close at times, for all of Tommy's unfailing cheerfulness and apparent willingness to chat on anything and everything under the sun, somehow he had never given her a clue as to his real reason for putting himself in the slacker class.

Ann herself was an ardent patriot. Fifteen dollars a week is not a munificent sum, but when a girl lives at home the stretching qualities of even a meager fifteen dollars are remarkable. So by dint of wearing her last season's suit, by studiously keeping her head turned the other way when passing an ice-cream parlor, by sundry small economies and self-denials constantly practiced the world over by thousands of working girls, she was able to buy a Liberty bond, to join the Red Cross and to contribute her mite to various special funds for the benefit of "Our Boys." She was even now learning to knit in the "From Pothooks to Knitting Needles" class recently launched at the office.

So when Tommy announced in that serious tone that he had something to tell her, she mentally besought her patron saint to ward off the imminent proposal without hurting the lad's feelings or destroying their friendship. For, after all, thought Ann, they had grown up together as neighbors, and there had always been a friendly feeling between the two families, though of late years the social intercourse had been confined chiefly to the young people save for an occasional 'cross-the-fence chat between Mrs. Regan and Ann's mother.

They were on a quiet side street now and her prayer seemed hopeless when. Just as Tommy started to resume his confidence, the heaven-sent interruption occurred. The interruption was just a pair of lovers strolling along arm in arm—a scene old as the ages, yet ever interestingly new to observed as well as to observers. The youth was clad in khaki and he carried himself with a jaunty, conscious air of pride that found eager reflection in the admiring maid at his side.

Ann and Tommy turned to look after them. Who can resist a backward glance at a pair of lovers?

"Oh!" sighed Ann, "doesn't he look splendid?"

And then valor tweaked discretion's ears and rushed into the fray.

"How can you stay at home and let folks call you a slacker, when all these brave fellows are giving up their homes, their work—yes, even their lives, to make our homes, our work and our lives safe? You've told me before that you loved me, but I don't want to hear you say it again, for I'll never marry a slacker. Never! Oh, how I wish I had been a man!"

And to Tommy's consternation Ann started to cry. He waited until her sobs had ceased, then said:

"But look here, Ann, I want to tell you—"

"Oh, what's the use of arguing about it now?" queried Ann wearily. "There's only one way for a man—a strong, healthy young fellow like you—to prove his patriotism. If you won't do it, your friends can't force you to."

This was the proper cue for a dignified exit, and as at this precise moment they reached the front gate of Ann's home she murmured a brief "good night" and left him abruptly.

Tommy's voice, still maddeningly cheerful, called after her: "If you happen to feel like the movies tonight, darlint, don't forget my 'phone number."

And Ann could hear him tramping up his own front steps whistling:

"Keep the home fires burning."

"Yes, you'll keep them burning all right," she spitefully apostrophized him, as she entered the house and clammed the door with a vigorous bang that brought her mother hurrying from the dining room, where supper was just sending forth its savory invitation.

"Why, dearie, you came in like a cyclone. No villain pursuing you, is there?" And Mrs. Donovan laughed expectantly, for she and this only daughter of hers were chums and shared a sense of rich Irish humor.

"Nothing, mother. I'm just a little tired and hungry, I guess, and supper smells so good. I'm ready, if it is."

"All right. But, Ann, did you hear about Tommy Regan? His mother was over this afternoon and told me about it. She cried and cried, but she's so proud of him, and she says he's so anxious to go, and—"

"What, mother? Tommy hasn't—"

"Enlisted! Yes, he has," exclaimed Mrs. Donovan, dabbing at a furtive tear with the corner of her apron. "That's just what Tommy has gone and done. She told me all about how he's felt ever since this war started; how it hurt him to see the other fellows marching off when he had to stay at home."

"Well, why did he have to stay at home?" interrupted Ann. "Of course I know it would leave his mother alone, but Mr. Regan must have left quite a lot of money when he died."

"But he didn't," exclaimed her mother. "Everyone thought so, but it appears that he speculated heavily, not only with his own money, but with some that had been intrusted to his care. His sudden death was a result of the shock of losing everything, and Tommy, who was just starting out to make his way in the world, promised his father that he would see that the funds which had been misused were replaced, though it took years of self-denial on his part. His mother says he has stuck manfully to his promise and has done everything possible to restore his father's honor, but it seemed such a hopeless task."

Mrs. Donovan paused for breath.

"Go on, mother," prompted Ann.

"Well, what do you think? Some of that mining stock has turned out to be valuable after all. There wasn't any gold in the mines, but they have found something else—tungsten, I believe it is called—that is worth nearly as much. Anyway, they can pay off all their debts and Tommy will know that his mother is well taken care of, even if he's away off in France. She said after he made sure he didn't waste a minute getting down to the recruiting headquarters."

Ann started for the telephone.

"Where are you going?" asked her mother, with the kindly inquisitiveness of those near and dear.

Ann looked around the cozy living room with a speculative eye.

"Tommy wanted me to call him up. But I wonder if we wouldn't rather stay at home than go downtown tonight? I'm kind of tired of the movies myself."

STOP HEADACHES BEFOREHAND

You never had a headache when you were well.

To keep well is to keep clean, inside.

To relieve headache, and to prevent it, keep the liver active and industrious and the bowels as regular as a clock.

Two generations of healthy, vigorous people have done this by taking one pill at bedtime, regularly—a larger dose when nature gives the warning.

Honesty and Carelessness.

There are so many ways in which to be careless with the things that belong to others. Most of us seldom think of these small sins of commission and omission. We would not, for anything in the world, knowingly trespass on the rights of others. Yet, day after day, because we do not think, we do things that are really destructive, and verge very closely upon dishonesty of act, if not intention. Dishonesty is an ugly word. But it is better to face the fact that the careless person is really the dishonest person, for only by admitting a fault can it be cured. Are you careless? If so, look to it that your carelessness does not work harm to yourself and to those about you.

Grandmother Gave It To Mother, Mother To Me, I To My Baby.

Read what Mrs. Wm. Gray, Jacquet River, N. B., has to say about Dr. Fowler's Extract of Wild Strawberry. She writes: "There is no medicine I know of that can come up with Dr. Fowler's Extract of Wild Strawberry. It has been in our house for forty years. My grandmother gave it to my mother, she to me, and I to my baby. For summer complaint it has no equal. I never miss a chance of telling my neighbours about it. I would not think it safe to go to the country without a bottle of it. It has saved us many a doctor's bill."

For the past 72 years Dr. Fowler's Extract of Wild Strawberry has been recognized by both the people and the medical profession as the greatest remedy known for all cases of diarrhoea, dysentery, cramps, colic, pains in the stomach, cholera infantum, cholera morbus, seasickness and all bowel complaints.

There are so many spurious "strawberry" preparations on the market today that it would be well for you to see that the name "Dr. Fowler's" is on every bottle that you buy.

Our guarantee that it will do what we claim for it stands behind every bottle. But the imitations—what is their record, where the guarantee?

HOME-MADE "PROBS."

How an Amateur Can Forecast the Weather.

Only the other day there died in Washington the man who a generation ago was known as "Old Probabilities," or more informally as "Old Probs." His real name was Prof. Cleveland Abbe — a dear little old gentleman, full of humor, whom everybody that knew him admired.

He was one of the most distinguished meteorologists of his time, and, while yet a comparatively young man, originated the publication of weather forecasts by the Government. They were issued as "probabilities" in those days—whence the title of "Old Probs," though the identity of their author was wholly unknown to the public at large.

Up to the time when "Old Probs" entered the field there was nothing better to rely upon for weather predictions than the widely circulated "almanacs," which, incidentally to boosting various patent medicines, gave notice many months in advance that "about this time" there would be snow, or perhaps a rainy spell. Such almanacs to-day are looked upon in rural districts as next door to infallible.

The almanac now, as then, always carries a picture of a man somewhat intimately dissected, whose vital organs are connected up in a diagrammatic way with the signs of the zodiac. It illustrates in this manner our close relationship with the cosmic scheme, the inference being that any disease we may have is properly to be referred to one bunch of stars or another.

One regrets to admit that an equal faith is not inspired by the forecasts of the Weather Bureau. Unlike those of the almanac, they are often wrong. But, happily, there are easy means whereby any intelligent person can make his own weather predictions, much more satisfactory than the broadcast guesses of the Government's scientists.

For instance, take a small frog and put him in a jar nearly half full of water. Set in the jar a little wooden ladder, so arranged that several of its round project above the level of the water. If fine weather be in prospect, the frog will climb up the ladder out of the water; at the approach of stormy conditions he will retire beneath the surface.

Nearly every dwelling in Canada, whether in city or country, has at least one thermometer; but a household barometer is a rarity. Barometers are expensive, but why not improvise one? You can do it by inverting a narrow-necked bottle in a quart jar half full of water. The height of the water in the bottle is an indicator of weather change. If it rises, goody weather is to be expected; if it descends, a storm may be supposed to impend.

The simplest of all apparatus for weather warning in a bunch of seaweed—any kind will do—hung up in the kitchen or the family living room. This is a device familiarly known to every housewife in fishing communities along our coasts. So long as the seaweed remains dry there is prospect of fair weather; when it becomes damp there is reason to expect a storm.

Familiar all over the world is the Swiss toy barometer that gives notice of storm or sunshine by the appearance of a little man or a little woman outside of a miniature house. If the prospect be of fair weather, the woman comes out; if of storm, the man.

The toy is really a fairly reliable weather prophet. Its mechanism is, of course, extremely simple, the two figures acting in response to the twisting piece of catgut, which contracts in dry weather and expands when there is moisture in the air, thus turning the little platform on which the manikins stand.

Pat O'Brien and the King.

Lieut. Pat O'Brien, the aviator who was shot down by the Huns, and who escaped by leaping from a train speeding thirty-five miles an hour, says in the American Magazine:

"The first two days I lived on the bread and sausage I had. After that, I got what I could from the fields and gardens; cabbage, sugar beets—raw, of course—and carrots! I think I must be the champion carrot eater of the world.

"Later, when I reached England, King George read the report of my experiences and gave me what I was told was the longest audience of the war, exactly fifty-two minutes. And he said to me then, laughingly, 'I don't suppose you're fond of carrots now?'

"'No,' I said, 'less than ever! And, seeing as I'm Irish, I never did like anything about them anyway—except the green of their top.'

"You know the color of a carrot comes pretty close to orange! Perhaps it was a stiff joke to make to the King of England, but he seemed to appreciate it."

Pat O'Brien comes from California, but he entered the Royal Air Service and received his training in Canada at Camp Borden.

The dyspeptic has thought only of the stomach when the real source of trouble is the Liver, Kidneys and Bowels. Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills thoroughly cleanse and purify the digestive and excretory system and in this way put the organs of digestion into splendid working condition. A little patient urging on of the organs when sluggish will restore the habit of healthful digestion.

HIS SWAN SONG HALF AN ALIBI

Ludendorff Tries to Explain His Failure.

NO LONGER INVINCIBLE

The Man Who Was Regarded as the Brains of the German War Machine Does Not Prove Convincing When He Attempts to Give Reason for His Defeat on the Marne.

ONE effect of the German defeat in the Marne salient has been to bring von Hindenburg back into the limelight. For some months past he has been in eclipse. He was said to be incapacitated. Ludendorff no longer needed his services as a stage war god, into whose wooden images the German populace was burning to drive gold and silver nails. But in this crisis he is welcome again at Grand Headquarters, where he gravely echoes the after-the-event wisdom of the present head partner in the reconstituted Hindenburg-Ludendorff firm.

Ludendorff has given the German newspaper correspondents his version of the Marne disaster. Of course, he didn't use the word disaster. Disasters happen only to the enemy. It seems that the grandiose fifth offensive failed only because "the enemy evaded us on July 15." How did they do it? Possibly because they didn't try to defend their outpost lines. That was hardly good sportsmanship. At any rate, they "evaded" annihilation and other things they were due for.

So it became clear to Ludendorff on the evening of July 16 that operations must be broken off. As a matter of fact, they weren't broken off until July 18. Then they stopped short because Foch's counter offensive intervened.

Foch's attack was reckoned with as likely to come on July 18, says Ludendorff. "We were prepared for it." If that is so, the German Grand Headquarters strangely neglected to transmit its expectation to the commanders on the German right flank. They knew nothing about it until after it was in full swing.

"By the afternoon of the 19th we were masters of the situation." By the afternoon of the 19th Ludendorff had secured his left flank below Soissons and had escaped envelopment. But a retreat to the Aisne was inevitable. So "it was conducted according to our regular plan."

It seems, on the whole, that the fifth offensive was arranged for the specific purpose of giving Foch a chance to crush the German right flank and compel a retirement from a salient which Ludendorff was tired of holding. In that case the world will agree with the chief quartermaster-general of the German armies that you can never catch him napping. Everything he does is in accordance with prearranged plans.

Ludendorff sat back, smiled inscrutably and agreed that the whole operation was managed with wonderful "economy." The troops are nearer their supplies—and nearer home. Everything was "planmasig" — the unfailing German alibi.

But what was the German stage war god really thinking? Probably that Ludendorff, in giving Foch a chance, had also meant to give him a chance. Next time if there is any alibi to be manufactured he will manufacture it himself.

All Found It.

The scene is a crowded bus in London. A soldier, back from the trenches, is sitting in a corner near the entrance and puts his hand into his pocket for his fare, and pulls out a shilling and some coppers. The bus jolts violently and, to the soldier's dismay, the shilling slips from his fingers just as lights go out, as they always do in London in these days when a bridge is being crossed. The passengers with one accord began to grope for the soldier's shilling. "Fraid it rolled off, mate," says the conductor. Then the lights go up again, and discover three passengers each holding out the shilling which they have found.

The day is immeasurably long to him who knows not how to value and use it.—Goethe.

A Story of Crucifixion.

Corpl. James Irving Parker, of Chicago, who recently returned from the western front, where he drove an ammunition truck for the French army, but who now is an enlisted man in the U. S. Signal Corps, relates a story of German atrocities culminating in the crucifixion of fifteen Canadian soldiers.

"We were moving forward in the Chemin des Dames drive last October on the heels of the fleeing Huns," says Corpl. Parker. "A crowd of truck drivers was billeted for a few hours' sleep in one of the French chateaus which the Huns, in their flight, had failed to destroy.

"We were congratulating ourselves on the excellence of our quarters when a poilu appeared and said in broken English, 'Americans, come with me.' We followed him up a broad, winding staircase and entered a room that must have been thirty feet square. On the walls of that room hung fifteen crucified Canadian soldiers. Five hung on each of three of the walls.

"Four spikes to a man were used in the crucifixion, one through each wrist and one through each ankle. The victims were thirteen privates and two officers, all in full uniform. There were no wounds on the bodies of the men other than those made by the spikes."

A Canadian regiment had been placed at this point of the Chemin des Dames sector about two weeks before to relieve the war-worn poilus, Corpl. Parker explained, and a few days before the drive thirty of them had mysteriously disappeared.

Parker, who is home on two months' leave after being gassed, is the son of James J. Parker, a real estate broker at 69 West Washington street, Chicago.

HE KNEW NO FEAR.

Calgary Soldier Has Been Awarded Victoria Cross.

The Victoria Cross has been awarded to Lieut. George Burdon McKean, Canadian infantry, aged 30. He enlisted at Edmonton as a private in January, 1915. He won the Military Medal and was wounded in 1916 and received a commission in May, 1917. He is still in France. His mother lives in Calgary. McKean's party was held up in a communication trench by a most intense fire from grenades and machine guns. Realizing this block unless destroyed might mar the success of the whole operation, McKean ran into the open, leaped over the blockhead on top of the enemy. When a man rushed at him with a bayonet McKean shot him through the body, then shot the man underneath him who was struggling violently. This gallant action enabled the capture of the position.

McKean's supply of bombs ran out and whilst waiting a further supply he engaged the enemy single-handed. On bombs arriving he fearlessly rushed a second block, killing two and capturing four and driving the remainder, with a machine gun, into a dugout, which was destroyed. This officer's splendid dash and bravery undoubtedly saved many lives.

Revolutionizing Salmon Industry.

Construction of power plants that will cost $6,000,000 and that will revolutionize the salmon packing industry in the whole Columbia river basin, are forecasted by application of McGowan (Wash.) packers for power development sites on the Deschutes river in Oregon.

Applications for 8,000 cubic feet of water rights in all have been filed, and plans have been prepared for two gigantic dams, one 118 feet high, 300 feet long at the bottom and 800 feet long at the top, and the other 236 feet high, 90 feet long at the bottom and 420 feet at the top.

Power generated by the water impounded behind these dams will be used to run salmon canneries and tinplate plants in which the cans will be made.

No Rice for Face Powder.

Rice is a food, not a frivolity, according to wartime classification. Therefore the French government has prohibited the manufacture of face powder from rice. This is the sad news flashed straight from Paris, that gay city which has previously led the world in the matter of vanities, as it now leads in the matter of valor. This report declares also that the women of France are flicking away daily on their powder puffs some 100,000 soldiers' rations of good rice.

Another Big British Advance

THE DIOCOURT-QUEANT LINE IS SMASHED

THOUSANDS OF PRISONERS IN NEW BRITISH DRIVE

General Haig's Force Have Advanced to a Maximum Depth of Four Miles on a Twenty Mile Front—Canadians in Thick of the Fighting.

LENS IS CAPTURED

LONDON, Sept. 3.—The British advanced four miles on a twenty mile front in the region of Buissy (east of Bapaume) this morning, it was learned authoritatively. They have reached a point west of Buissy and also hold Doignies, Velu, Berkincourt and Rocueigny.

Canadians Active.

LONDON, Sept. 3.— The Canadians have stormed the Drocourt-Queant line, Field Marshal Haig announced in his communication to-day. He also announced that British troops have entered Pronville, Doignes and Berkincourt, and that ten thousand prisoners were taken in this vicinity yesterday.

Lens Taken.

LONDON, Sept. 3.— (Bulletin Via Reuter's.)—The British have occupied Lens, Mulverghem, Queant, Tromville, Doignies, Velu, Berkincourt, and Rocguigny. This represents an advance to the maximum depth of four miles on a twenty mile front this morning.

The British captured ten thousand prisoners in yesterday's advance, and are taking more this morning. The Canadians are active in this new advance.

Many Villages Captured.

WITH THE BRITISH ARMY IN FRANCE, Sept. 3.—(By A.A.P.)—In heavy fighting last night behind the Drocourt-Queant line, the British are reported to have made progress on a front of thirteen thousand yards. The villages of Saudemont and Riecourt, more than a mile and a half beyond Dury, the capture of which was announced last night, are reported to have been taken to-day. The village of Etaing, two miles north of Drury, fell yesterday at about the same time as the British further south were capturing Villers-Le-Cagnicourt. These captures were effected after most bitter fighting.

Another Retirement.

LONDON, Sept. 3. — Newspapers here believe that the breaking of the famous Drocourt-Queant switch line means another big retirement by the Germans, as it was their strong defence.

Special to The Examiner:

LONDON, Sept. 3.—The British are in undisturbed possession of the Drocourt-Queant line, it was learned today. The enemy is hurriedly retreating southward in an effort to get beside the Wotan line, or such of it as is left.

Special to the Examiner:

LONDON, Sept. 3. — The British have captured Lens, Wulverghen, Queant and Tromville, it was learned authoritatively to-day.

Many Prisoners.

(By Lowell Mellett.)

WITH THE BRITISH ARMIES IN FRANCE, Sept. 3.—Fighting all along the Drocourt-Queant line continued favourable to the British to-day, according to all reports received at headquarters.

The British are progressing southeast of Gagnicourt. They are astride the railway west of Queant and east of Riencourt. The enemy is offering fierce resistance west and north-west of Queant.

Ten thousand Germans were taken prisoners during yesterday's fighting, besides many wounded.

MANY LIVES IN FLANDERS AREA

(By Lowell Mellett.)

WITH THE BRITISH ARMIES IN THE FIELD, Sept. 3.—In the northern part of the battle line, American troops are sitting in trenches on both sides of Ypres. Signs are everywhere visible in that region that the Germans in the north are preparing to make the best of a situation that is rapidly growing worse. Fires were observed last night at Armentieres, Warneton and other smaller towns in Flanders, lighting up the eastern sky.

IN UNDISPUTED POSSESSION OF STRONG FOE LINE

Interesting Situation Developing Along the Drocourt-Queant Line, Where Canadians Are Fighting and Where Big Retreat is Likely.

LENS EVACUATED

LONDON, Sept. 3. — The British have taken the city of Lens. The town of Queant also has been taken.

Lens was evacuated by the Germans, the British moving in. More than 10,000 prisoners were taken by the British yesterday. Additional prisoners were taken this morning.

In their push beyond the Drocourt-Queant line, the British have advanced to a point just to the west of Buissy, 2 1-2 miles north-east of Queant and occupied Pronville, a mile and a half south-east of Queant. The British also held Doignies, Velu, Bertincourt and Rocquigny, representing an advance to a minimum depth of four miles on a 20 mile front, effected this morning. In Flanders, British troops have captured the town of Wulverghem, two miles south-east of Kemmel.

Contrary to expectations, the enemy has not re-acted heavily with a view to the recapture of the Queant-Drocourt line, but has left the British in undisturbed possession of it. The British found Doignies and Velu unoccupied.

The situation in this part of the battlefield is said to be extremely interesting, but nothing more can be said for the moment.

Miss Stinson is the Greatest Woman Air Pilot in the World

Miss Stinson is a charming laughing little school girl with long black curls hanging down her back, and weighing but 80 pounds, but every ounce is fine American grit. She is diminutive and modest, and she is the greatest woman air-pilot in the world to-day.

She was born at San Antonio, Texas, 19 years ago, and has been making exhibition flights since she was fourteen; for several years she assisted her sister, Miss Marjorie, and her brother, Edward, in the Stinson School of Aviation located in San Antonio.

A year ago she made a tour of China and Japan, and made exhibition flights in all the principal cities, creating a sensation as the first woman aviator ever seen in that part of the world.

Miss Stinson now holds the world's records for long distance and endurance flights for men and women.

By attending the Peterborough Fair, Sept. 12th, 13th, and 14th, will in all probability be your only opportunity to see this daring girl, as she intends touring South America at the conclusion of her Eastern tour.

PARIS, Sept. 3.— The German retreat continues in Flanders and between Arras and Soissons.

Armentieres is directly threatened by Gen. Plumer's second army, aided by Americans, who are hot on the heels of Gen Von Arnim's fourth German army and Gen. Von Quast's sixth army. These are gradually yielding ground won at a tremendous sacrifice in the Hindenburg April offensive.

South of the Scarpe the British are driving on hourly, increasing the depth of the perilous pocket, at the bottom of which lies Queant, one of the main corner stones of the Hindenburg defence. Cambrai lies only ten miles east.

With Queant gone, Ludendorff will have a hard job to prevent disaster throughout this region. The fall of Riencourt and the capture of German positions on the high ground south of that village, have brought the British up against Queant, which they completely dominate at close range. Both here and northward as far as the Scarpe, the British are fighting over country which was not even reached during the Arras drive of 1917. They are threatening to roll up the Hindenburg line, which they have overrun to a depth of two or three miles.

Destroying Material.

Further south, between Peronne and St. Quentin, and in the direction of Noyon, flames redden the sky by night and great columns of smoke are visible by day, marking the German work of destruction in their continued retreating. The enemy is burning such stores as time will permit. The indications are that he hopes to get all his stores out and to fortify the country between Cambrai and Le Fere in the hope of preventing its capture by the allies.

Between Noyon and Soissons the Germans are fighting most stubbornly, but slowly and surely the French and Americans are battering their way forward. American troops are threatening enemy positions north of the Aisne. If their progress continues the German Crown Prince will be compelled to withdraw from the Vesle positions.

Gen. Mangin's left is advancing north-eastward towards St. Goban, further imperilling the Crown Prince's rear in this region.

All along the line from Ypres to Rheims, the British, French and Americans continue to play a tune to which Ludendorff must dance.

WATCH YOUR CHILD

Now that he has commenced school again it may sem too bad to have a child wear glasses all its life, but such is not always the case when their eyes are attended to in time. If you are at all doubtful, bring them to Dr. Racey, 410 George street.

HATS OFF TO THE NAVY

During the course of the war, the warships of the British Navy have been increased from four million tons to six million tons, a fact which explains why transports have been so well protected that of thirteen million men carried overseas only twenty-seven hundred have been lost on account of enemy attack.

The British Navy also has enabled the United States to export nineteen billion dollars of goods during the past four years—more than was exported in ten years before the war.

HOW LINE WAS WON

Germans Screamed With Fear When Canadians Reached Their Front Positions—Currie's Men Victorious After Terrific Fighting South of the Scarpe.

STORY OF THE VICTORY

(By Lowell Mellett.)
(Special to The Examiner.)

WITH THE BRITISH ARMIES IN THE FIELD, Sept. 3.—Thousands of German prisoners swarming down the roads like sheep, and crowding each other into the ditches along the sides, this afternoon told the story of Hindenburg's effort to hold the famous line below the Scarpe against the driving attack of the British.

The Germans, running before the first British assault like raw recruits, and reforming later only when masses of their own men came up in support, were screaming with fear as the British reached their first lines. Germans leaping out of their dugouts and throwing up their hands in surrender with the first appearance of the Canadians, were scenes witnessed early in the British attack.

Disheartened Captives.

Along the road paralelling the Scarpe a party of correspondents at noon met such masses of disheartened captives as have seldom been seen since the beginning of the great war.

"The war is over," said one.

"You mean that we win?" he was asked.

"Yes," he replied. "But we don't care. We want only peace."

Another asked if the British people were hungry, and when told that they were not," replied: "That is America's work." Regarding the work of the German submarines, he answered: "Unterseebotes caput," meaning that the submarines are done for.

Hard Fighting.

This does not mean that to-day's battle was simply a triumphant parade. On the contrary, some of the hardest fighting in months occurred before the important stretch of the Hindenburg line in this vicinity was crossed. The Germans threw in great masses of troops to fill the breaches in their line and at some points fought murderously, but the masses contained the elements of fatal weakness, including worn-out divisions who had fought so hard at Bapaume and Bullecourt. Great enemy masses are still coming up, and a great bat-

MOVING TO EAST

"Canadians, Admirably Assisted by British Troops, Carried All Before Them," Says Field Marshall Haig's Official Report.

NORE BRITISH GAINS

WITH THE BRITISH ARMIES IN FRANCE, Sept. 3.— The determined German resistance at the cross roads north of Villers-Le-Cagnicourt, taken by the Canadians yesterday, was overcome by the British this morning, and Haig's men are now shoving forward in the direction of Cambrai. The British are well inside the Drocourt-Queant line. So far as learned no organized counter attacks have been developed by the Germans, but on the eastern part of the British left determined opposition is developing.

What Berlin Says.

BERLIN, Sept. 3.—(Via London.)—South and east of Arras, the British have succeeded, with superior forces, in throwing back our infantry line on the north side of the Arras-Cambrai high road.

The Official Statement.

LONDON, Sept. 3.— Haig's official statement to-day says: "Unfettered by the strength of the enemy's defensives the Canadians, assisted admirably by British troops on this front, carried all before them. South of the Canadian corps, English, Scottish and New Zealand troops performed no less a gallant and arduous task in storming the junction of the Drocourt-Queant and Hindenburg systems. These defences were of the most formidable character, but our troops swept over and around them, encircling Queant from the north, with the result that this important pivot fell into our hands at night fall The tank torps again assisted materially in the success of those operations.

French Now Threaten the Chemin des Dames

Special to the Examiner:

(By John De Gandt).

PARIS, Sept. 3 (4 p.m.). — The French are biting into the western edge of the Chemin Des Dames, having reached Laffaux Mill (six and a half miles north-east of Soissons). The Germans are energetically defending their positions towards Loan. The German rearguard counter-attacked five times north of the Aisne without success.

FRANK JENNE Says:

I wish to extend a cordial invitation to the students of the Peterborough Business College to come into my shop and get acquainted.

More particularly do I wish the boys from out of the city to feel at home in my shop.

Whether you wish to make a purchase or not, you are always welcome.

TROUBLES IN RAILWAY SHOPS ARE CLEARED UP

Conference Between Labour Leaders and Sub-committee of Canada Railway War Board Has Resulted in Agreement being Reached.

GRIEVANCES RIGHTED

MONTREAL, Q., Sept. 3. — There will be no strike or lock-out in any of the railway shops of Canada.

The big cloud which has hung over all the railways of Canada since last April, and by which 30,000 workmen were directly involved, has been cleared away by a conference between the Labour leaders and a sub-committee of the Canadian Railway War Labour Board, and an agreement has been drawn up and signed, which gives to the men and women many of their demands, and paves the way for far friendlier working conditions in the future.

The demands of the Federal shop trades were for an eight-hour day, a minimum standard rate of wages for Canada, increase of the minimum wage in the west and a rise in the east to meet such an increase and also shorter working agreements.

The Railway War Board was represented in the negotiations by S. J. Hungerford of the C.N.R., Geo. Hodge of the C.P.R., and Robt. Patterson of the Grand Trunk Railway. The Federated shop workers by a committee of 50 from all over Canada.

The agreement arrived at grants the eight hour day, but so as to make the Saturday half holiday the men will work 8 1-2 hours five days of the week and 4 1-2 Saturday, making a total for the week of 47 hours as against 48 in the United States, and instead of 9 and 10 hours a day as previously worked in the railway shops of Canada.

The Night Work.

The night work will consist of 47 hours work, for which 50 hours' pay will be allowed in the main shops.

The delegates asked for the division of the men into three classes, with the following rate of pay: First class 75 cents an hour; second class, 63 1-2 cents an hour; third class or helpers 56 1-2 cents an hour. The wages in operation at the time the demand was made were. First class 43 to 54 cents; second class. 30 to 40 cents; third class, 25 to 30 cents.

The agreement gives first class 68 cents an hour; second class 58 cents; third class 45 cents, with certain graduations.

The agreement arrived at does away with the type of men called specialists and now the former specialist is capable of earning the full rate of pay of first class men, after four years' service, and after fulfilling certain conditions.

The new working agreement, according to the McAdoo award, which with its amendments has been accepted, provides for 30 days' notice on either side.

Progress Toward Laon.

Franco-American troops are progressing along the road towards Laon.

Further north they are filtering into German positions between the woods near Coucy Le Chateau and the lower end of Coucy Forest, North and east of this area the French have gained new ground in the direction of Guiseur, having carried their lines more than a mile across the Canal Du Nord.

In the region of Ham the roads behind the enemy lines are reported obstructed with transports and troops moving north-eastward. Prisoners taken by the French in this region assert that a retirement towards St. Quentin has already been organized. The choking of the roads indicates that it may have already begun.

Heavy Artillery Fighting.

PARIS, Sept. 3.—(Official.)—Artillery action on the Somme front and further south between the Oise and the Aisne reported to-day. The enemy made big raids along the Vesle river, but they were repulsed with heavy losses.

Most Important Yet.

FRENCH ARMY HEADQUARTERS, Sept. 3.—(Reuter's.) —General Mangin's advance between the Ailette and the Aisne is the most important so far. He has reached the Ailette, the Canal Du Nord and Bethancourt and has also advanced a mile to the south of Leuilly. His line now passes through the plateau of Bethancourt to the north of Crouy on the Soissons-Maubeque road. The centre of the plateau is now cleared of the enemy. Great fires are observed in the region of the Vaixaillon Valley to the north of Laffaux. These are probably enemy dumps. The French and Americans met around Juvigny the elite German Army Grenadiers and Prussian Guards, picked storming battle men and hardy mountain infantry men. They defeated them decisively, taking an enormous death toll of men from their ranks and sending great numbers of Guards to the rear.

Putting Pain in Spain.

It is beginning to look as if Germany had at last put enough pain into Spain to cause the land of hidalgos to take some action. Perhaps, after all, Spain will be able to tell her children that she did something during the great eleutherian war. — Vancouver Sun.

BRITISH NAVAL ACHIEVEMENTS.

Early next week the people of Peter...oro are to be given an opportunity ... showing their appreciation of the ...ork of the British navy, and the ...erchantile marine, by contributing to ...e Navy League's campaign. Much ...as been written in Canadian and ...ritish papers in praise of what the ...avy and the merchant fleet have ac...mplished. Here is an opinion of an ...merican contemporary, the New ...ork Herald, which says:

"In the Daily Chronicle of London, ...r. Harold Begbie declares that Brit...h ships and sailors saved the world ...d secured the freedom of the seas ...r all honorable nations by holding ...thin its harbours, by "containing," ...e British fleet. This pressure, this ...mpulsion, whose "silence when once ...ted becomes to the observer the ...ost striking and awful mark of the ...orking of sea power," was exerted ...n the first day of the war by the Eng...sh navy, and from that day to this ...e second greatest navy in the world have been reduced to a state of impotency, the oceans have been made free for peaceful commerce and the military victories of the mightiest war machine the world has known, have been rendered vain by a body of seamen less in number than the first expeditionary force landed in France.

Thus the modern forge of victory has come to depend more upon the resistless pressure of sea power, upon the hydraulic press rather than upon the hammer wielded by the forces of paganism, exemplified by the brutal German. Under this continuing pressure the war ships of Germany have been held behind their mines and under the protection of their shore batteries. Nine hundred German merchant vessels have been swept from the seas and the life of Germany has been driven behind locked doors. Millions of troops and unnumbered tons of supplies and munitions have been transported to the various seats of war, and because of the British fleet, working in perfect amity with the navies of its allies, one hundred and sixty millions of people in Central Europe have been denied necessities of human existence.

Since the beginning of the war the four million tons of the British fleet have become six millions, the one hundred and forty-five thousand seamen have grown to more than four hundred thousand, and every day besides carrying troops, ammunition and stores to its own ships, scattered over the whole world, the British fleet is defending eight thousand miles of Britain's coasts, is ceaselessly patrolling the six houndred miles of sea which stretch from Scotland to Iceland, and is watching unrelentingly the two hundred and ninety miles of the German littoral, from which in a moment of desperation, either the High Sea Fleet may come out, or its battle cruisers may attempt to sneak seaward to prey for a period—let us hope of brief duration—upon the commerce, the transports and the coasts of the allied countries.

In one place only does Mr. Begbie claim something more than the all around achievements of the joint fleets possibly justify, and this is his statement that British ships have been and are transporting from the New World to the Old "almost the whole of that vast host of fighting men which is likely to deal the last land blow to Kaiserism." It is true that at our entrance into the war British units made up the largest proportion of the vessels safeguarding and shepherding our troops across the western ocean, and admirable indeed has been their performance of this dangerous duty. But later the disparity decreased, so that to-day the vessels employed in this hazardous undertaking are drawn, if not equally, at least in nearly an equal proportion from both the American and British navies. When so much has been done this correction may be ventured.

EDITORIAL NOTES.

Canadians will hasten to congratulate the Australians on their gallant capture of Peronne. The preliminary operations, including the taking of Mt. St. Quentin, were among the most brilliant of the whole campaign.

There is no justification for singling out any of the elements of the British army for special praise. There has been glory for every one in the recent fighting, and English, Scots, Welsh, Irish, Australians, New Zealanders and Canadians have all had thei rshare.

The gains made by the Germans in the Ypres salient last spring cost thousands of Hun lives. And now the enemy is going back over the ground they won at such an enormous cost.

MORTORLESS SUNDAYS

In order to be prepared for a threatened shortage in gasoline for shipment overseas the United States Fuel Administration has laid down the request that the public in all States east of the Mississippi River should cease the using of all classes of automobiles, with a few named exceptions, motor cycles and motor boats on Sunday as a conservation measure. It is intimated that a prompt voluntary compliance with the request is the only thing that will prevent a manadatory order prohibiting the use of gasoline on Sunday. Even taxicabs and other motor vehicles for hire are included in the request and it is estimated that the measure will result in a huge saving "war necessities are being and will continue to be promptly and fully met," says a statement from the Fuel Administration, "but this the period of the year when the consumption of gasolene is at its highest and the increased domestic demands together with the extensive military operations in France, have rendered necessary for a limited period the adoption of safe guards against possible shortage."

The New York Herald endorses the plan in the following editorial reference.

"Owners of motor vehicles, motor boats and motor cycles are given an illustration of what war means by the Fuel Administration's establishment of motorless Sundays. The purpose is to conserve gasolene which can be put to much better use these days than in joy riding. A motorless Sunday will at least have the merit of being a distinct novelty. It will not be welcomed by the undertakers."

HEAD SEVERELY CUT IN DIVE AT INVERLEA

Mr. Wren Fallis was badly cut about the head while swimming at Inverlea Park yesterday afternoon. The water level was low and Mr. Fallis took a dive off the cement wall. He struck his head either on a sharp stone or part of root of a tree, making a deep gash extending from the side of his head to the crown. Sergeant Cooper, the caretaker, soon bound the cut together with linen bandages. Mr. Fallis resides on Rutherford avenue.

Mr. Fallis was attended to by Dr Morgan and later taken to Nicholls Hospital. The cut required six stitches to close it.

LANCASTER—LACHEUR.

A very pretty ceremony was solemnized in All Saints' Church on Monday morning, when Miss Louise Victoria Lacheur, youngest daughter of Mr. John Lacheur, 309 Rubidge street, and Mr. John B. Lancaster, of Toronto, were married by the Rev. Canon Davidson. The bride, attired in a becoming suit of brown, was given away by her father, and was unattended.

After the ceremony, the wedding party returned to the bride's home, where lunch was served, after which the happy couple left for a honeymoon trip. They will reside in Toronto.

Among the many beautiful presents received was a piano lamp from the office staff of the DeLaval Co.

OBITUARY

JOHN DONOGHUE.

The death occurred on Saturday, Aug. 31st, at the House of Providence, at the advanced age of 80 years, of John Donoghue. The funeral took place on Monday morning to Immaculate Conception Church, and St. Peter's Cemetery.

THE LATE R. J. MULLIGAN.

Lindsay, September 2. — The announcement of the death of the late R. J. Mulligan at his home in Omemee, on Saturday morning at seven o'clock, came as a shock to his host of friends in Lindsay and throughout the district.

The deceased sustained a paralytic stroke in February last, but recently his condition was such as to greatly encouarge his relatives and friends. The late Mr. Mulligan was born in Emily township about 58 years ago, and has resided in Omemee practically all his life. His parents predeceased him about ten years ago. For thirty years the deceased conducted a drug store in Omemee, and was prominently identified with the growth and the development of the village. He was prominent in all the activities and movements in the history of the village, and served in the capacity of Reeve for several years, and was also Warden of the County of Victoria. The late Mr. Mulligan possessed an affable and genial disposition. He was one of nature's noblemen and always wore his heart on his sleeve. It was a pleasure to meet and converse with the deceased on any occasion, his geniality, good nature and optimism winning scores of friends, who will miss the hearty hand shake and the sincerity and the warmth of his greeting.

The deceased was a Methodist in religion, and was prominent in the activities of the church, being a choir leader for a great many years. In politics he was a Conservative. The deceased leaves to mourn his loss his sorrowing wife (who was Miss Amy McCrae, of Omemee) a son, Lieut. C. Mulligan, Omemee; one sister, Mrs. George G. Adams, of Lindsay; and four brothers, George W., of Peterboro; Harry, of Rochester, and Dr. Walter and Howard, of Fort Coulonge, Quebec.

CLIFFORD ANDERSON.

The death occurred in Toronto on Friday last of Clifford Anderson, the little six-year-old son of Mr. and Mrs. William Anderson, formerly of 588 Aylmer Street, Peterborough.

The little fellow was in his usual health until three days before his death, which came as a great shock to his parents and friends.

SEASON NEARING END.

Many Cottages Closed at Stoney Lake on Monday.

Labour Day practically finished the Stoney Lake season for this year, outside of the hotels, which are still fairly well filled. Most of the cottagers closed their summer homes for the season last week, and yesterday Sheriff Hall, Mrs. Zack. Burnham, Mr. and Mrs. R. B. Rogers, Mr. Sherin, Mrs. Nelson, Mr. Dawson and Mr. Gordon Smith were a few who came down.

This morning, with the opening of the wild duck season, shooting was heard for the first time, and about 20 campers left for Long Lake.

PREACHED AT GORE'S LANDING

Rev. C. A. G. Spence Conducted Thanksgiving Services at Rice Lake Village.

Rev. C. A. G. Spence conducted the harvest thanksgiving services at St. George's Church, Gore's Landing, on Sunday. There were large congregations in both the morning and evening, including many of the summer visitors at the nearby resorts. Mrs. Bingham, of New York, the possessor of a rich contralto voice, sang at both services.

The biggest crowd of the season saw the afternoon game, which was a good battle until the closing stages, when both teams blew up. Riversides were not at full strength.

TROOPS WILL LIKELY BE QUARTERED HERE DURING THE WINTER

There are gathering signs of the re-occupation of the Armouries in the near future. The coal bunkers are being refilled, and there have been enquiries as to the possibility of officers securing apartments for the winter. Sergt. Rogers, of Kingston, was in the city over the week-end on the latter mission, and was assured that new apartments were being opened and would be available. There is every prospect that troops will be quartered in Peterborough during the winter months, but as yet there are no details of the plans of the military authorities.

GRATEFUL TO PETERBORO

The shadow of parting hung over the farewell meeting to Adjutant and Mrs. McElhiney at the Salvation Army Temple last night. The large congregation represented not only members of the local corps of the Army and its adherents, but also the citizens of Peterboro as a whole. There were many persons present who have been acquainted and associated with the departing officers in various public activities that have had the benefit of their assistance. His Honour Judge Huycke expressed the appreciation and good wishes of the general public in a eulogy that was tinged with feelings of the loss of two officers whose official work has been marked by splendid success and whose service as citizens was limited only by every day opportunities.

Their farewell to the soldiers and officers of the Army culminated in the little touching formality with which Adjutant McElhiney handed to his successor, Adjutant Buntin the bulky book of records of the Corps and the parting from the citizens was conveyed with the fullest acknowledgment of and gratitude for many countesies and generous assistance that could not be personally communicated.

Addresses were made by Sergt.-Major Blunt and Sergt.-Major J. J. Cunningham who spoke of many features of the work of Adj. and Mrs. McElhiney.

Band Secretary Hensley

Mr. E. Hensley spoke for the band In his thirty-two years' experience with the band he had never met an officer who had done so much for the band as had Adjutant McElhiney. When he came to Peterboro the band owed headquarters $683. That had been paid off, and over $6,000 spent since then. Of that sum the trip to England cost $4,997, including new instruments. Practically all that sum had been paid. Mr. Hensley recalled the booklet advertising Peterboro which Adjutant McElhiney had published and distributed in the Old Country. "It was the greatest advertising scheme Peterboro ever had" he declared.

A Presentation

Mr. Fred Gandy of the Finance Board spoke of the work of the departing officers ,particularly referring to Mrs. McElhiney's service. Many homes were happier and would always thank God because there had been such a women as Mrs. McElhiney, he said. He called Mr. Pammett to the platform, who in behalf of adherents and other friends presented Adjutant and Mrs. McElhiney with a cheque. It is contrary to the rules of the Salvation Army for officers to receive gifts from a corps. This was from adherents and other well-wishers and was gratefully acknowledged by Adjutant McElhiney.

Judge Huycke

Judge Huycke remarked that he didn't know whether to be glad or sorry. The sorrow of separation was brightened by the fact that Adjt. McElhiney was about to engage in a work for which he was pre-eminently fitted. "We shall miss his bustling energy as he wheeled about the city and we shall also miss the kindly, motherly face of Mrs. McElhiney going about our streets."

Much as the people of the Army were deprived of a successful officer, the citizens were likewise losing the co-operation of a zealous worker in all movements with objects for the public good. The soldiers always had a friend in Adjt. McElhiney, and during the past four years no man in Peterboro had stood more firmly for the interest of the Empire, for our Army and our cause than did Adjutant McElhiney.

His Honour said that in his official position the work of Mrs. McElhiney had frequently come under his observation. No one in Peterboro knew what she had done to lift up hearts that were broken and in despair, and to bring them again to new hopes and determination to lead good lives. Many homes have been sweetened and many persons will carry the effects and the remembrance of Mrs. McElhiney's kindly words and acts to their dying days.

"No words of mine can sufficiently express my appreciation of her work in Peterboro," His Honour concluded, "and I trust that this change in the officers will not affect the progress of the Salvation Army in this city." Judge Huycke also spoke of the splendid family of seven children of Adjutant and Mrs. McElhiney's who would also be missed."

Mrs. McElhiney's Thanks

Replying to the many expressions of appreciation and farewell, Mrs. McElhiney said that there were so many of whom she owed a debt of gratitude for unfailing help whenever she needed it, that she could not hope to thank them all personally. To Judge Huycke, the members of the Police Department and to many other citizens she was grateful for their kindnesses. Mrs. McElhiney said she wished to pay tribute to the work of Rev. Father Phelan for all he had done to help her in her work. "Of the clergy of the city he has been my greatest help adn only God knows what he has done."

Mrs. McElhiney said she wished to thank everyone. She appreciated the words of appreciation because she knew they came from lips that would scorn deceit. In all her work of twenty-six years she had been upheld in dark and trying hours by faith in God and the realization that all the work was for the saving of souls and the extension of His kingdom.

Adjutant McElhiney.

Adjutant McElhiney said that one could not have worked with the noble comrades with whom he had been associated for five years without being ennobled himself.

"I am a better man tonight than when I came to Peterboro. I attribute it to the grace of God and secondly to the kindly noble characters with whom I have rubbed elbows during those years."

The Adjutant thanked the governing board, the chief magistrates of the city, the patriotic Committee, ex-Mayor Rush and ex-Mayor Buller and the public at large for their co-operation and kindness that had always been accorded him. He also included the press of Peterboro in a warm appreciation "I am gratified that I have been recommended by Headquarters of the Salvation Army for my position. Their confidence inspires me and I hope that I may be of some service with the wounded and maimed men to whom I shall be appointed."

Adjt. McElhiney bade farewell to the Corps with expressions of sadness of parting, of recollections of the associations during his term of office that visibly affected many in the congregation. Finally he welcomed Adjutant Buntin and bespoke for him the heartiest support and sympathy of the corps and the people of Peterboro.

Sergt. Leggitt of Brailey's Sunday School paid his respects to the departing officers. It was brought out that Adjutant McElhiney had been converted by his wife and in turn he had converted Adjutant Buntin, than whom he could not have wished for the Corps a better successor.

Hebrew Merchants Will be Closed on Saturday, Sept. 7th

The Peterboro Hebrew merchants wish to announce that their stores will be closed on Saturday, September 7th, and Monday, Sept. 16th, in honour of the Jewish New Year.

Saturday, Sept. 7th, marks the beginning of the year 5679 for the Jews. The Jewish New Year is the first day of the seventh month (Tishri) when the ecclesiastical year began. In the Bible this festival is only known as "a day blowing the shofar" (ram's horn.) In the Synagogue this rite was maintained after the destruction of the Temple and is still universally observed. But the day was transferred into a Day of Judgment, the opening of a ten days' period of Penitence which closes with the Day of Atonement.

The local Hebrew community, in common with their co-religionists tall over the world, will celebrate the New Year by closing all business on Saturday, September 7th; and Monday, Sept. 16th. Special services will be held on these days, when special prayers will be offered for the success of the Allied Armies.

MAY UNITE FARMERS' CLUBS OF THIS COUNTY.

Meeting Will Be Held For That Purpose on Tuesday, Sept. 10th.

A joint meeting of all the Farmers' Clubs in the East Riding was held in the School-House at Indian River last night to consider the question of forming a county organization. This has been done in most of the counties in Western Ontario, and has been found to work out satisfactorily.

It was decided to call a meeting of the presidents and secretaries of all the Farmers' Clubs in the county for Tuesday afternoon next for the purpose of considering the question. It is expected that Messrs. Stonehouse and Barnaby, who are to address the meeting of the Milk Producers that evening, will be present to assist in the formation of the county organization.

tle must yet be fought, but none here doubts the ultimate result.

The British success in overcoming deep enemy wire barriers was due to the use of instantaneous fuse shells and tanks, despite the fact that the tanks were subject to a very heavy bombardment by anti-tank guns.

The Canadian Advance.

The Canadians went forward along their entire front, barely hesitating, except at Buissy. There, as well as in the city of Dury Hill, a sunken road had been filled with German machine guns. These positions held out until the Canadians' reinforcements arrived, when the enemy was swept out.

In the town of Dury a German major and his staff were captured, while several battalion commanders were taken in the same region.

A mounted German staff officer, followed by a number of men, was captured. The officer explained that he was looking for the first line.

Enemy Forestalled.

Prisoners from the third German reserve division declared they were brought from Maubeuge, with orders to attack Monday morning, but that the Canadians beat them to it. Others said they were ordered to hold their first line at all costs and that with the great depth of their defences, they expected to do so.

As an indication of the confusion the Canadian attack caused behind the German lines, some of the prisoners declared they were caught by their own barrage. Incidents of the day's fighting include that of a machine gun sergeant, who killed sixty Germans at Hendicourt, and a trench mortar battery which knocked out two machine gun nests and captured twenty men at onec place and a whole machine gun section at another.

Veterans at St. Peter's Cemetery

Decorated the Grave of Private Tucker, Who Died of Pneumonia Here.

The Great War Veterans paraded to St. Peter's Cemetery on Sunday afternoon, where they decorated the graves of Private Patrick Tucker, of the 93rd Battalion, and of Gunner Richard Boyle, a veteran of the South African War. A large number of the returned soldiers mustered at the Armouries and, headed by their new band and their officers, including Col. Johnston and President Staunton, they made the long march to the cemetery, where they placed their floral tributes. The occasion served incidentally to introduce the Veterans' band to the sections of the city through which the route extended, and the impression they made was one of complete satisfaction and of hope that the returned musicians will remain a permanent organization.

At the request of the association, Rev. Father Phelan spoke to the Veterans and to the civilians, who numbered at least twelve hundred persons. He commended the action of the Veterans in paying a tribute to those comrades who, though they died here, had enlisted for service overseas, and, if necessary, the supreme sacrifice. It was becoming of the returned men that they should honour their dead comrades, the numberless ones who had died overseas, and those who had passed away at home. Father Phelan spoke of the outstanding qualities of the soldier, his high sense of duty to his King and country, his spirit of self-sacrifice. There was no body of men so unselfish and unswerving in their duties to their country than the soldiers. Those who have died should be held in the highest respect, and to the returned men was due an everlasting debt. Father Phelan expressed the hope that the Veterans' Association would flourish. The occasion offered a reminder of man's common destiny. Death awaited every man. Its chief features were uncertainties of time, place and circumstances, a thought that should keep us always ready and prepared to die.

Father Phelan remarked that although there was only one grave at St. Peter's Cemetery from the congregation of St. Peter's Cathedral more than three hundred men had enlisted, and many of them were laid away in their last sleep beneath the poppies of Flanders fields. Father Phelan prayed for the soldiers overseas in the trenches and for the dead, and Bandmaster Hughes sounded the last post.

A Y.M.C.A. HUT IN FRANCE

By LIEUT. R. S. M. STURGES.

A few weeks ago I took up my duties as a worker in one of the busiest Y.M.C.A. huts at the port of —— in France.

The first day was a somewhat alarming experience. I found myself behind the counter in a hut crowded to its utmost capacity with khaki-clad figures. For a few seconds I stood still taking it all in. There were men from almost every regiment in the British Army; war worn veterans, old in experience rather than years, rubbed shoulders with new arrivals, just fresh from home; some were looking forward to the delights of leave in Blighty; others had before them the prospect of a life as yet unknown. It was a mixed multitude constantly changing from day to day, almost from hour to hour.

The canteen appeared to be a universal store, supplying every possible need of the British soldier. On all sides I heard requests for tea, cakes, candles, chocolate, tobacco, cigarettes, bootlaces, "Soldier's Friend," Worcester sauce, tinned fruits, and so on without end. To a newcomer like myself, the babel of voices was utterly bewildering, and I wondered how I would ever learn the different prices of these heterogenous articles, and where each one was to be found when wanted. Rousing myself to action, I approached the big urn and devoted myself to the impossible task of satisfying the insatiable demand for tea—which is truly called the British soldier's drink. My first efforts were very slow and methodical in comparison with the ambidexterous agility of my predecessor, who left the tap continually running while he whisked empty cups beneath its flow with one hand, and with the other arranged them as they were filled on a tray, ready for the customers, and this without spilling one drop or scalding himself with the boiling water.

After what seemed a few minutes of such work—though it must have been fully an hour—I plucked up courage to leave the protection of the tea urn and to inquire of other soldiers their various wants. I found that I had much to learn. Besides the list of prices, which I was soon able to reel off as to the manner born, I had to acquire the difficult art of salesmanship with its virtues of patience and tact in the face of a volley of requests all demanding attention at the same time. For, above all, customers must not be disappointed; they have exchanged their money for tickets of a certain value at the door, and in exchange for the tickets their wants must be satisfied. Thus should a soldier come to me with a request for chocolate, tobacco and matches, when all of these articles have been just sold out, I must find him three other things which will do just as well. Patience again is necessary when dealing with the slow deliberate customer of uncertain mind who keeps a long queue waiting while he compares the respective merits of a packet of biscuits and a slice of bread and butter.

Are Prone to Sentiment.

The British soldier is very prone to sentiment, if one may judge by the frequent demand for motto cards, of which a supply is kept at the canteen. These mottoes consist for the most part of terms of endearment addressed to the loved ones at home, such as "Heart to Heart, though far Away," and "Good-bye my Own True Love." Our American allies are also good customers in this respect, though their choice in mottoes is more distinctive and original; the following is a typical example, "Good-bye Ma." "Good-bye, Pa." "Good-bye Mule, with your old He-Haw!"

At 2 p.m., the "bar" is closed and we rest from our labours until 5. The rest of the hut, however, remains open and an official is always on duty to attend to the various wants of the soldier in the library and the writing rooms. In the writing room pens, ink, paper and envelopes are provided, and the stock must constantly be replenished, for such an opportunity of writing home in comfort, with all the accessories to hand, is not missed by the soldier. The library, too, is never empty, and there is a continual demand for every kind of literature. I must confess that I never guessed what the British soldier read. It is no uncommon thing to be asked for Shakespeare, or George Eliot or even for Browning's poems. Good novels are always in demand, in particular those of adventure. A great favorite, for example, is "The Prisoner of Zenda."

Men from all over the World.

Y. M. C. A. huts vary much in character. In base towns where a large number of Army Service Corps, Cooks, or Royal Engineers are stationed, the clientele of the hut is permanent and constant. Other huts situated as mine is, on the highway to the front, have a floating population; men come and go constantly, and there are new faces every day. One gets in touch with men from every corner of the world; men from Vancouver, Melbourne, Cape Town, to say nthing of Edinburgh, Glasgow, Dublin and London. They have all their own peculiarities, the various little shades of character which go in the mass to form a comprehensive idea of that magnificent person, the British soldier. But the floating population, with all its interest, has for the observer an aspect that is tinged with melancholy. Friendships are made only to be severed, for it is impossible to avoid making friends with the British soldier even within the space of a few hours. So it is constantly my lot to stand at the roadside and watch my friends of the last two or three days, marching off with their faces set towards the distant rumbling of the guns, and to listen to the refrain of their latest and most popular marching song, the absurdity of which seems by contrast to accentuate my sadness—though the words are ridiculously appropriate to the occasion—

"Good-byee,
Don't cryee,
Wipe the tear, baby dear,
From your eyee."

It is strange that it should be those left behind in comfort and security who need consolation, and stranger still that that consolation should be offered by the very men who are setting out to meet the miseries and dangers of war.

Voice of The People

To the Editor of the Examiner:—

Dear Sir,—I would be grateful to you if you would publish in your paper (daily edition) the following article.

To whom it may concern—In letters received from the people of Warsaw and vicinity I have been informed that rumors have been circulated to the effect that Regt. No. 195630 Pte. T. A. Cooper, formerly of the 93rd Battalion has returned to Canada and that during the period of his stay overseas had never seen active service in the front line in the well known country FRANCE, of which the Warsaw slackers have such great fear.

In regard to the above I wish to inform the citizens of Warsaw that Pte. Cooper, T. A., accompanied by myself, came overseas with the 93rd Peterboro Overseas Battalion and after a short period of necessary training left England for France on Sept. 15th., 1916 and landed in Le Havre the following day and after a stay of 8 days to complete training joined A. Company of the 19th Battalion in the front line on the Somme Front, and that Pte. Cooper remained with this unit till on or about Nov. 30th 1917 a period of about 14 months.

In conclusion I wish to state that, had some of the Warsaw slackers who are of enlistable age and also some who are 21 years and who have sworn to be only 19 yers, enlisted voluntarily with Pte. Cooper and done their bit in the firing line they would have reason to be proud citizens of Canada at present instead of being slackers and shirkers of not only their duty as loyal British citizens but also of the Military Service Act.

I am sir,
Yours truly,
Sergt. N. E. Crowe.

Hun Torpedo Smashed Boats

Survivor Picked Up Ship's Dinghy and Was Saved.

When the British steamer "Daleby" was torpedoed without warning off Cape Clear, 26 British seamen, men of the Mercantile Marine, lost their lives. How the Huns make war on non-combatants is strikingly illustrated in the following narrative.

She was struck twice, the second torpedo blowing up all the life-boats and causing her to sink immediately. The last man to leave the ship dived off as she was sinking. The submarine then came to the surface and circled around him, but no attempt was made to pick him up. Afterwards he noticed the ship's dinghy floating a little way off, and swam towards it. The wind, however, was behind him and kept blowing the boat away, so that he did not reach her for two hours. Having baled her out, he returned to the scene of the disaster, where he managed to pick up a fireman, who had been wounded in the head and was unconscious. He revived this man and together they started rowing for land, although the fireman was not able to do much work. They were at sea in the dinghy for 24 hours, when they were picked up by a steamer, having rowed 30 miles. Through the sinking of the "Daleby" 26 men perished.

No provision is made for the dependents of these 26 men by the Government, so it has devolved upon the Navy League of Canada to appeal to the people of Ontario during "Sailors' Week." The Peterborough campaign will take place at the beginning of next week. Remember the sailors.

Fifteen Pound Lunge Caught

Mr. Richardson and Mr. Copping, of the Peterborough Canoe Co., while trolling between the upper end of Big Island and the mainland, on the Kawartha Park side, caught a fifteen (15 lb.) pound 'lunge last Saturday afternoon.

The fish fought viciously and was only quieted after he had been landed in the boat, by the strenuous use of a boat stretcher in the hands of Mr. Richardson.

The Toronto Markets

Toronto, Sept. 3. — Trade this morning was very quiet in all lines of live stock, and prices were about steady. There was a good run of cattle and prices remained steady with Thursday's. Hogs were unchanged at $19.50, and calves were strong. Lambs were weaker. Receipts this morning amounted to 41 cars, 697 cattle, 154 calves, 432 hogs and 318 sheep. Export cattle $14 to $15.50. Meeting Your Fall Needs

The beginning of a new season finds this store splendidly prepar ed to meet your needs. This has been a difficult thing, to accomplish, we admit. Never before has such effort been required to assemble merchandise in sufficient variety and quantity to meet the demands of the big store's customers. But perserverance with careful and sys tematic buying on the part of all our department heads, has won out, and we begin the new season with stocks that compare favorably with the past.

In all our buying, "quality" has been the first consideration. Noth ing that failed to measure up to the high standard for which this store's merchandise is renowned, was given a place in our orders, for we realize that "quality" counts more than ever to-day.

Therefore, our customers can plan their fall purchases with the c onfidence that, as in the past, this store's showings will fully equal their highest expectations in variety, in quantity, in quality.

We invite you to see the display of new merchandise.

German Raids Repulsed by U.S. Troops

Special to the Examiner:

(By Webb Miller.)

WITH THE AMERICAN ARMIES IN FRANCE, Sept. 3.— Two strong German raiding attacks between Bazoches and Fismes, near Chateau-Du-Dieble,. were repulsed by Americans yesterday.

Shortly after midnight the enemy set down a heavy barrage and in the clear starlight American outposts soon saw the Germans coming over the top. Opening up with machine guns and rifles, the Americans quickly broke up the attack before it reached our lines. Then, while the Germans were skeltering back to their own lines, the American artillery backed down a barrage in their midst, inflicting heavy casualties.

Within halt an hour, the enemy reformed his columns and re-attacked at the same place. American snipers and machine gunners thinned out the advancing ranks so rapidly that the unwounded Germans fled.

SOME WAR EPITAPHS.

LONDON, Aug. 24.—For the proposed national war museum here, a collection of war epitaphs is being made. Here is one from a British graveyard in France:

"When you go home tell them of us and say
'For your to-morrow they gave their to-day.'"

From the graves of men who went down at the battle of Coronel, the following is taken:

"If life's best prize be to end life well
Then envy us; we died at Coronel."

From a war memorial in an English city:

"These in the glorious morning of their days
For England's sake lost all but England's praise."

The following is an epitaph for soldiers who died in the first battle of Ypres:

"When Might in scornful millions came arrayed, Here a few English stood, and he was stayed."

ADVICE IN USE OF CLUTCH

The person who habitually slips the clutch in use is courting danger. He increases the wear tenfold, so that finally it will hardly hold at all.

The purpose of the clutch is to connect the engine to the transmission and to disconnect it, at the will of the operator. This is necessary, particularly for shifting gears, to prevent grinding or stripping. When allowed to engage, it should always be done gently, so as not to break some part of the transmission. This caution applies particularly to the low speed, when starting the car from a standstill, as the strain is then excessive. As the clutch is engaged the accelerator pedal is depressed slightly to give the engine sufficient power to carry the load. As the clutch takes hold it must do so smoothly, speeding up gradually until it moves at the same speed as the fly-wheel. It is evident from this that the clutch slips first and holds afterward.

Slipping in this manner is a necessary evil, causing the lining to wear out in time. The length of time may be long or short, depending on the driver. One of the most serious faults is to drive with the feet on the clutch and the brake pedals. The clutch is partly released by this practice, causing almost constant slipping, and the car will lack speed. To overcome this the driver feeds more gas, causing the engine to overheat and also wasting gasoline.

Intentional slipping is usually due to a disinclination to shift gears. The car may be approaching a block in the traffic which will probably open if it does not arrive too soon. If throttled down too far the engine will stall. If shifted to second speed it may cause delay, and many drivers dislike to shift gears apparently for no other reason than that they dislike it, forgetting that gears were placed on the cars for just such occasions.

A third method is to allow the car to coast by throwing out the clutch and then engaging it again. This gives an intermittent motion to the car to which drivers object, but it is nevertheless superior to the method of slipping the clutch, driving the car at a sped intermediate between high and second. This should never be done; either stay in high and stop when the obstruction is reached or else drop into second gear.

Another example of slipping the clutch is where the driver tries to take a hill on high gear and finds he cannot quite do it. Instead of shifting to second speed he crowds the engine all he can and then slips the clutch slightly. Another practice to be condemned is starting on second speed. The first speed is provided for just such use and it strains the mechanism severely, besides wearing the clutch, to start habitually in second speed.

E TO CULL THE PULLETS

ard Poultrymen Should Soon Pick Their Winter Layers

ill soon be time for backyard y keepers to take account of flocks and decide what old re worths keeping, and which ir pullets will likely lay enough hrough the Winter to pay for eep and give a profit. The De- ent of Agriculture has made ob- ions at its experimental poul- rd at Beltsville, Md., that will great use to the amateur, and ularly to the novice, who keeps few hens and has not the o give scientific study to their It has been found that pullets erage size for their varieties their adult weights, at which they may be expected to begin ying, at varying ages. Thus a Wyandotte, 5½ pounds at 26 a Rhode Island Red, 4½ s at 26 weeks, and a White rn 3¼ pounds at 26 weeks. ets of these breds and those of ponding type and weight, that the weights given early in Sep- r, will begin laying in October ditions are favorable. The two ions which most commonly de- g production from such pullets ange to Winter quarters and ge of feed.

ideal way to manage laying is to have suitable houses at ity, with other yards or rang- ted to the flock of layers oc- he same quarters all their liv- pullets must be moved from the rs they have occupied during owing season, every effort be made to make the change le disturbing to them as pos-eneral it is desirable that pul- in their Winter houses three r weeks before they are expec- ay. But if pullets are on good and placing them in Winter rs would make it necessary to em on Winter rations several earlier than on the range, it better to leave them out until r. Then, if they are moved and carefully, and special at- n is given to making them rtable and contented, the e may have only slight effect production.

ther the change is made be- after laying begins, gentle ng and good treatment will go ward offsetting the unfavorable of moving. In reality it is not the change, but the way the change is made. Rapid and rough handling is bad, and a little extra time and care in moving pullets makes a difference of weeks and sometimes months in egg production.

To change pullets from one coop to another, whether the pullet is laying or not, have the new home ready in every detail. It should be clean, the floor covered with litter, all nests and feeding and watering equipment ready for use, with a feed of scratch grain in the litter, and the drinking vessel filled with water.

Move the pullets after dark. If only a few birds are to be moved and the distance is short, the best way is to carry them two by two ,one under each arm, the legs being grasped by the thumb and fingers and the breast and body of the bird resting on the hand and wrist .In this position the bird feels secure and safe and well treated. When the number of birds and the distance make this method laborious, a box or coop should be used ,the birds being lifted carefully, one by one, from their places on the roosts to the box. The birds should not be crowded, and should be taken with the same care from the box on arrival at the new location, where they should be placed on the floor near the rear of the pen.

The first thing the hens will know about their new home will be that, as soon as they can see, they find feed and drink there. With provision made for litter and nests, there is no occasion to enter the pen to do anything that in the least disturbs the birds. Every visit to them the first day or two should be for the purpose of doing something which even hens will recognize as for their welfare With this treatment, the effects of change are not great. It is a little trouble, but it pays.

When there is no snow on the ground pullets ought to get a large part of their fed by foraging. To find whether they require more is to observe whether they find feed enough to keep them busy most of the time, and then to test them further by seeing how much they eat heartily in the morning, and then go foraging, and also how much they eat just before going to roost at night. Pullets that forage well and have the opportunity to get plenty of green food, worms, and bugs can not be overfed by giving them what grain they will eat up clean. Careful feeders learn just how much their flock will take and so avoid waste while keeping the birds full fed.

Pullets in confinement should have the same ration they will have in the Winter, and be liberally supplied with vegetable feeds. Liberal use of these makes it possible to feed grains heavily, to promote egg production, and yet keep the birds in the best physical condition. A good wartime standard ration is:

Mash—Two parts cornmeal, one part bran, one part middlings, one part ground oats; one part meat scrap or fishmeal. Scratch Feed—One part cracked corn, one part heavy oats. Green Feed— Cabbage, sprouted oats, or any available green vegetable.

However poultry keepers may plan to hatch all their pullets early, it always happens that a good many pullets are not nearly grown in September, or even by the 1st of November. Obviously these will never make early Winter layers. They may make profitable layers, though not likely to pay as well as the earlier hatched hens. A Plymouth Rock pullet that is five motnhs old in the early part of September and weighs less than four pounds is not promising material for a Winter layer: a Wyandotte or Rhode Island Red pullets that is five months old and weighs under three pounds is not a desirable bird to keep; a Leghorn that is four months old and weighs less than two pounds should also be clased as a cull, and used for the table. A pullet that is worth good care and full rations all the time. A pullet that is not considered worth keeping should be eaten or marketed as soon as she is eatable.

WHEAT HARVESTING PROBLEMS SOLVED BY GOVERNMENT

Organization of Farm Labor Gives Unprecedented Results in Gathering Crops

Organization of mobile farm labor of the West this year resulted in harvesting the wheat crop without calling in outside assistance.

This mobile army now is going into Canada to assist in harvesting the great wheat crop of that country. Although labor on the farms was depleted, this is the first time since the wheat crop became a vital factor in the food supply of the nation that harvesting has been accomplished without calling in outside aid.

The manner in which this remarkable feat was accomplished in told in the following statement by the Department of Labor:—

"Intensive organization of the field forces of the United States Employment Service of the Department of Labor and the Department of Agriculture and the use of emergency community workers to supplement a mobile force of harvesters accomplished a task that last spring was characterized by uninformed as virtually impossible. Final figures are not yet available, but the Kansas wheat crop alone is estimated at approximately 100,000,000 bushels.

"The fact that bumper crops were produced, that the wheat ripened at the same time in various sections of the State and that there was a shortage of regular farm hands indicates the extent of the service performed by the offices and agents of the employment service and the agents of the Department of Agriculture, who worked in close co-operation during the cutting season.

"Of the farmhands engaged in the Western harvest more than eighteen thousand men, or moer than one-half the number of emergncy harvesters used, were placed on farms by the United States Employment Service, and directed northward from Southern Oklahoma through the Dakotas to the Canadian border by the service. A. L. Barkman, at Kansas City, Kan., as assistant to the Director General of the Employment Service, acted as generalissimo of this- har

"In addition to its regular offices, the employment service has a score of temporary offices, and had the help of farmers' organization, chambers of commerce, banks, employers, local branches of the State Defence Councils and other bodies.

"The class of harvest labor used this year was generally higher than that of previous years. There was little of the farmer hobo labor, while many retired farmers dooned jeans and went into the field, and hundreds of busines and professional men closed their desks afternoons and harvested on nearby farms until dark.

"Officers in charge of the local offices of the employment service worked early and late to keep the harvets units full manned and moving. H. D. Brown, examiner in charge of the temporary office at Wellington, Kan., for instance, made it a point to keep in touch with the conductors of all passenger trains passing through that city, and as a result transient farm hands were induced to stop off and prevented from going to communities already supplied.

The mobile force of harvesters is now working across the border into Canada to help the Dominion farmers cut their wheat, in accordance with the agreement between the Department of Labor and the Canadian authorities. It will return this fall in time for the corn cutting."

REVIVAL OF THE BOY SCOUTS' ASSOCIATION WILL BE UNDERTAKEN

Since the formation of the troop of Boy Scouts at St. Alban's Mission, Brownton, local interest in the movement has been re-awakened and many leading citizens who have the boy's welfare at heart have been asking why the association which at one time flourished here has apparently sunk into oblivion. The reason may probably be found in the fact that many of the leaders, scoutmasters and the older scouts themselves have reponded to the call of King and Country, and men willing to fill their place have not been found.

On account of the interest shown the Rev. C. A. G. Spence, who is acting scoutmaster of St. Alban's Boy Scouts, is arranging a public meeting at the end of September to which all interested in work among boys are heartily invited, and the co-operation of the clergy of all denominations, school teachers, Sunday School teachers and leaders of boys organizations is solicited.

Mr. H. G. Hammond, the Provincial Secretary of the Boy Scouts Association will address the meeting and other speakers will include Capt. Burnham, M.P., Mr. Gillespie, M.P.P., and Mr. Joseph Wearing, M.A.,

Fuller particulars will be announced later. To those not conversant with the principles of the Boy Scout movement it will be interesting to learn that "the aim of the association is to develop good citizenship among boys by forming their character-training them in habits of observation, obedience and self-reliance—inculcating loyalty and thoughtfulness for others—teaching them services useful to the public and handicrafts useful to themselves—promoting their moral and physical development and hygiene.'

One cannot close his eyes to the disagreeable fact that the boy of today between the ages of twelve and eighten left to his own devices is deteriorating morally, due in a large measure to the absence of the father's influence and authority. The "teen" age is a difficult age to understand and appreciate under the most favorable circumstances and environments; it is much more so under present social and home conditions. The Boy Scout movement will help to restore the moral and mental equilibrium of the boy at this critical time of his life therefore Boost the Boy Scouts.

When a man wants to find fault he is willing to spend all his time looking for it if necessary.

Two Big Railroad Men

Lord Shaughnessy, President of the Canadian Pacific Railway, has issued the following circular, dated Aug. 14th:—

"Mr. Geo. M. Bosworth, Vice President of the Company, will retire Sept. 1st, proximo, to become Chairman of the Canadian Pacific Ocean Services, Limited, and the Directors have appointed Mr. William R. MacInnes, Vice-President, to succeed him.

"Mr. MacInnes will have charge of all matters connected with the Company's Traffic Department, and will perform such other duties as may be assigned to him."

(Signed) SHAUGHNESSY,
President and Chairman.

The new position occupied by Mr. George M. Bosworth is a natural result of the growth of the shipping interests of the Canadian Pacific system, which has now in its owned and chartered ships one of the largest mercantile fleets operated by any single corporation, a fleet which is actually greater to-day than it was at the outbreak of the war. So great indeed have these shipping interests become that they could no longer be considered a side issue, and Mr. Bosworth, according to an announcement of the Directors of the C. P. R., will henceforth devote the whole of his time to this important branch of this great transportation system.

William R. MacInnes, who has been appointed Vice-President of the Canadian Pacific Railway, in charge of Traffic, is a son of the late Senator Donald MacInnes, and Mary Amelia daughter of Sir John Beverly Robinson, Bart., C.B., and was born in Hamilton, Ont., on June 7th, 1867. Senator MacInnes was for many years a Director of the Canadian Pacific Railway, and was closely identified with its inception and growth. Educated at private schools and at Marlborough College, one of the leading public schools in England, Mr. W. R. MacInnes returned to Canada to enter the service of the Canadian Pacific Railway as a clerk in the Purchasing Department. Since that time he was consecutively appointed: solicitor's office, 1885-1886; general traffic manager's office, 1886-1887; chief clerk to general traffic manager, 1887-1896; general agent, freight department, Canadian Pacific Railway, and agent, Canadian Pacific despatch, Chicago, Ill., 1896 to 1899; during same period he also represented Minneapolis, St. Paul and Sault Ste. Marie Railway and Duluth, South Shore and Atlantic Railway; general freight agent lines west of Lake Superior, 1899-1901; assistant freight traffic manager western lines, 1901-1903. On January 1st, 1903, he was appointed freight traffic manager of the C. P. R. His election as President of the Canadian Freight Association followed two years later, and in all matters pertaining to traffic on the North American Continent his high ability has been widely recognized.

He is a member of the Mount Royal, St. James', Forest and Stream, Montreal Hunt, Back River Polo, Montreal Jockey, Montreal Racquet, Royal Montreal Golf, Winter, Toronto (Toronto, Ont.), and the Manitoba (of Winnipeg) Clubs, and is also a member of the Art Association Society of Montreal.

In October, 1916, the Bank of British North America created a Canadian Advisory Committee, consisting of three members, one of whom is Mr. MacInnes, the other two members being Sir Herbert B. Ames and W. R. Miller.

Mr. MacInnes was married on January 7th, 1895, to Margaret Fisher Cross, daughter of the late Hon. Alexander Cross, Judge of the Court of Queen's Bench in Montreal, and they are the parents of one son, Donald Alexander, and three daughters, Julia Mary, Evelyn Margaret Robinson, and Emma Strachan MacInnes.

Mr. Geo. M. Bosworth was born at Ogdensburg on Jan. 27th, 1858, and he was educated there. He entered the railway service of the Ogdensburg and Lake Champlain Railway in 1875, becoming General Freight Agent of that road in 1881. In 1882 he joined the Canadian Pacific Railway as Assistant General Freight Agent of the Ontario and Quebec Lines. After various promotions he became Freight Traffic Manager of the entire system, and in December, 1901, was appointed 4th Vice-President in charge of Traffic. Since 1910 he has been Vice-President of the Company.

He took a particularly active part in the building up of the shipping interests of the Company, and on the formation of the Canadian Pacific Ocean Services, Ltd., took charge of that subsidiary company, of which he is now appointed Chairman. Mr. Bosworth is a Director of La Banque Provinciale, the Dominion Dry Dock Company, and the Crown Trust Company.

He is also a member of St. James' Club, the Canada Club, the Montreal Hunt Club, the Royal St. Lawrence Yacht Club, the Lachine Boating Club, the Canadian Camp Club, N.Y., and the Century Club, Ogdensburg, N.Y.

Mrs. Bosworth is a daughter of W. D. Birchall, of Montreal.

British Character Rather Than Wealth Has Made the Nation Great in the World

Sermon by Rev. F. E. Malott to the Orangemen of the City at Trinity Church on Sunday Evening—Memorial Service to Fallen Members of the L.O.L.

80,000 AT THE FRONT

Members of the various Loyal Orange Lodges of the city to the number of 160, attended the evening service at Trinity Methodist Church on Sunday, the 1st inst., where they listened to a sermon by the Rev. F. E. Malott, the new minister of Trinity Church. The service was a Memorial Service for the men of the local lodges who have fallen during the past four years.

Mr. Malott took as his theme "The Secret of Britain's Greatness," basing his sermon on two texts, Ezekiel 22, 30, and I. Corinthians, 16-13.

Many years ago an article appeared in "The London Times" on "The Political Supremacy of Great Britain" in which this sentence occurred: "More than any agency, it is the cheapness and abundance of our coal which have made us what we are." A similar article in "The Daily Telegraph" contained this statement: "Civilization is the economy of power and English power is coal." Mr. Malott called attention to John Ruskin's comment on these two statements, and said that while he did not think Mr. Ruskin's views on England's industrial development were sound, yet he agreed with him that Britain's greatness and her political supremacy depend upon the character of her manhood and not alone upon her wealth. "Britain is great," he said, "because she has always had men to stand in the breach in the great crisis of her history." He described the British Empire as a group of free nations, bound together by sentiment, by common interests and ideals, and by kindred institutions. But this "Ramshackle Empire," as the Kaiser was pleased to call it, was too strongly bound together for the German Army to break it.

Mr. Malott spoke of four qualities that, among others, characterize the men who, in the past, made Britain great and who to-day have rallied from all parts of the Empire to fight for the liberties they hold dear, and for the rights of small nations to the same freedom. They are men of faith, men of courage, men of honour, men who put duty before inclination.

Apt illustrations were given on all these points.

"Only democracies breed such men," said the speaker. "Men must be free before they can achieve greatness. But democracies also breed weak, selfish men," he continued, "and because of this we need to inspire and educate our men along these lines continually."

At the close of his sermon Mr. Malott read the names of the men of the various lodges of the city who had laid down their lives for King and country, and said they had been men of the type he had described. He reminded the audience that 80,000 Orangemen were at the front and that over 10,000 had paid the supreme sacrifice.

Patriotic music was rendered by the choir and Mrs. King, Mr. King presided at the organ.

CHANGES AT GRAFTON'S.

Re-arrangement of Stock Will Facilitate Expanding Business.

Extensive changes are being made in the Grafton store. The stock of the furnishing department is being transferred from the north half of the store to the south half, and the clothing, which as occupied the south half, will be installed in the north side.

New-way cabinets of the latest design are being put in to accommodate the clothing, and the changed appearance of the entire store will be very marked.

The new fittings are exceedingly handsome and elaborate and will give the store a very up-to-date appearance. All improvements are being made with the idea of better service to the public and the present changes are a big step in this direction.

LABOUR SHOULD BE MINDFUL OF NATION'S DEPENDENCE ON ITS WORK

Workers Motivated by High Spirit of Duty Entitled to Respect as if They Wore the Uniform of Soldiers—Should Regard Their Toil as a National Service.

REV. CANON DAVIDSON'S ADDRESS

Under the title "The Soldier and the Worker," Rev. Canon Davidson on Sunday evening in St. John's Church dealt with Labour, its dignity, responsibility and difficulties. He spoke first of the pride of soldiers in their regiments and the wonderful organization of the army where there was general and effective co-operation, and where wearisome and repulsive work was cheerfully performed as "fatigue duties." The great body of workers here at the home base should be regarded (and should regard themselves), as members of a great and noble civilian army divided into labour battalions working for the country and for humanity. The working force of the different factories, stores and other places of business should take the same pride in these "labour units" as soldiers did in their regiments.

Captains of Industry and Workers.

Workers were entitled to the same standing and respect as if in uniform, always provided that they realized their position as workers for the country and not merely for themselves. In doing our part of the nation's work faithfully and well, men and women were really serving their King and country as had been brought home of late, the service too being not destructive but constructive and beneficent.

A National Service.

Our work, then, as fathers, mothers, mechanics, food producers, food preparers and food distributors, was to be thought of as National Service. By the amount and the character of our work we were helping to determine the standing and the influence of our country as well as her service to the world.

The speaker here drew attention to the highly important part in this National Service taken by mothers, who rear up large and healthy families, and by housekeepers and domestics, who properly prepare the nation's food.

Few members of the army rendered more valuable service.

Fair Living Wage.

National interests required that the nation's workers should have good health and healthful surroundings. This necessitated a fair living wage which had sometimes to be insisted on. But the wage, however necessary, was not the main object. If it was made so it took most of the dignity and glory from work which became a mere selfish means of getting an existence in which case the worker was serving himself rather than his country.

The speaker thought unions were desirable, and in some cases necessary for both employers and employees. Their main object, however, should not be either to insist on or to prevent an increase of wages, but the improvement of work and working conditions with a view to turning out the greatest quantity and best quality of needful manufactures and stimulating the ambition of loyal and cared-for workmen.

When our fighting army abroad were by self-sacrifice doing such great things for the honour of Canada, surely they should be strongly supported by the army of workers at home, who might be relied on in a similar spirit of cooperation and self-sacrifice to do their part in National Service.

Work A Discipline.

Canon Davidson went on to urge that our work should be done heartily and well, as "unto the Lord," an acceptable offering to the God from whom came the call to work. "Six days shalt thou labour." The whole sum of the world's work was divided among the world's inhabitants, and one part was as honourable as another if done in the spirit of willing service. Work was a good thing in itself, and in it we might find, if not always pleasure, at least needed training and discipline. Such as the soldier found in the army—and the service of daily work well done in this spirit was a large part of the Service of God.

RETREATING ON 50 MILE FRONT

NEW YORK, Sept. 3.—The Associated Press to-day issued the following: "On a front of virtually 50 miles, between Ypres and Peronne, on the Somme, the German Army is in retreat. This retreating movement is said to be a voluntary one on the part of the enemy, but has been forced by a series of unremitting hammer blows inflicted by Marshal Foch. It has been accentuated by the notable victory won by Field Marshal Haig yesterday in breaking through the strong towns lines protecting the railway centres of Douai and Cambrai, and threatening to outflank even the main Hindenburg line south to St. Quentin."

STAMPING OUT FAKERS

Returned Soldiers Must Not Be Allowed to Lecture in United States.

TORONTO, Sept. 3.— The military authorities have finally decided to put their foot down on soldiers who desire to go to the United States and lecture on the great war by telling their experiences at the front. To stamp out fakers, Ottawa has issued explicit instructions that no permission is to be granted to soldiers to go to the United States in uniform, except those who have been discharged and are on their way home to points in the States.

Double Income Is Wiped Out

The delegation of United States citizens from Canada which visited Washington and called the attention of the Ways and Means Committee of the House of Representatives to the double income tax to which they were subject, met with a favourable reception. They were advised by Mr. Claude Kitchen, chairman of the committee, that an arrangement would probably be made whereby United States citizens resident in Canada would continue to pay both Canadian and United States income taxes, but that in the case of the latter the amount of the Canadian tax would be deducted. Accordingly, where the Canadian tax is as large as the United States tax, there will be nothing to be paid to the United States Government, otherwise there will be a balance.

NEGRO PRIVATE CAN TALK TWENTY-SEVEN TONGUES

The Cleveland Plaindealer cites the case of a negro who is probably the most linguistic soldier in the rank and file of the Allied armies. A despatch from Camp Upton says that among the nationalizations in the soldier court was Count Ben Ossac De Kellscritta, a negro private, born in Abyssinnia, who claims blood relationship with the late King Menelik.

He has been a citizen of Italy, being born in that section of Abyssinia known as Italian Samaliland. A slight regret at losing his title of count was the only think that marred acceptance of American allegiance.

Kellscritta speaks twenty-seven languages fluently and his knowledge was tested by naturalization interpreters in English, French, Spanish, German, Russian, Polish, Italian, the Scandinavian languages, Hindu and several Indian dialects, Greek, Arabic, Hebrew, Turkish, the Balkan tongues, and various dialects. He studied for rabbinical orders at one time and his knowledge of Hebrew is almost perfect. Milwaukee is his home.

In view of his qualifications, the negro Jew will probably be used in the intelligence service.

WILL PUT CAMBRAI UNDER ALLIED FIRE.

LONDON, Sept. 3. — The present German retreat to positions behind the Canal Du Nord and continuing northward, will place Cambrai under long range fire and will make Douai practically useless to the enemy, it was learned authoritatively this afternoon.

In Flanders information indicates that La Bassee will probably fall soon.

The enemy has practically no fresh divisions available for fighting, although some of the German Crown Prince's divisions probably will have partially recovered soon from the mauling they received during the Marne fighting.

Canadians Were Specially Trained for Open Fighting

Prisoners Divulged Enemy's Plans and Foch Took the Canadians Out of the Line for the Intensive Practice of the "War of Movement."

CALLED "FOCH'S PETS"

OTTAWA, Sept 3.—Mr. Roland Hill, who has returned from France on two months' leave, after three years' service at the front as a special correspondent for the Canadian government, gives an interesting account of the special training of the Canadian troops for the present fighting.

"It was just after the March setback that we first began to learn the enemy intended to maintain a 'war of movement.' Prisoners the Canadians took in their famous raids told of manoeuvres held far behind the German lines where three or four divisions at a time were kept out day and night charging, not dummy trenches, but woods and hills and farms, the vantage points of open fighting. Trench mortars and other implements of 'underground' warfare were not discarded, but were made lighter and put on wheels.

Preparing for Enemy.

"These facts were duly noted by the British intelligence staff, and late in June the Canadian corps, which had held Vimy like a breakwater standing firm against the seas that swirled against it, breaking dangerously to either side, were taken out to 'rest.' For six or seven weeks, in a back area, they laboured night and day carrying imaginary enemy positions, marching twenty or thirty miles, then going into mimic battle again. When their artillery could be spared, it took its turn with them. Their transport, always efficient, was brought up to such a pitch that it was the envy of the British front. Our trench mortars were not forgotten, either. They were mounted on trucks, and were almost as mobile as a heavy machine gun. So complete was the training that for the first time they were allowed to charge over growing crops, and even establishing machine gun posts in flowing cornfields. 'Foch's orders,' was the reply of the French liason officer when the farmers' complaints rained in. Already the Canadians were regarded as Foch's pets. The men grew bronzed and fit, ready to go anywhere and do anything, and they knew that before long the supreme effort would be required of them. It was not by chance that, in their training, they found two divisions of the French Alpin Chasseurs—our ally's iron divisions—alongside them.

"Several times, in those critical days when the Allied line seemed to be giving away, the Canadians were asked for by harassed British army commanders, but Foch was adamant. The Huns grew nervous and made costly raids up and down the front to find out where the Canadians were, and they breathed a sigh of relief when at last they were located at Arras. The British, they argued, would never be so foolish as to attempt a drive there, but they shifted three extra divisions up from the Amiens front, for safety.

Shown Their Mettle.

"The Canadians stole away again without attacking, moving silently, swiftly, as their training had taught them, with their own transport. A week later they attacked with such brilliant success at the very spot from which the Germans had withdrawn divisions for Arras. They found the same kind of cornfields to take cover in. Alongside of them were the French Chasseurs Alpins. But why that move into the line at Arras? The rest of Foch's scheme was so perfect. After a week of fighting with all objectives gained they learned. Their casualties were fairly light, reinforcements awaiting them on the road, they moved, again the complete corps, back into the old trenches at Arras. Next dawn they attacked, and how they broke through the Hindenburg line has been told in cable despatches. Foch had not trained them in vain. He had used them to almost their limit, but they were satisfied. They had proved worthy of their name, 'Foch's Pets.'"

CATTLE MARKET

TORONTO, Sept. 3.—Receipts at the Union Stock Yards for Tuesday included 41 cars, 697 cattle, 154 calves, 432 hogs, and 318 sheep and lambs. Monday's receipts totaled 239 cars, 4,856 cattle, 366 calves, 899 hogs, and 1,836 sheep and lambs, which all told is the biggest run of live stock received this summer. The quality of cattle was common and a scarcity of real choice meats.

Lambs are still weak after last week's slump, prices ranging from $15.50 to $$17.25 per cwt., and the top price of $17.25 for Tuesday was only for a few small lots, and the general tone of the market shows no prospect of a rise.

Calves were firm and in big demand. Cattle were steady and the tendency both yesterday and to-day predicts a better market than last week. Hogs are steady at $19.50 per cwt., fed and watered, with no indications of a change.

We guarantee immediate shipment of all orders for Dodge Wood-Split Pulleys from four inches up to six feet in diameter.
There is no telling how long you may have to wait for metal pulleys. The United States Government won't allow steel to be released for their manufacture except for war orders.
Dodge Wood-Split Pulleys cost less to buy than metal pulleys, yet provide fifty per cent. greater returns in horsepower value, because their surface provides greater adhesion, consequently there is less belt slip; and because, being lighter and better balanced, there is less weight friction.

HATE FOR BRITAIN BY AN OFFICER

Interesting facts have recently been brought to the notice of the British Authorities by a neutral who has been travelling for some time in different parts of Germany and Austria. This traveller, who is a very keen observer of men and things, was able to mix freely with high officials. His testimony is therefore worthy of credence.

The full force and measure of Germany's hate is directed against Britain. No doubt this is because the Germans thoroughly realise by this time that they have to thank Britain for the fact that their carefully laid plans have gone by the board. Probably before long this hatred of Britain will be diverted to some extent to the United States, and for the same reason. The Hun distinctly objects to any nation which takes upon itself the role of the god from the machine, unless, of course, its godlike propensities are directed in Germany's favour. At present, however, Britain occupies the post of honour among the allied nations, and one can be sure that the British soldiers out in France are seeing to it that the said post of honour is being deservedly held. It is well to remember that hate is a composite emotion, and that the chief ingredients are fear and the sense of an utter helplessness to remove the cause of that fear.

The Germans hate France, but they have a very wholesome respect for that country nevertheless. This respect traces its source from the blood-sodden battlefields round Verdun. There, certainly, France gave her enemy food in abundance for contemplation. Again, the Germans have a great admiration for Foch, whom they allow is 'some general.' In fact in the military schools throughtout Germany today Foch is the text-book on modern warfare! On Foch are the building Ludendorffs and embryonic Hindenburgs nurtured, and his latest works are read, marked, learned, and inwardly digested by the officers of German Imperial staff for this reason Germans look upon the appointment of Foch as generalissimo as a distinct score for the allies. The Germans are quite ready to admit that Britain has a fine army.

So far as internal conditions are concerned it is true that the German masses desire a change of regime, but that desire has not as yet entered the sphere of practical politics for the simple reason that a sense of discipline and a fear of the police are characteristics of the German nature. It is mainly due to this fact that there is little prospect of a revolution. The end of the war may see the need of German Imperialism, but the example of Russia has convinced the disgruntled ones of the inadvisability of swapping horses in mid stream. Nevertheless it is a sign of the times that murmurs of disaffection are frequently heard in the streets of German towns when a royal or official car passes down the road.

The informant has also visited Austria. He maintains that Austria has no hatred of France or of Britain. An Austrian diplomatist summed up the position by saying: "After the war we shall not dare to show ourselves in Paris for five years; in London, for ten years; and in Berlin for twenty years." As an indication of the "scale of hate" the observation has its value. As a matter of fact however just at present no German is particularly anxious to show himself in Vienna, or any other Austrian town.

Smocks are no longer of the simple peasant type.

Safety or Danger in Electrical Devices?

THE housewife or business man who allows, in home or office, an electrical device unapproved by electrical authorities, or that does not measure up to standard electrical requirements, harbors an element of danger to life and property every minute it remains in use.

We make this strong statement in the nature of a warning because it is in our interest as well as yours to do so. The sale of cheap, dangerous electrical equipment affects our business—particularly those copied from our own designs, thus depending for their sale upon the fact of being imitations of the BENJAMIN. When one of these articles proves its inferiority by use — as might be expected — the loss has fallen, not upon the unknown manufacturer, but upon the innocent purchaser who has been deceived by the resemblance of the cheap article to the genuine — and the BENJAMIN name undeservedly suffers the blame.

Benjamin goods are all inspected and passed for safety before being placed on the market. The Benjamin Two-Way Plug, for example —which is most glaringly imitated — is approved by all electrical authorities. On the contrary, there are imitations that are not only unsafe but which are sold, in some instances, under conditions which lead the public to believe that they are getting the BENJAMIN Two-Way Plug. Can you imagine more heartless "profiteering" than this? Is it any wonder we feel called upon to issue this warning in your interests and our own? It is safer to play safe—look for the name!

LONDON, Sept. 4—It now seems that the report of the capture of Lens was premature. No official announcement has yet been made of the taking of that city.

Drive to the Rhine.

LONDON, Sept. 4.—It is believed here that Foch is preparing for a drive on Metzs and the Rhine in the eastern sector with Americans.

Canadian Captures.

WITH THE CANADIAN ARMY, Sept. 4.—Canadian troops captured between five and six thousand troops on Monday.

Hun Cities Bombed.

LONDON, Sept. 4.—British airmen in the past twenty-four hours dropped fifteen tons of bombs on a Rhine city.

Crossed the Somme.

PARIS, Sept. 4.—French infantry crossed the Somme before Epancourt and gained a footing in the village of Genvry, east of the Canal Du Nord.

Tuesday Evening Bulletin:

Advance Continues.

AMERICAN ARMY HEADQUARTERS, Sept. 3.—A great fight has been in progress north and east of Soissons all day. Germans are defending their positions with great vigour. Americans are bombarding the Germans from the south and west. The enemy's line has been an inferno of smoke and dust for hours.

Fighting on Hindy's Line.

LONDON, Sept. 4.— South-east of Lagnicourt, the southern point which the British hold on the Hindenburg line, fighting has been terrific to-day, but the British still hold all positions they have gained.

Canucks Advanced Posts.

British Headquarters Beyond Dracourt-Queant Line, Sept. 4. — Canadians fighting desperately to eastward of Queant. Germans are in great confusion.

Only Five Miles.

FRENCH HEADQUARTERS, Sept. 3.— French are now only five miles from the line they held before the German advance across the Chemin Des Dames. Enemy only have a narrow margin of fighting ground between the Hindenburg line and the Forest of St. Gobain.

CAPTURE VILLAGE SOUTH OF SCARPE.

London, Sept. 3. — Carrying their attack to the northeast of Arras, the British to-day captured the village of Hamblain-Les-Pres, just to the south of the Scarpe, in the direction of Dauai.

BRITISH TAKE ANOTHER.

London, Sept. 3. — A further advance by the British in Flanders was registered to-day when it was learned authoritatively that Richebourg-St.-Vasst, two miles west of Neuve Chapelle, had been occupied. This is an advance of about one mile at the southern extremity of the Armentieres front.

MOVING OUR GUNS EASTWARD.

With the British Armies, Sept. 3.—Near Queant, it is reported that the British are moving their guns eastward. The next line of German resistance will probably be behind the Canal Du Nord, before which the enemy has laid a network of wires, although there are few trenches.

A significant sign of the weakened German defence is the shattered condition of some of the enemy units who were compelled to continue fighting. One prisoner from the second guards reserves said that his whole division had been reduced to a thousand men. His own battalion, he said, had been reduced to one officer and 35 men.

"The Girl Who Had No God"

By MARY ROBERTS RINEHART
Author of "The Man in Lower Ten," The After House," Etc.

Unlike Elinor, Huff had been raised in a Presbyterian household. He had come to jeer, to watch, with his thief's eyes the offertory piling into the silver plates. But the service told on him. Somewhere down in the violent young heart there crept a sense of shame. It was only when he looked at Ward that his eyes hardened.

This man who had come between him and his girl—this white-handed, surpliced, prayer-reading priest, who in a dozen words could compel the people before him to lay a fortune at his feet—Huff ground his teeth together. But something of unwilling admiration was mixed with his scorn. This was no mean adversary, this Ward; a man, every inch of him. He would beat him out if he had to kill him to do it.

Huff stayed in church after the service. He accosted Mr. Bryant, one of the vestrymen, as the congregation filed out.

"I don't like to ask you to talk business on Sunday," he said, "but I think it's going to be mighty inconvenient" until you get the new building."

"Horrible," said the vestryman. "No fire is every convient, but this—"

Huff drew a business card from his pocket.

"I thought perhaps you might be willing to talk about a temporary building," he said. "We specialize in things like that. Wood, you know, and weather-proof, but inexpensive."

The last word caught Mr. Bryant's ear.

"Seems to me," Huff went on, "the choir boys need a place to dress in. You couldn't ask them to put on their surplices at home and walk over here."

"We had thought of a tent," Mr. Bryant said uncertainly. "But if you care to look around—"

"Never mind about me," said Huff largely. "I'll just glance over the place myself. You'd better attend to that fortune you took up in the collection this morning."

The assistant rector has taken charge of that," Mr. Bryant observed, and after that for half an hour he and Huff faked board floors, tar-paper roofs and electric installation in the temporary headquarters.

Huff made careful notes in his pocket notebook. They included the length and breadth of the temporary building, the residence of the assistant rector, a stove in the temporary structure for cold days, the amount of the collection, and the time at which evening service was over on Sunday night.

CHAPTER IX.

Talbot, running out to the Country Club that afternoon for his Sunday game of golf, stopped off at the Hall.

He found Elinor lunching alone in the arbor, which commanded a view of the Valley.

"I brought out a letter from Boroday," he said producing it. "He wrote it yesterday morning, but I did not stop at the Dago's until an hour or so ago."

The Dago was the owner of a gambling house far down town—a sort of underworld clearing house. Its safety for Talbot and the others lay in the fact that it drew its clientele from the upper as well as the lower walks of life. Huff, acting in his taxicab capacity as steerer, was able to come and go without suspicion.

Talbot could not read old Hilary's cryptic shorthand. Only three had known it: Boroday, old Hilary himself, and Elinor.

Elinor ran through it while Talbot ate a sandwich. She was rather white when she looked up.

"It's about the Bryant pearl," she interpreted. "Boroday says that if the Chief gets it back he will let him go. The Chief's reputation is hanging on it. The Bryants are influential."

She read the last paragraph aloud to him:

"On your lives, boys, do what I tell you. Mail the pearls in a plain box to police headquarters. Mail it down town in the city. If everything is all right, I'll be able to get out to Wolfingham in a week, perhaps less. This will make the church plan unnecessary and relieve Elinor's mind. I see you got the parish house. It was foolhardy and useless."

Talbot rose and stretched himself.

"Wonderful day for golf," he said. "Now's let's have the pearl, and I am off."

Elinor's eyes were pitiful.

"Wouldn't any other pearl do?"

He glanced down at her quizzically.

"Where's your mind, Elinor? If you lose a dog and want it back, will any other dog do? Why? Do you want the thing yourself?"

"I have given it away," said Elinor.

Under his golf tan Talbot turned gray.

"To whom?"

"The jewels were always mine," protested Elinor defending herself. "You have always told me that. I thought I had a right—"

"To whom?"

"I put it in the alms box at Saint Jude's this morning."

"Then it may still be there??"

"I don't know."

"In the name of God!" Talbot broke out. "What possessed you to give the thing away? Whim or no whim, you have no right to risk the rest of us. If that thing is traced back to you you know what it means."

"Nobody saw me—"

But Talbot was pacing up and down.

"There's only one chance," he said. "I'll send a special delivery to the Chief telling him the thing is in the alms box. If it's still there he'll get it and return it. If it's already been discovered, at least he can claim to have known its hiding place."

Talbot disgustedly relinquished his golf and in the library of the hall wrote the anonymous letter to the Chief. Then in his gray car, he set off for the city to mail the letter.

When he was in the car, the engine throbbing easily, Elinor ventured to put her hand on is arm.

"Last night," she said rapidly, "Walter threatened all sorts of things; that he would get the morning collection at Saint Jude's; that he would kill Mr. Ward. I am frightened, Tallie."

Talbot patted her hand.

"We will get this fixed up so that it won't be necessary; and as for the other, you know Walter. He was mad with jealousy last night. That's all talk."

On that wild ride Talbot had little time to think, but such as they were, his thoughts were of Elinor and her caprice.

"It's the preacher after all!" he said to himself; "it's enough to make old Hilary turn over."

From that his mind wandered to Walter. He knew Huff, the violence of his temper, the madness of his passion for the girl. Talbot was uneasy.

Elinor had an unexpected visitor that afternoon. It was the Bryant woman.

White, but very dignified, Elinor came into the drawing room. But Mrs. Bryant had not come about the pearl.

"You must forgive a Sunday visit," she said. "But I have taken Mr. Bryant to the Country Club, and I have wanted so much to come to see you."

Elinor's color returned.

"It is very kind of you to come."

Mrs. Bryant's small, bird like eyes darted over the room. The house was distinctly good form. Perhaps the girl might be an acquisition to the social life of the village. After all, religion was becoming very broad. Even the best people—"

"The Country Club," said Mrs. Bryant aloud, "is full of disagreeable memories to me just now. It was less than a week ago that I was robbed."

"Ah!" said Elinor. "Robbed! How interesting!"

"All my jewels, everything I possessed that was really worth while."

ORIGIN OF ALPHABET LOST

Boston Globe.)

The alphabet we use is a queer thing, when we come to think of it. In effect it is made up of conventional signs.

Turn this page upside down, and you cannot read it. It might almost as well be printed in Russian characters or in Arabic.

Few subjects have enlisted on the part of language students more speculative thought than the origin of the alphabet. It is to-day a matter much in dispute.

There are those who aver that on pebbles almost as ancient as the early cave dwellers of southern Europe have been found inscribed characters representing the origin of some of our alphabetical letters of to-day.

But the theory most generally accepted at the present time is that the letters of our alphabet originated with the ancient Egyptians. They were, to begin with, "ideographs."

Take "S" for example. In form it represents a snake. The sound of the letter is the hissing of a snake There you have it. What more could be demanded of a single lettetr in an alphabet? It is a whole picture.

"O" is supposed to have been a knot in a string—the letter being originally a piece of sinew. "G" was a bow pulled taut. "" was the hollowed hand, from which one drank— whence the sound of the letter. "L" was the crooked stick used in primitive times as a plow. "X" was a pickaxe, "V" was an ox yoke. "X" was a cros roads. "T" was a tally—a primitive mode of counting. "Y" was the right hand upheld.

Hiding In the Woods.

Rumors persist that there are hiding in the forests of Northern Maine hundreds, if not thousands, of Canadians, who are either too proud or two timid to fight for their country. Some of these are from the Province of Quebec, a few are said to have come from the Maritime Provinces of New Brunswick and Nova Scotia. The fact that one of the big lumbering concerns was not obliged to come to Canada for its log drivers this spring indicates that a new source of labor supply has suddenly been developed.

"Starve the Cities."

Charles Stafford, a Yarmouth Township farmer, recently made the statement that he was not satisfied with the amendment to the Military Service Act, and he believed the farmers should take down their fences, turn their cattle into the grain, and starve the city people and the Government out.

STOMACH TROUBLES ARE DUE TO ACIDITY

Tells Safe, Certain, Speedy, Relief For Acid Indigestion.

So-called stomach troubles, such as indigestion, gas, sourness, stomach-ache, and inability to retain food are in probably nine cases out of ten, simply evidence that excessive secretion of acid is taking place in the stomach causing the formation of gas and acid indigestion.

Gas distends the stomach and causes that full oppressive burning feeling sometimes known as heartburn, while the acid irritates and inflames the delicate lining of the stomach. The trouble lies entirely in the excessive development or secretion of acid.

To stop or prevent this souring of the food contents of the stomach and to neutralize the acid and, make it bland and harmless, a teaspoonful of bisurated magnesia, a good and effective corrector of acid stomach, should be taken in a quarter of a glass of hot or cold water after eating or whenever gas, sourness or acidity is felt. This sweetens the stomach and neutralizes the acidity in a few moments and is a perfectly harmless and inexpensive remedy to use.

An antacid, such as bisurated magnesia which can be obtained from any druggist in either powder or tablet form enables the stomach to do its work properly without the aid of artificial digestants. Magnesia comes in several forms so be certain to ask for and take only Bisurated Magnesia which is especially prepared for the above purpose.

OUR DAILY SHORT STORY

Winning a Wife

By VICTOR REDCLIFFE

Walter Benton was an investigator for the law firm of Dunham & Bartley. Marvin Farr was a clerk and student in the same service. The latter, starting for the office one morning, received a telephone from Benton, asking him to stop on his way to the train.

"Sprained ankle, and doctor says I'll be laid up for a week," reported Benton. "Will you do something for me at the office?"

"Why, surely."

Benton handed Marvin a cardboard box done up in newspaper. "Just put that in the safe at the office till I get on my feet again, will you?"

"Valuable?" intimated Marvin.

"Not particularly, except as evidence."

When Marvin reached the train there was only one vacant seat. It faced two young ladies. Marvin placed the box in the rack overhead and opened his newspaper. More than once, however, his glance stole to the face of one of the two girls. The other called her Rose, and her sweet, sunny face made the name appropriate.

Miss Rose left the car at the first city station, instead of the main depot. She nearly missed getting off the train, for she had not heard the conductor's call; but, hastily seizing a package from the rack, she managed to make the platform.

When Marvin reached the terminus he reached up to the rack, placed the package secured under his arm and made his way to the office.

"Hello!" he ejaculated vaguely, as he placed the package on his desk. "This isn't the one I started out with. That bright-eyed girl took my box without looking and I was about as remiss. No address or mark of identification. Maybe I shall find something inside that may direct me."

Inside, however, there was no clew. The box held some knitting needles, a hank of yarn and a half-finished neck muffler—at least his charming young lady of the train was patriotic. Marvin's interest spurred up as he noticed a folded sheet of writing paper. It was covered by what suggested the memoranda of the framework of a contemplated letter.

"Why, the poor girl is thinking of suicide!" soliloquized Marvin. "I must try and be of use here. What had I better do?"

All he could do was to take the same train the next day. She whom he knew as Rose sat alone. She edged closer to the window to make room for him, supposing he was looking for a seat.

"Pardon me," spoke Marvin, "but I was hoping you would be on the train." And then he flushed and stammered, for those penetrating eyes expressed a challenge as to some trifling stranger forcing an acquaintance. "That is," stumbled on Marvin, "I lost a box and found one and this is it, and it must be yours!"

Marvin was puzzled, abashed, fairly startled as the girl shrank from him with a shudder. If she had before manifested resentment at his seeming familiarity in addressing her, now she evidenced a still more profound emotion.

"I am anxious to recover the box you took by mistake."

"My mother has it—Mrs. Alice Gresham," and she named the street number and flashed into the next car as though evading a pestilence.

"Well, I've got to get Benton's box back, anyhow," decided Marvin, and that afternoon located the address.

"I am bringing back a parcel belonging to your daughter," he said. "Will you kindly give me the one she took by mistake?"

Again a puzzle, and mystery, dense and deep! The woman evinced immediate excitement and dread. "Wait outside for a moment," she said in shaking tones, and slammed the door. A minute later Marvin saw her running across lots towards the next street. She reappeared, accompanied by a policeman.

"There he is!" cried the woman, pointing to Marvin—"there is the burglar!"

"And where are the burglar's tools?" inquired the officer, seizing Marvin by the arm.

The woman brought out the missing box. "I should say!" ejaculated the policeman, viewing its contents. "As fine an assortment of picklocks as any I ever saw."

Light suddenly flooded Marvin's mind. The burglar's tools were evidently gathered by Benton in some criminal case. Mrs. Gresham and her daughter had naturally taken Marvin to be a burglar. He presented his card and explained. The officer accepted his story as true.

"I am very sorry that we misjudged you," spoke Mrs. Gresham, "and Rose will feel sorry, too," and the next morning there came a note from the young lady saying so, and stating their anxiety to make any amends in their power.

So Marvin ventured to call, and make mother and daughter feel comforted by laughing over the episode. And Rose explained that the written page he had found among the knitting was the outline of a story plot she had thought up. And then, because the more they saw of each other the more their natures seemed to harmonize, Marvin Farr set his mind upon the task of winning a wife worth having.

HOW TO AVOID BACKACHE AND NERVOUSNESS

Told by Mrs. Lynch From Own Experience.

Providence, R. I.—"I was all run down in health, was nervous, had headaches, my back ached all the time. I was tired and had no ambition for anything. I had taken a number of medicines which did me no good. One day I read about Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound and what it had done for women, so I tried it. My nervousness and backache and headaches disappeared. I gained in weight and feel fine, so I can honestly recommend Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound to any woman who is suffering as I was."—MRS. ADELINE B. LYNCH, 100 Plain St., Providence, R. I.

Backache and nervousness are symptoms or nature's warnings, which indicate a functional disturbance or an unhealthy condition which often develops into a more serious ailment.

Women in this condition should not continue to drag along without help, but profit by Mrs. Lynch's experience, and try this famous root and herb remedy, Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound—and for special advice write to Lydia E. Pinkham Med. Co., Lynn, Mass.

Getting Ready.

In some sections of the West, the toothbrush is said to be rather a scarce commodity, as witness the experience of a boarder out there once upon a time. The master and his wife had accepted the boarder at $4 a week. Just before his first meal the visitor overheard this scrap of conversation between the couple: "I'm afraid we ain't going to make much outa this fella at $4," the mistress sighed. "I allow that wuz purty good pay," replied the host. "Well, it would be ordinarily," the mistress admitted, "but Tommy jest went upsairs to tell him dinner wuz reddy, an' found him sharpenin' his teeth."

SLEEPLESS NIGHTS WITH ECZEMA.

Mrs. Link, 12 Walker Street, Halifax, N.S., states: — "After three years of miserable torture and sleepless nights with terrible eczema, and after trying over a dozen remedies without obtaining anything but slight temporary relief, I have been perfectly and entirely cured by using Dr. Chase's Ointment. After the third of fourth application of this grand Ointment I obtained relief and a few boxes were sufficient to make a thorough cure

Goes Back to Orient.

With the close of its last session the Toronto University loses one of the picturesque figures among its under-graduates, Miss Hanayo Sakamoto, of Tomioka, Japan, who for two years has been a student in Household Science. She has just completed the one-year's teachers training course, which includes dietetics, chemistry, methods of teaching and so forth. Miss Sakamoto intends teaching household science to her own countrywomen when she returns home, and will be the pioneer in this work in Japan. It is quite probable, however, that she will spend this winter in New York taking a course in the Y.W.C.A. Secretaries' Training School there.

During her student days in Toronto Miss Sakamoto has become very popular with her class mates and taken part in the social and athletic activities at Annesley Hall, where she has been in residence.

"To help make strong, keen, red-blooded Americans there is nothing in my experience which I have found so valuable as organic iron—Nuxated Iron," says Dr. James Francis Sullivan, formerly physician of Bellevue Hospital (Outdoor Dept.), New York, and the Westchester County Hospital. Nuxated Iron often increases the strength and endurance of weak, nervous, run-down people in two weeks' time. It is now being used by over three million people annually, including such men as Hon. Leslie M. Shaw, formerly Secretary of the Treasury, and ex-Governor of Iowa; former United States Senator and Vice-Presidential nominee, Chas. A. Towne; General John L. Clem (Retired), the drummer boy of Shiloh, who was sergeant in the U. S. Army when only 12 years of age; also United States Judge G. W. Atkinson of the Court of Claims of Washington, and others. Nuxated Iron is dispensed by all good druggists everywhere.

Talked of "Prussianism."

J. A. Cross, a prominent farmer of Tutela Heights, was fined $500 and costs by the magistrate at Brantford for making the observation, in criticizing the Government order-in-council calling out farmers' sons, that "We had just as well be under Prussian rule as under Canadian." Several witnesses told of Cross using the expression and the defendant admitted having said something to that effect when his son was called up for service after having been previously exempted. His counsel declares that he was but exercising the right of free speech common to Canadian citizenship. Magistrate Livingston, in giving judgment, stated that since the order-in-council of April 16, such a remark could only be construed as detrimental to the cause of the Canadians and the Allies, and was the very thing which it was desired to stop. When the life blood of Canadian young men and women was being poured out against the Prussians, such an expression of opinion was insulting, as well as traitorous, and the magistrate said as far as he was concerned it would be stopped. Cross took a prominent part on the farmers' deputation to Ottawa and participated in meetings of protest to the Government. Four witnesses, all farmers, gave evidence against him. M. W. McEwen, appearing for Cross, declared that farmers all over the country had used that kind of language, and stronger, whereat the magistrate replied that a lot of those farmers should have been put in jail and that there had been a laxity in law enforcement. Counsel further declared that the Act of the Government, aimed to stop criticism of its actions, was highly Prussian in itself.

Soils.

There are light and sandy loams underlaid by sand and gravel which need no sub or artificial drainage, but for clay loams it is essential for the best results, not merely to take away water in the spring, and allow early seeding, but to make the soil more moist throughout the season. No amount of surface tillage, no amount of manure or fertilizers, can ensure maximum crop production on a poorly-drained soil. Surface evaporation is slow in the early months of the season. Tile drainage is needed therefore that the heavier soils may be worked to advantage before the seeding time passes. Poorly drained soils are water-logged soils, and this means a condition absolutely injurious to growing crops, for the root system needs air. Crops can die of suffocation, even after they have got a fair growth. Poorly drained soils are cold and wet. — Royal Canadian Institute.

Kiddie's Clothes

How to Make Them Wear Longer

There is stringent need of it, as every mother can testify, in these days of mounting prices. Well—did it ever occur to you that harsh, common soaps, and the ordinary rub and scrub of the wash board; break down more clothes than are ever actually worn out in use? Its so. We've studied the question. That's why purest and best of soaps, was first evolved, years ago—to wash clothes gently but thoroughly, without rubbing—the special "Sunlight" way. Doubly—trebly useful—now, in war time, when the clothes must last longer.

It's easy to do the washing yourself with Sunlight.

THE INTRODUCTION.

I'm askin' you'll be easy for a bit, Sir,
The lad's had little but a thrush's schoolin',
The blue skies and the fields, the little whipster,
'Tis time enough for something more (But whisper)—
He'll go better for an easy rulin'.

Herself was always for the bit of readin',
But Denny here, he's great for growin' things,
There's not a primrose that he'd not be heedin':
Herself is right, 'tis graver things he's needin',
The thrush is tamer when you clip his wings.

I'd never have you spare him with the 'earnin'
(And, faith, 'tis little that the lad has had),
But if above his task you'll see him turnin'
To watch the fields—'tis just the thrush's yearnin'—
I'm askin' you'll be easy with the lad. —Theodosia Garrison

Cuticura Heals Sore Red Pimples

Itching, Burning and Irritated. Lost Sleep.

"My face broke out in pimples that would heal up and then break out again. It was very sore and red, and all the time itching and burning, and I irritated my face by scratching. I lost a lot of sleep.

"I had the pimples for over five years. Then I used Cuticura Soap and Ointment, and two cakes of Cuticura Soap and one box of Cuticura Ointment healed my face completely." (Signed) Miss Zoo Parkes, Otterville, Ont., March 13, 1917.

Skin troubles are quickly relieved by Cuticura. The Soap cleanses and purifies, the Ointment soothes and heals.

For Free Sample Each by Mail address post-card: "Cuticura, Dept. A, Boston, U. S. A." Sold everywhere.

An Act of Love.

The editor of American Magazine asked Private Peat one day to tell him the most tender, gentle thing he ever knew a soldier to do. He answered: "After the first gas attack at Ypres, in April, 1915, I was knocked out for a while and was in the clearing station at Merville. One day when I was lying there on a stretcher a poor, miserable soldier came in. He was covered with mud and blood. He was minus his overcoat and his tunic was torn by shrapnel. He was soaked to the bone, for it was raining, and he was shivering with cold and pain. The nurse hurried to him and asked him what had become of his overcoat. 'Oh,' he said, his teeth chattering, 'my pal was killed back there, and he looked so cold, lying there in the rain, I took off my coat and put it over him'."

The London county council has added domestic science courses to its day schools and evening institutes.

SPECIFIC FOR BRONCHITIS.

The turpentine used in Dr. Chase's Syrup of Linseed and Turpentine is not the ordinary commercial article, which is little used because of the unpleasantness of taste, but is specially extracted from tamarac and spruce gum and so combined with other valuable ingredients as to be at the same time pleasant to use and wonderfully effective in the cure of affections of the throat, bronchial tubes and lungs.

BRITISH HEROES IN THE MAKING

Admiral Beatty Once Saw Service in Egypt.

GEN. HAIG WAS ALSO THERE

A Book About a Half-Forgotten War Tells of the Days When These Men Were Unconsciously Preparing Themselves For the Task of Saving the World From the Awful Hun Yoke.

NEARLY twenty years ago Mr. G. W. Steevens wrote his book, "With Kitchener to Khartum." It bears rereading in these days of struggle, if only for an understanding of how far we have come in our notions of a large army. For the Atbara campaign the Sirdar's command was "a total of 12,000 to 13,000 men with 32 guns." Mr. Stevens speaks of the long columns of khaki combining into brigade squares and rolling majestically over the desert. It was "a stately spectacle." So it was in those days. But Britain has raised 7,500,000 for the present war.

The author's astonishment at the enormous quantity of supplies and munitions of war which were conveyed up the Nile to Berber and beyond was natural, in those days

ADMIRAL DAVID BEATTY.

What supplies are needed for the millions upon millions who fight for the Entente? Yet this Soudan campaign was a practical school for some of the men of prominence to-day. The fine "well-oiled military machine," Lord Kitchener is gone, but not before his mind has been at work on this problem of our times. The Sirdar of Egypt to-day is Gen. Wingate. Twenty years ago he was a Chief Intelligence Officer, who made it his business to know everything. "He is the type of the learned soldiers," says Steevens. "If he had not chosen to be chief of the Intelligence Department of the Egyptian army he might have been Professor of Oriental languages at Oxford." He will learn any language you like to name in three months. As for that mysterious child of lies, the Arab, Col. Wingate can converse with him for hours."

Who made a reconnaissance along the banks of the Atbara for eighteen miles? None other than Bimbashi Haig, whose name is tolerably familiar in this war. Who commanded the river gunboat Fatha, and supported a fighting group of forty men in a skirmish with 1,000 dervishes? None other than Lieut. Beatty, R.N., who is quoting as saying: "It is all right. We're doing 'em proper." He might repeat the same fervent sentiment as he walks his quarter-deck to-day, commander of the Grand Fleet, and bearer of appalling responsibilities.

Truly it pays to re-read Mr. Steevens. Take this statement by a black Soudanese warrior: "We are like the English. We are not afraid," and consider the author's commentary: "Utterly fearless themselves, savages, brought up to think death in battle the natural lot of man, far preferable to defeat or disgrace, they have lived with British officers and British sergeants through years of war and pestilence, and have never seen any sign that these are not as contemptuous of death as themselves. They have seen many Britishers die. They have never seen a Britisher show fear."

Yet for twenty years, heedless of this and other testimony, Germany thought that Britishers were decadent cowards, unable and unwilling to fight. All this time Bimbashi Haig and Lieut. Beatty, R.N., were training for the leadership of a United Service embracing seven or eight million men!

SUGAR FOR CANNING SEASON.

Sufficient Supply Will Be Available, If Economies Are Exercised.

The sugar situation so far as Canada is concerned is largely in the hands of the public itself. Transportation conditions have been bad, but with the restrictions which have been imposed by the Canada Food Board on bakers, confectioners, eating places, candy manufacturers and on private households, so far as the use of cane sugar in icings on cakes and the making of candy for private consumption is concerned, a very large saving will be effected. If this saving be increased by all possible economies in private households and by curtailed consumption of candy, it is certain that there will be a sufficient supply of sugar for the canning and preserving season. The Food Board has been successful recently in securing ships to carry raw sugar to Canada and these supplies have definitely improved the situation. With continued care, there is now no danger of anything in the nature of a sugar famine and, if the public will do its share, there will be no shortage for the canning and preserving season. Continued economies are necessary, however, and the Food Board's regulations must be strictly observed.

The International Sugar Commission of New York and the Royal Commission of London, working in co-operation, virtually control the raw sugar of the world. The International Sugar Commission allocated to Canada this year 320,000 tons, as against 400,000 tons last year. Our exports of refined sugar last year amounted to about 55,000, so that the net shortage for Canadian consumption amounted to about 25,000 tons, or approximately six per cent. The International Sugar Commission, however, expected to be able to allocate an additional 70,000 tons to Canada, which would have given us a net surplus over last year of 45,000 tons.

Transportation difficulties became unexpectedly acute and sugar receipts in Canada fell far below schedule. Arrangements were almost completed for ships to bring raw sugar direct to Canada, but these had to be dropped. This combination of transportation difficulties made necessary the restrictions imposed during recent weeks by the Canada Food Board. They will have the effect of building up a reserve stock for the canning and preserving period. To accomplish this to the extent that is desired, so that no part of our fruit or vegetable crop this year may be lost on account of shortage of sugar, requires the intelligent co-operation of the public, especially of private homes.

MRS. CLARK NOW EATS ANYTHING

Relishes Food She Didn't Dare Touch Before Taking Tanlac.

"I had taken so many kinds of medicines without result that I was almost in despair, but so many of my acquaintances were taking Tanlac that I tried it, too, and now I am praising it like the rest," said Mrs. Mary Clark, of 9 Hagerman street, an old-time resident who has lived in Toronto for thirty years, the other day.

"It has been all of seven years," she continued, "since my stomach got out of order and indigestion began to worry me. I lost my appetite and soon got so I couldn't eat a thing without having trouble. Cabbage and all kinds of vegetables acted like poison and I didn't dare eat anything of the kind. What little I forced down formed a hard lump right in the pit of my stomach and soon gas would rise, and if I didn't start vomiting at once, sour bitter water would just boil up in my mouth and I would spit out bits of my undigested food. The gas would press so on my heart that I felt like I would smother and I simply cannot describe the agony I suffered. My head ached awfully, griping pains would seize me, I would become so nauseated that I couldn't retain a thing on my stomach and at times I'd get so weak that I felt like I was going to faint. Everything tore me up so terribly that I actually dreaded for meal time to come and the lack of nourishment was making me weaker every day.

"Before I had finished my first bottle of Tanlac I felt so much better that I kept it up till I had taken six bottles in all and I am now feeling just fine. My appetite is splendid and I can eat anything I want without having any trouble afterwards. All kinds of vegetables agree with me perfectly and I can eat pie, too, something I didn't dare touch before taking Tanlac. My head has stopped aching, I never have sour stomach or gas troubles and that dull, heavy feeling is gone. Tanlac has given me such wonderful relief that I want everybody to know it and I have already recommended it to many of my friends."

Tanlac is sold in Peterborough by W. B. Warne Drug Co., Ltd. In Havelock by A. C. Denike. In Lakefield by Tanier Drug Co., Ltd. In Fowler's Corners by W. A. Hunter. In Gelert by A. J. Scott. In Westwood by G. Pringle & Son.

LADY'S WAIST.

For the warm weather the semi-tailored waist of washable silk is favored by the well dressed women because it is so practical. The most popular materials are crepe de Chine, pussywillow taffeta and washable satin. In No. 8868 the large collar is cut so as to form deep revers which follow the surplice closing to the left side. The back of the waist extends over the shoulders and the fronts are gathered. The long sleeves have deep turned back cuffs. A band of contrasting material on the edge of the collar makes an effective trimming.

The lady's waist pattern No. 8868 is cut in five sizes—36 to 44 inches bust measure. The 36 inch size requires 2½ yards 32 inch, 2¼ yards 36 inch or 1⅞ yards 40 inch material.

FRENCH GAIN BETWEEN AILETTE AND AISNE

Town of Bucy De Long is Captured With 1,500 Prisoners — Vesle River is Crossed at Many Points and General Mangin's Troops Reach Vauxaillon Table Land.

OUT-FLANKING ENEMY

PARIS, Sept. 4.—(Official.)—French troops last night continued to push back the Germans to the east of Canal Du Nord, between the Ailette and the Aisne. They have taken Chapitre-wood, and have approached Croiselles, Juvencourt, Clamecy and Braye. On the Aisne river the town of Bucy De Long was taken with 1,500 prisoners. They have crossed the Vesle river at many points.

The official statement reads:

Yesterday during the day and night the Frnech continued to press back the enemy east of the Canal Du Nord and between the Ailette and the Aisne. French troops captured Chapitre Wood, north-east of Chevilly, and further south, French elements advanced, pursuing the enemy, and are approaching Croiselles.

North of the Ailette the French carried their lines to the western outskirts of Coucy Le Chateau and Juvincourt. To the south the French progressed east of Leuilly and reached the outskirts of Clamecy and Braye, and penetrated Bucy-Le-Long. The number of prisoners taken in that region exceed 1,500. On the Vesle front French elements crossed the river at several points.

Outflanking the Foe.

Special to The Examiner:

PARIS, Sept. 4.—General Mangin's troops have reached the edge of the Vauxaillon table land and are gradually progressing toward the Chemin-Des-Dames area, according to despatches to the Journal to-day. Vauxaillon is about a mile and a half east of the allied lines above Soissons. Progress in this direction shows Mangin continuing his movement to flank German positions along the Vesle and menace their new positions on the Chemin-Des-Dames.

A CHANCE FOR 200 SUBSCRIBERS

Redpath Lyceum Series Promises to be a Treat for Local Citizens

More subscribers will have the privilege of subscribing to the "Redpath Lyceum Series' of concerts and lectures, which is being brought to our city by the Peterborough Conservatory of Music. Already 200 public spirited and art loving citizens have subscribed and only 200 more are needed to make possible for Peterborough to hear one of the greatest treats of its history.

After this the subscription list will be withdrawn as a block of seats will be reserved free of charge for the advanced pupils of the conservatory.

The concerts will be held November 4th., Dec. 9th., Feb. 13., March 19th., April 18th., and among the artists will be Judge Alden of Massachusetts, Low Beauchamp, Humorus Philosopher, (Lectuer's), Antonia Sala, Court cellist to the King of Spain, and decorated by King Alfonso for his Art and his Company. The Fairchild Quartette, a famous family of artists including a contralto, Soprano, pianist, violinist and reader.

There will also be a light opera company composed of men and women who have successfully toured with such companies as the "Savage" and Aborn Co.

These artists will give (in costume) excerpts from various Operas such as the "Mikado", "Madame Butterfly," and "Robin Hood." These are only a few of the attractions of this very fine series, no such delightful course has ever been held in Peterborough.

More Gains for British

Special to The Examiner:

LONDON, Sept. 4.—The British hold Rumancourt (just south of Ecourt-St. Quentin, eight and half miles west by north of Cambrai) it was learned today. Inch-en-Arteois has been captured and the British also hold Dornicourt and Hermies.

On Last Lap and Close to Winning Post

LONDON, Sept. 4.—(Canadian Press Despatch from Reuter's.)— The Paris papers print the following semi-official statement: "The hour seems close at hand when the superb efforts of the Allies will begin to bear fruits," one of the great chiefs said yesterday. "We are on the last lap and close to the winning post."

SUGAR FAMINE IN MONTREAL IS SERIOUS

(Canadian Press Despatch.)

MONTREAL, September 4.—Sugar of any kind cannot be had for love or money. Customers are haunting the stores for granulated for their tea and coffee and cannot get one pound. The storekeepers cannot get it themselves from the wholesalers, who blame the refineries. The latter say the Food Controller and the International Committee are not giving enough raw material to them. As a result the St. Lawrence Sugar Refinery had to close down last week, but hopes to get enough to start operations again next week. The St. Lawrence Sugar Refinery and the Canada Sugar Refinery say there is very little raw stuff and they can only give the wholesalers about an eighth of what they want. There is very little sugar on hand here. Walter Paul, grocer, says the fruit is spoiling and he has to throw it out as people will not purchase when they cannot get sugar.

PRESENT WEEK PROMISES TO BE GREATEST OF WAR

At Noon Yesterday British Were Only Six Miles From Cambrai—Germans Are Sacrificing Thousands of Men Trying to Hold Line.

MANY PRISONERS TAKEN

(Special to Examiner.)

(By Lowell Mellett.)

With the British Armies in France, September 4. — Everywhere on the front now being battered by the British, the Germans are seeking cover behind the Hindenburg Line. Notwithstanding the fact that the line itself has been heavily broken, the enemy high command is sacrificing thousands of its precious man power units in an effort to save it.

This bids fair to be a greater week than last, which was described as the greatest week of the war.

The prisoners of Monday and Tuesday bring the estimated total since July 18th, when the counter offensive started, close to 125,000. Only the Germans' own figures on their dead and wounded will be able to tell of their loss. The number of Germans killed is unquestionably enormous.

What the breaking through of the line means is shown by the fact that at noon on Tuesday the British were only six miles from Cambrai, having advanced nearly five miles from the opening which was blasted in the German defences.

Into cages already containing 4,000 German prisoners, 2,200 more were dumped on Tuesday. This was only part of the previous night's gleanings. They made a ragged and a muddy collection in very damp spirits.

GERMANS ARE FALLING BACK ON MESSINES

Indications Are That Enemy is Retreating Still Further in Flanders —Further South British Have Captured Several Strong Points.

HOW THE LINE RUNS

(By Lowell Mellett.)

WITH THE BRITISH ARMIES IN FRANCE, Sept. 4.—Evidences are piling up that the Germans are retiring from Wytschaete and Messines Ridges. (These ridges, in Flanders, between Ypres and Armentieres, were the scene of most desperate fighting in the German drive of last April).

More Successes.

LONDON, Sept. 4.—(1 p.m.)—The British have secured a hold on the west bank of the Canal Du Nord by taking Rumacourt to the north of Sains-Le-Marquion, according to advices from the battle front to-day. Further south along the Canal they are reported to have captured Inchy-En-Artois, Demicourt, to the east of Doignies, and Hermies, three miles northeast of Bertincourt. Near the Somme, the British, advices state, have crossed the Canal of Haut Allains, slightly more than two miles north of Peronne. From Hermies southward the British line is indicated running to the west of Ruyaulcourt, a mile and a half east of Bertincourt.

Midway between Nieppe and Sailly, in the Lys salient, the British have captured the village of Croix-Du-Bac.

Ukranian Peasants Are In Revolt

(Special to The Examiner.)

STOCKHOLM, Sept. 4.—The uprising of Ukrain peasants against German rule has broken out with renewed force, according to Russian newspapers. The Cracow Journal prints a Keaff despatch stating that the rebellion is increasing daily and is spreading rapidly from district to district. Fighting between the Finnish and Austro-German forces is almost constant, especially along the left bank of the Dnieper River.

The most serious revolts are reported to have taken place in the Beluazercaff, Taraschatszha, Caneff and Berditcheff distrjcts.

The Ukraine railway strike is still unsettled.

Von Hutier to Stand at Oise River

(Special to The Examiner.)

AMSTERDAM, Sept. 4.—General Von Hutier is preparing to make a stand on the Oise River, according to reports here to-day, crediting this statement to German Chancellor Hertling.

The Oise runs east and west crossing the Hindenburg line at La Fere, and behind that line it turns at right angle and runs north.

A SURPRISE FOR ENEMY

German Command Did Not Expect Allies to Tackle the Strongest Defences on the Western Front Without Long Organization, But Foch Fooled Them.

ADVANCE CONTINUES

(By William Philip Sims.)

PARIS, Sept. 4.—Cambrai, Douai and Lens to-day are directly menaced by the advancing British. As this is cabled the Canadians, English and Scottish are nine miles from Cambrai and Douai, while the Drocourt-Queant switch line and Hindenburg's line have been smashed and left far behind.

Between Haig's advance guard and the important cities of Cambrai and Douai, little in the way of fortifications remains, and if Von Below checks the Allies before they reach the gates of the two towns he must sacrifice a considerable number of his fast dwindling reserves.

Lens is being more and more pinched by General Horne's British first army, and may give way at any time.

Every yard that the British advance astride the Scarpe River now adds peril to this bastion of German resistance. (Unofficial despatches yesterday reported Lens captured, but Haig's official report only mentioned a slight advance of British outposts in the city's western outskirts.)

Caught Napping.

Apparently Hindenburg and Ludendorff have been caught napping again. They never dreamed that the Allies would tackle the strongest defenses on the western front without long and hard preparations, but just southward of the scene of this latest victory General Byng last fall sent an army of tanks crashing their way through a similar mass of earthworks, tunnels, pill boxes and barbed wire the size of a man's little finger. He thus had the answer to this problem at his finger tips, to wit, he gave the Germans a dose of the same medicine driving a wedge clear through seven lines of defenses despite the best efforts of eleven German divisions to halt him. A further advance in this region must vitally affect whatever plans Ludendorff and Hindenburg may have had in mind.

Expected a Pause.

Seemingly the Germans believed the Allies would pause when they came up to the Hindenburg line, and as southward of Queant the line has not yet been reached, the enemy higher command apparently figured they had some time yet. Foch, the official timer of the Allied operations, however, figured the enemy would reason that way—and hit responding like a thoroughbred to the call for action.

Enemy reinforcements are pouring in from all directions in order to try to save Cambrai and Douai. Undoubtedly they will put up a bitter fight for the places.

As for Lens I am permitted to say not only Lens itself, but the coal basin which is of the utmost value, are probably already southward of the British advance.

The French Progress.

The French are keeping up their pressure eastward of the Canal Du Nord, while the fighting continues northward of Soissons. General Mangin is focalizing his blows for the moment, but these in the direction of Anisy are increasing the Crown Prince's uneasiness along the Vesle. The enemy is making the most desperate effort to hold up the French hereabouts, shoving the Prussian Guards into the fray time and time again. They know that yielding here will affect the entire line from Soissons to Peronne. Though General Petain is not making a rapid advance at present, he is detaining a large number of Germans, aiding otherwise in the fighting further north in the region of the Scarpe.

57th Regt. Band Gets Larger Grant

Council Gives Them $350 and Salvation Army Band $150.

The city's band grant of $500 was finally disposed of at last night's council meeting, the 57th Regimental band receiving $350, and the Salvation Army band $150. An amendment to apportion the sum in two equal parts was moved by Ald. Edgar and seconded by Ald. Saunders. Ald. Malcolm McIntyre supported it, but this amendment was lost by 5 to 3, the negative votes being cast by Mayor Duncan, Ald. Taylor, Jones, A. A. McIntyre and Weir.

Ald. Dobbin was presiding over the Committee of the Whole in which the question arose when a bylaw was introduced to grant the 57th band $350.

MUCH SPECULATION OVER RETURNS OF SIR EDWARD

(Special to The Examiner.)

OTTAWA, Ont., September 4. — The prospective return to Canada of Sir Edward Kemp, Overseas Minister of Militia, has aroused considetable speculation at the Capital. The fact that Sir Edward postponed his coming until after the Premier and his colleagues had returned, and did not accompany them, has added to this speculation.

Official circles are reticent as to the reasons for his return. It is stated that he intends simply to visit his family whom he has not seen for some time, and that he will return again within a month. The probability of any changes in the position is not admitted. However, it is noted here that Sir Clifford Sifton is accompanying the Overseas Minister to Canada, and the rumour is reviewed that Sir Clifford may once again enter into public life and may even supersede Sir Edward as Overseas Minister. He has in any case many supporters for the position, and is a man of high organizing ability.

COUNCIL HAS POOR OPINION OF THE HOUSING SCHEME

Ald. Edgar Estimates That a $2,500 House Would Cost $6,000 Before it Was Paid For.

COMMITTEE APPOINTED

When the Council had completed a rough analysis last night of the Provincial Government's scheme to promote the building of houses, it looked like a gold brick, and thinly veneered at that. Ald. Edgar conducted the dissection after first voicing his belief that ten per cent. of the houses of Peterborough were vacant. Hence the city was in a fairly satisfactory condition he said. Turning to the proposed plan of assisting citizens to secure homes of their own, he stated that the citizen who would take advantage of this scheme would pay $125 or $150 yearly in interest and his taxes would be about 365. He would pay at least $200 a year before he had begun to reduce the principal.

"At the end of twenty years his house would have cost him about $6,000." Ald. Edgar said with finality, "and then its value might decline twenty per cent. The movement for more houses comes from the manufacturers. They are anxious to secure homes for their employees. Why not let them take up this enterprise themselves?"

Mayor Duncan—"I know that some local men would go into housing if they were asked."

Ald. Edgar—"I am willing to help if we can, and would move that Aldermen Jones, A. A. McIntyre and M. McItnyre be a committee to confer with the Citizens' Housing committee.

This appointment will be reported to Mr. W. R. Breyfogle.

HUNS ARE NOW ALL EAST OF CANAL DU NORD

Have Surrendered the Drocourt Queant Line to Canadians Without Further Struggle-.A Triumph for Maple Leaf Troops.

STORY OF THE VICTORY

(By J. F. B. Livesay, Canadian Press Correspondent.)

WITH CANADIAN FORCES, Sept. 3.—The Boche has gone back across the Canal Du Nord, surrendering to us without further struggle, the Drocourt-Queant line. He got out just in time.

The Canadian corps was driving in his front, and Canadian artillery was only waiting the hour to low down such a barrage along the Canal as must have destroyed all its bridges and make the evacuation impossible. This is not official, but there is small doubt of its truth. It is the logic of the situation.

Yesterday the enemy fought like wild cats to save guns and transport. Last night our line was absolutely quiet. An airman this morning reported that after flying all across the enemy line he is convinced that there is not a Boche west of the Canal Du Nord. He scouted the idea that the enemy might be hiding in dugouts. If this great news is confirmed it must lift a load off the minds of our commanders. No troops can fight many days together on the scale of yesterday without suffering such losses as must in time impair their efficiency.

The Casualties.

The price paid for the first breach of the Drocourt-Queant switch is relatively cheap, doubtless less than the total prisoners. But if the corps had had to fight forward to the Canal on the same scale it must have proved terribly expensive. To gain the line of the Canal Du Nord with no further blow is a triumph indeed, and an unwilling tribute by the beaten enemy to the prowess of Canadian arms. In this triumph British troops worthily participated.

The enemy enclosed in a cul de sac with the Scarpe on his right and the Canal behind him, was in a desperate plight and desperately did he fight to escape it. He threw in no less than eight devisions. The fury of his counter attacks equalled anything hitherto experienced by veteran Canadian troops. For miles behind the Canal Du Nord he lacks such a great system of fortification as the Canadian corps stormed early yesterday morning.

On the Canadian front alone the weight of metal was greater than that of Amiens, Passchendaele or of Vimy, but in addition was the converging fire of the British armies to the right and left. As this barrage crept forward ahead of the infantry, lifting one hundred yards at a time, there could be made out amid thunder and lightning the bulked masses of slow-moving tanks. Hardly had the show opened when field batteries galloped over the ground where but a few minutes before the infantry had stood at attention waiting the word to go in.

Principal Praises Miss Gladman's Work

In his report of the results of the mid-summer examinations at the Collegiate Institute Mr. Kenner spoke of the notable success Miss Gretchen Gladman had won for herself by not only passing third in Ontario in the honor and Scholarship examinations but also by taking the Edward Blake and Wm. Dixon scholarships. This he said was a credit to the school.

General Haig's Forces Captured St. Quentin—Further Progress is Made on Both Sides of the Lys Salient and British are Near Neuve-Chapelle.

THE OFFICIAL REPORT

(Canadian Press.)

London, Sept. 4. (Official)—In their push beyond the Drocourt-Queant line British troops have reached the line of the Canal Du Nord. North of the Aras road they have occupied the town of Ecourt St. Quentin.

North of Peronne the advance has carried the British through the Vaux Wood, above Moislans. Slight advances have also been scored at other points.

The text of the statement reads:

"On the battle front minor actions are reported in different localities. We have reached the east side of Vaux Woods, north of Moislans, and have advanced slightly at other points. Generally our troops have reached the line of the canal Du Nord and north of Arras the Cambrai Road. We have occupied Ecourt St. Quentin. In the Lys sector further progress was made by us yesterday and last night, both south and north of the river our troops are approaching Neuve Chapelle."

THE SUGAR SITUATION.

The people who are compelled by circumstances over which they have no control, to eat at restaurants, have another reason for hating the Kaiser. The latter, being responsible for the war, is also to blame for the need of food conservation and for the sugar rations and for all the other inconveniences that are falling directly upon those unfortunates who have to depend upon public eating houses for the wherewithal to keep body and soul together. Every regulation that the Canada Food Board has laid down has been a blow to such unfortunates. "The war is being won in the kitchen," says a Food Board bulletin, but the man who has no home moves that this slogan be amended by striking out the word "kitchen" and substituting "restaurant."

The latest regulation is in regard to the use of sugar in public eating houses and provides that only two pounds of sugar may be used for all purposes, "including the sweetening of beverages and cooking" for each ninety meals. This figures out at the rate of one spoonful per meal for each individual, so that the unlucky restaurant patron who wants porridge, fruit and coffee for his breakfast will have to do some deep thinking to decide how one spoonful of sweetening can be distributed over the three.

There is a serious scarcity in sugar, and the new regulations will undoubtedly be effective in saving a considerable quantity, but the average man cannot see, in the face of a situation that demands such drastic action in the case of public eating houses, why the manufacture and sale of all kinds of candies is permitted to go on. Housewives cannot get sugar for canning, vast quantities of fruit will therefore go to waste, and restaurant patrons will have to struggle along on a spoonful per meal, and yet tons of sugar are practically wasted every day in the manufacture of candy and sweet meats, a large amount of which could be dispensed with until the situation has been relieved at least.

CARRIED ALL BEFORE THEM.

Glorious as was the immortal stand of the 1st Canadian Division at Ypres, splendid as was the capture of Courcelette in the first battle of the Somme, successful as were the Canadian corps achievements of last year in the taking of Vimy Ridge and Passchendeale, there has been nothing in the wonderful history of the Canadians in France and Belgium to surpass the triumphs General Currie's men have won in the past month. And all indications point to the fact that the smashing of the Drocourt-Queant line on Monday overshadowed the great feat of the corps at the beginning of the British offensive on August 8th.

Field Marshal Haig's bulletins are usually terse and matter-of-fact, and therefore his tribute to the prowess of the Canadians in his official report yesterday is a notable tribute to their success:

"Canadian troops showed the greatest skill and courage yesterday in storming the Drocourt-Queant line. These lines had been perfected by the enemy in the past eighteen months. They provided the most formidable obstacle, as they had been furnished with every device of modern engineering. The enemy had reinforced his defences here to such a degree that on a front of 8,000 yards no less than eleven German divisions were identified. Undeterred by the strength of his defensive organization, the Canadians, assisted admirably by the British troops on their left, carried all before them."

Praise of this character from the commander-in-chief of the British forces needs little comment. It is pleasing to note that Sir Douglas Haig not only pays a tribute to the courage of the Canadians, but to their skill as well, so that the leaders of the corps, from Sir Arthur Currie down, share with their men the honours of the day. The Canadian leader, whose affection and admiration for the soldiers under him have often been commented upon, gives credit for the successes to the determination and fighting spirit of the men. "All our staff work, all our preparation, all our training," he said to a war correspondent, "would go for little if I had not behind me men like these."

General Currie's tribute to his soldiers is deserved, but it is evident from Field Marshal Haig's official report of the storming of the Drocourt-Queant line that not only did the Canadians fight with the gallantry that has distinguished all their battles, but that they were admirably led as well.

THE WORK OF THE NAVY.

The work of our Fleet was so quiet and so little advertised that the ordinary Briton dwelling in the southern towns felt more remote from it than the Flanders trenches. Only on the seaboard, especially in the north and east, was there evidence for the eye of an immense and ceaseless activity. As our army had grown so had our navy. Men of every class and occupation—yacht owners, fishermen, leisured people with a turn for the sea—had been drawn into the net, and the Royal Navy now included as motley a collection of volunteers in its auxiliary branches as could be found in the ranks of the new battalions. How arduous and anxious was the work only those employed in it could tell. That it was carried on in all weathers and under all discouragements with no measure of keenness, was a tribute not only to our national character, but to the masterful traditions of the great Service. Any army, compelled to twenty months of comparative inaction and an unsleeping defensive, would have gone to pieces. But any army was a ragged and amateur business as compared with the British fleet. The ordeal was sustained partly because a ship's life in war is not so different from a ship's life in peace, partly because of the traditions of discipline and wise ceremonial, and partly because of the expertness of the profession. A modern sailor has duties so intricate and technical that they provide his mind with constant occupation. Even in peace neither body nor brain can afford to rust.

The sea has formed the English character, and the essential England is to be found in those who follow it. They have never altered since the days of the Channel skippers who taught Drake his trade, and the adventurers who first drank bilge and ate penguins in far-away oceans. Our seamen have been unmoved by the political storms which raged on land. They have been neither Puritans nor Cavaliers, Whigs nor Tories, but plain Englishmen concerned with greater things. From blue water they have learned mercifulness and a certain spacious tolerance for what does not effect their craft, but they have also learned in the grimmest of schools precision and resolution. The sea endures no makeshifts. If a thing is not exactly right it will be vastly wrong. Discipline, courage to the point of madness, contempt for all that is pretentious and insincere, are the teaching of the oceans and the elements, and they have been the qualities in all ages of the British sailor.

On the navy, "under the good Providence of God," it is written in the Articles of War, hang the peace and prosperity of our islands and our Empire. But in this struggle there were still greater issues for on the British navy especially depended whether law or rapine was henceforth to rule the world. To one who visited the Grand Fleet there came a sense of pride which was more than the traditional devotion of Englishmen to the senior service and the remembrance of a famous past. The great battleships far up in the northern waters wreathed in mists and beaten upon by snowstorms, the men who for many months of nerve-racking strain had kept unimpaired their edge and ardour of mind, were indeed a shining proof of the might and spirit of their land. But in the task before them there was a high duty, which their forefathers, indeed, had shared, but which lay upon them with a solemn urgency. They were the modern crusaders, the true defenders of the faith, doing battle not only for home, and race and fatherland, but for the citadel of Christendom.

Enemy Nervous on Vesle Front

American Guns Are Helping French Pound a Way Towards Chemin Des Dames.

(Special to Examiner.)

(By Fred S. Ferguson.)

With the American Armies in France, Sept. 4 — American artillery continues to aid the French in pounding a way towards the Chemin-Des-Dames. Guns have been moved beyond Juvigny, and are shelling enemy positions in Neville region with light pieces joining in the barrage fire.

Durin gthe attacks of the past twenty-four hours American guns have been laying down smoke screens to cover the movements of French and American infantry. The artillery work to-day received high commendation from the French commander.

The enemy continues to show increased signs of nervousness along the Vesle as the French tenth army continues to push on. His observation balloons have veen pulled back, and many other signs indicate preparations to withdraw rapidly when necessary.

Quantities of Boche gas were thrown into Fismes on Monday night without effect. During the same night an enemy patrol entered Bazoches, and had a sharp encounter with the enemy. Otherwise the Vesle front was quiet.

JOY-RIDING ON SUNDAY IS NOT POPULAR

People Are Beginning to Carry Out Oil Controller's Request.

That joy riding on Sunday in the United States, is a hazardous and costly venture, was the statement made by Mr. Alex. Eaton, 430 Park street, who has just returned from a short visit to Niagara Falls, N. Y. Motor cars seen running on the Sabbath are violently handled by the mobs, who see that Oil Controller Ryan's request anent the saving of the nation's gasoline supply is observed. Many automobile owners have had their engines smashed, their tires punctured, and other damage done to the body of the car.

Ald. A. A. McIntyre Would Pay Salary to Fuel Official

The resignations of the three fuel commissioners appointed by the Council a short time ago were accepted last night.

Mr. T. H. G. Denne's was read first. "There are two others," City Clerk Armstrong said, "do you want their letters now?"

"Yes, we'll take them in batches," Alderman Dobbin remarked. Mr. W. H. Bradburn and Mr. M. L. Campbell were the other two.

Ald. A. A. McIntyre declared that there was only one method of handling this question, namely to appoint a commissioner and pay him sufficient to make the position worth while. "I want to put myself on record as favouring this idea," he said. "It is a serious question, and we should deal with it in the only way that will get the results the people want."

Alderman McIntyre moved that a commissioner be appointed at a salary, but failed to get a seconder. Then he wanted full information of the quantity of coal received by the dealers and how it was distributed.

Alderman Edgar stated that this would take considerable time. His daughter has kept a daily record of the fuel dealers' sales, and the distribution of every ton of coal was tabulated.

Alderman McIntyre—The information is no good in your office, we want it here.

Alderman Edgar smiled at his colleague's burst of heat, and replied that he was no longer commissioner, hence it was not in his province to keep the Council informed on the coal situation. But the details were available.

"Well we ought to go into the whole thing thoroughly," Alderman McIntyre concluded. "This isn't good business, the way we are going."

Alderman Edgar offered the opinion that it was important to have a commissioner now in order that the future supplies could be distributed more evenly than those received by the dealers in the past. "We can't take the coal from the people who bought what the law allowed them, but we should be able to allot the future deliveries more equitably."

Mayor Duncan read a letter from Scranton that intimated the possibility of considerable shipments to the city in a short time.

PENSIONS COMMITTEE CHOSEN BY VETERANS

Particulars of the coal raffle which the Great War Veterans Association are holding in connection with the Peterboro Industrial Exhibition were given to the members of the Peterboro branch of the Association at their regular monthly meeting last night. There are three prizes the first, three tons of coal, the second, two tons and the third one ton and Mr. Robt Hicks has donated one third of the total quantity to be offered as prizes. 2,000 tickets are on sale at 25c each and are rapidly being sold. The numbers will be placed on a huge paper target and on the last afternoon at the Peterboro Industrial Exhibition the target will be set in motion and His Worship Mayor Duncan will fire three shots, the first number pierced giving the holder of the ticket the first prize, and the second and third prizes will be decided on the same plan. The competition, it is expected, will yield a substantial sum for the relief fund of the Association.

Last night's meeting at which President H. J. Staunton was present was largely attended. The manner in which the Peterboro branch is growing is shown by the fact that no fewer than twenty new members were admitted to membership.

New Vice-President.

Dr. Edward Wood was unanimously elected vice-president of the Association in place of Comrade Walter Perks, who is absent from the city. Dr. Wood, who is a son of the late Crown Attorney R. E. Wood saw considerable service overseas.

A Pensions Committee

At the suggestion of the Dominion Secretary R. M. Stewart, a pensions committee was selected by the meeting. This committee will familiarize themselves with all the regulations in regard to pensions and will investigate all cases in which there are grievances or complaints to be considered. It is felt that by taking this course, trivial complaints will be done away with and the recommendations of the committee will add weight to the legitimate claims Comrades (Col.) Johnston, Geo. Cookman and Secretary Whatley.

Entertainment Committee

Comrade Harry Mann presented report of the activities of the entertainment committee since the last meeting. The moon lights, garden party had netted a profit of $135.00.

The Convention

Comrade Canon Davidson gave a very interesting report of the Dominion convention at Toronto at which he was a delegate. Canon Davidson reviewed the different matters that had come before the convention and especially the difficulty that had arisen in regard to the Ottawa and Winnipeg delegates.

President Staunton and Secretary Whatley also briefly referred to the convention, the latter paying particular attention to the attitude of Col. Pigeon and the other Ottawa delegates.

Firemen Desire Platoon System Talk of Quitting

Fire Chief Grange who spent part of last week at the Convention of Fire Chiefs in Toronto, expressed the opinion to-day that the platoon system for fire departments had to come and Peterboro might as well lead the procession as follow it.

The convention passed a resolution favouring the platoon system in city fire halls, whereby the staffs will work on a 12-hour shift. This will enable all the men, to live at home night and day work being undertaken alternately by half the force .It would also add to efficiency in case of big conflagrations, when the entire force would be available for call.

Chief Grange states that four new men would be necesasry if the platoon system were adopted. This would necessitate an extra expenditure of 4,200 to the city, but, he said, it would be more than offset by the extra protection to the city. With the present system every fireman has every eighth day off duty but under the platoon system the whole twenty men would be available for a fire. And also it is a curious fact that many of the fire alarms are at the meal hours when some of the men are away from the the hall. Under the two-shift system the full force would be at the hall because the noon meal would be provided at the fire hall.

It has been intimated that six of the city's firemen will resign from the brigade unless the two-shift system is adopted.

Five Peterboro Boys at Osgoode

Osgoode Hall, Ontario's law centre like every other educational centre has received a severe set-back due to the war. In ordinary years about 200 students flow to Osgoode's law hall but this year barely 100 will be in attendance. Five Peterboro boys will attend this year's classes which open about Oct. 1. Bertram McAvoy, 3rd year, Howard Armstrong, 2nd year, Thomas Carley, 2nd year, Louis Sukoff 1st year and J. A. Duranceau 1st year.

The German Idea of Victory

Canadian Press:

AMSTERDAM, Sept. 4. — German idea of victory, as defined by the German Crown Prince, in an interview published in a Budapest newspaper, is "intention to hold our own and not let ourselves be vanquished." The Crown Prince is quoted as saying that this was clear to him the moment England entered the war.

French Are Forcing Way to Ginscard

Special to The Examiner:

(By John De Gandt.)

PARIS, Sept. 4.—Towards Guiscard, five miles north by east from Noyon, French cavalry to-day is forcing the Germans back, according to reports received here this afternoon. The enemy is withdrawing from the right bank of the north canal.

In the region of Kumecourt, north of Soissons, the Chauny-Laon railway has been passed. The French are making progress towards Ainzy-Le-Chateau, along the Ailette. General Mangin is reported advancing along the Paris-Hirson and Soissons-Guignicourt railways. Operations in the Kumecourt region and along the two railways named, which follow the general lines of the Vesle and Aisne river, are evidently part of the big flanking manoeuvre against the Germans holding the Vesle line, and against the Chemin-Des-Dames positions.

Light Beer and Wine Are Favoured

Special to The Examiner:

WINNIPEG, Man., Sept. 4.— At a meeting of the Women's Labour League the result of a vote was unanimously passed in favour of the Government allowing light beers and wines to be sold in licensed hotels.

Huge Orders for Steel Will Affect The Metal Trades

Business is going to be brisk in Canadian circles for some time to come if present indications are anything to go by. Dealers in the Dominion are purchasing again in large quantities. The renewal and placing of new business in Canada for the American government means that the munitions business is good for some time to come.

The developments of certain lines in Canada can proceed only along circumscribed lines at present. The real seriousness of the situation is not generally apparent. The War Industries Board of Washington is calling for steel at a rate that is startling. Right now the call is for five million more tons for first half 1919 than the present capacity of the furnaces and mills can show. Where the extra material is coming from is a question that is a very serious one for all concerns that look to U.S. production centres for their supplies. It means that restrictions placed upon the Canadian market will be strictly adhered to, and there will be a tendency to make these tighter than in the past.

Pittsburg reports indicate that it is almost useless to go to the mills armed with priority certificates and licenses and preferences. In fact all such documents look alike now. It is generally found that all the mills have plenty of customers who have been armed with similar documents, and the preferences, etc., are simply placed on the books together with plenty of other preferences just as good.

Boilers Needed For Ships.

British Columbia is placing large orders in the East this week. Just a few days ago a purchaser representing three shipbuilding concerns on French orders was in Ontario placing orders for 12 boilers and 24 engines. He claimed that in this way he could secure much better terms and delivery dates than by the three companies going into the market individually with smaller orders. His total buying represented about three-quarters of a million dollars.

Scrap Metal Market.

The scrap metal situation is more serious in United States than in Canada. A larger amount of scrap than usual is finding its way into foundry mixture. Some of the dealers are inclined to hold that there is plenty of material in the consumers' yards, and that the talk of a shortage is being kept up to keep shipments from being allowed to United States' points, there having been an embargo against this for some time past.— Canadian Machinery.

EVERYBODY WILL GET SOME COAL

Opinion of Mr. Hicks, Just Home Home From Trip to Mining Districts.

"I think that everybody will get some coal, but no person will get all he wants," was the opinion of the fuel situation expressed by Mr. Robert Hicks this morning. He has just returned from an extensive trip through the coal districts across the border, and makes no effort to minimize the seriousness of the outlook. However, he expects that there will be large shipments into Canada during the remaining months of the open season. This country is receiving a certain advantage in early shipments by reason of the long hauls which offer hazards and difficulties during the winter.

Boulets a New Fuel.

Economy during the fall months and the use of wood and other substitutes will help materially to meet the scarcity, and allow sufficient coal for the severe months.

Mr. Hicks stated that in the United States every effort is being made to overcome the effects of the shortage of labour and coal. Coal dust that used to be wasted is now used in pulverized form to be blown through furnaces instead of fuel oil. By this means an intense heat is generated.

"Boulets" is the trade name of a new fuel composed of 95 per cent. pure granulated anthracite and five per cent of fuel oil. These two ingredients are mixed and compressed into "coals" about the size of hens eggs. It is claimed that this material gives every satisfaction, and will burn and glow for a long period without breaking up if not shaken or otherwise disturbed. This fuel finally reduces to a dust and drops through the grates. It is cheaper than coal.

Pursuit of Enemy Is Continuing

BRITISH HEADQUARTERS — (Canadian Press Despatch from Reuters), Sept. 4.—The great pursuit of the retiring Germans continues. The German rear-guards are quite unable to check our batteries which gallop up behind them and fire point blank into the masses moving eastward. Stiff fighting is probable at Moeuvres, as this is the village connecting the new switch line with the main Hindenburg line. It is linked to it by a redoubt covering a square mile. As, however, we occupy Buissy and Inchy it should not be difficult to turn the Moeuvres redoubt by coming down on the rear of it. Yesterday we were reported to be entering Ytes. We established posts along the western bank of the Nord Canal. The opposite side does not appear to be held in strength, but it simply bristling with machine guns.

German Under Sea Boat Sunk by British Ship

Canadian Press:

LONDON, Sept. 4.—The sinking of a German submarine by a British submarine on patrol, is reported by the Central News. The British craft sighted the German and made for her at full speed, firing two torpedoes, both of which took effect. The German U-boat sank within 15 seconds.

Ushers Donate

The Peter Robinson Chapter I. O. D. E., have hit upon a novel method of raising funds for the Prisoners of War Fund in taking over the ushering in the Grand Opera House. Detachments of five each evening are on hand, and dressed alike in white the girls are really an asset to the general appearance of the Opera House. Mr. Turner expressed himself as quite satisfied with the results of the girls taking over the work and says they are a most happy change. The extra money earned by the Chapter is a decided consideration, helping materially towards supporting their prisoners of war.

KENTUCKY INSTRUCTING ILLITERATE DRAFT MEN.

LEXINGTON, Ky.—The Kentucky Illiteracy Committee, which during the last three years has, through the free co-operation of public school teachers, taught approximately 20,000 people in the isolated sections of the State to read and write, has turned its attention to a new field.

The county school superintendents in all parts of the State were appealed to in teaching the illiterate drafted men to read and write. There is no record of one having refused, and teachers by hundreds at once offered their services. Moonlight schools, which were so successful in teaching the civilian illiterates, were established in every locality and the results have been excellent.

Council Promised Generous Grant to Sailors' Relief Fund

Regular Meeting Last Night Disposed of Considerable Routine Business — Chief Thompson's Reply Regarding Monthly Report of Business License Holders Who May Appear in Police Court.

REQUESTS FOR TREE REMOVALS

A deputation from the Navy League petitioned the Council last night for as generous a grant as possible to the Sailors' Relief Fund, in aid of which a campaign is now in progress throughout the country and will be conducted in Peterborough next week. Judge Huycke, Mr. W. R. Morris, Mr. J. A. Aylmer and Mr. Joseph Wearing briefly outlined the objects of the Fund, which, they added, had been widely published and were well known to the Council. Other members of the deputation were Messrs. Walter Stocker, W. H Dunsford, E. A. Peck, R. B. Rogers, S. J. Jamieson, A. L. Killaly and W. H. Buller.

Mayor Duncan replied that he was in full sympathy with the Sailors' Relief Fund, and the aldermen unanimously endorsed his statement that the Council would make as large a contribution as possible.

It was decided to refer the matter to the Finance committee who will report to the Navy League this week.

New Sewer Connection.

A communication from Mr. J. A. Aylmer, representing the wardens of St. John's church, sought permission to replace the present four inch water and sewer pipes from the church and Sunday school with a six inch sewer to be laid at their own expense. This was granted, with the provision that the work be performed under the supervision of the City Engineer. The old drainage system from the church was used to carry off the water from the organ's motor, and from the Sunday school a four inch sewer extended to the north side of Brock street and emptied into the Water street sewer. Since then a new sewer has been built by the city in the middle of Brock street, extending 105 feet east of Water street. The wardens of St. John's propose to lay a new six inch sewer to this stub and take up the older and smaller lines, one of which recently became obstructed on Water street and would necessitate excavating through the pavement.

Chief Thompson's Reply.

Replying to the Council's request for a monthly report of any license holders who are convicted in police court of any offence, Chief Thompson replied: "I do not feel that I would be justified in submitting the report requested by your honourable body unless instructed to do so by the Board of Police Commissioners."

The Chief wrote that he prepared an annual report, a copy of which was given to the City Clerk.

Ald. Edgar moved, seconded by Ald. Saunders, that the Police Commission be requested to instruct Chief Thompson to make the monthly report desired by the Council.—Carried.

"We don't know that some persons now holding licenses are worthy of them," Ald. Edgar said. "Our by-laws should tend to raise the standard of morals of the community, but convictions in police court of persons holding business licenses would not help raise our morals. I am surprised that the Police Commissioners do not more closely inquire about the persons obtaining them."

Thanks Council For Park.

J. R. Corkery, secretary of the Chautauqua committee, thanked the Council for the use of Central Park.

Statement of Roll.

Tax Collector Green reported as follows for August:

To total amount of roll ..$496,576.24
By amount taken in July and August 334,772.86

Balance $161,803.38

Congress Street Foot Bridge.

The Ontario Department of Public Works notified the Council that its architect had reported the footbridge across the old railway from the end of Congress street was in disrepair and dangerous to the students of the Normal school, who use it.

City Engineer Parsons stated that the bridge was in as good condition as when built, but he was asked to make a written report to the Board of Works.

Enough Fuel Dealers.

The Fuel Administrator's circular letter, announcing the reduction of the province's allowance by 375,000 tons, placed Peterborough's share at 29,670 tons, and added that there are eleven licensed dealers here.

Cellar Under Sidewalk.

Bradburn's Limited were given permission to take up the sidewalk at the rear of the Dominion bank property. It will be used for a coal bin. The walk will be rebuilt by Bradburns Limited.

Wants Trees Removed.

James R. Runnett asked for permission to cut down a pine tree on a city lot on Sherbrooke street near Rutherford avenue. It is about 12 inches in diameter, is quite dead and possesses some fuel value.—Referred to the Board of Works.

Andrew Davidson's request to be allowed to remove three trees from the corner of Benson and Manning avenue was also referred to the Board of Works. Mr. Davidson promised to replace them with young trees.

The Metropolitan Life's Policy Holders Enjoy First Picnic

The Weather Threatened to Mar the Outing But Gradually Cleared and the Big Crowd Had a Fine Day of Amusements at T.A.S. Park.

THE PRIZEWINNERS

While the weather prospects were anything but bright yesterday morning, the policy-holders of the Metropolitan Life and their families turned out over 1,000 strong to attend the first annual picnic given by the company. From 8.30 in the morning the Stoney Lake plied between the T.A.S. grounds, where the picnic was held, taking her loads to the grounds where, in spite of the gloomy morning, everyone kept up spirits, which reached their heights when the clouds lifted in the early afternoon.

The Sports.

After lunch, which was served under cover, some really good sports were held, in which everybody entered heartily. The prize-winners were:

Boys under 10 years—Ernest Wolff.
Boys over 10, under 14—Allen Trussler.
Boys over 15—Ferdinand Wolff.
Wheelbarrow race—Vincent O'Brien and Harold Pollock.
3-legged race—Eric Roberts and Neil Clarke.
Sack race—Eric Roberts.
High jump—Jack Killoran.
Pole race—Ferdinand Wolfe.
Girls under 10 years—Ethel White.
Girls over 10 and under 14—Muriel Todd.
Girls over 15—Mutiel Todd.
Married ladies' race—Mrs. E. White.

Oldest Policy Holder.

To Mrs. F. Matschke, 114 Dublin street, fell the honour of being the oldest policy holder on the grounds, her policy dating from March 1st, 1880.

Mrs. Wells carried off the honours for having the largest family of policy holders, 9 of whom were present. Several families holding 8 policies were also present.

Baseball Game.

An exciting and closely contested game of baseball was played by two scratch teams, the "Never Sweats" defeating the "Rough and Readies" in the finish. P. C. Deamard umpired and assisted in the sports.

The Committees.

The committees which worked out the plans were:

Boys' committee—J. Malane and A. Davis.

Sports committee—J. A. Telford and Neil Tobin.

Ground committee — W. Pope, J. Butler and W. O'Brien.

Thorough Success.

In recording the success of the picnic, which was voted by one and all as being a record for a thoroughly good time, the Victrola loaned by the Heintzman Company may be counted as a big asset. The music was greatly enjoyed. Also the courtesy of the boat hands went a long way and was appreciated by both the management and policy holders.

After a splendid group photo had been taken by Hill, the photographer, the picnic gradually and reluctantly broke up, the last boat returning at 9.30 p.m.

FRANK BARBER IS COUNCIL'S CHOICE FOR ENGINEERING WORK ON NEW HUNTER ST. BRIDGE

Mr. Frank Barber of Toronto was engaged by the Council last night to prepare plans, specifications and estimates and to supervise the erection of the new Hunter street bridge. The special committee which dealt with the applications of the engineers who tendered for the work prepared their report previous to the Council meeting. This report fixes Mr. Barber's fee at four per cent. of the cost of the erection of the bridge but if the city does not proceed with the construction he shall be paid for his plans, specifications and estimates on the basis of two per cent. of the estimated cost, provided that his work is satisfactory and also that his total charge does not exceed $4,000. Ald. Weir moved, seconded by Ald. M. McIntyre that the report be adopted.

The committee had not received and consequently had not considered the applications of the following engineering firms, Harkness, Oxley and Mylrea of Toronto, The Canadian Leonard Construction Co., Arthur Surveyer and Co. Montreal, Bowman and Connor, Toronto, and L. G. Mouchel and Partner Ltd.

Ald. Dobbin urged that all the applications be fully discussed before deciding upon one of them.

Mayor Duncan—This is very important work. It entails a large expenditure of money and the Council is responsible to the ratepayers for it. We should not hurry this along for the sake o ia few weeks. We can't begin the work this fall. We are out to do business in a business like way and we should not hurry it.

Ald. M. McIntyre—We are not hurrying it, we have been to slow.

Ald. Edgar—The committees recommendation is quite wise and proper. I was quite pleased to see that they came to the conclusion they did.

Ald. Jones—I don't think it is necessary to push through this appointment right now. Every Alderman should be here and express his opinion, (Ald. Worth and Ald. Langford were absent). It means the spending of one-quarter of a million dollars by the city.

Ald. M. McIntyre—We should have the plans and estimates ready by January then if we need more money the people may express their opinion on it. I won't support it if it goes over the estimates. But the ratepayers voted for the bridge by a great majority and we should find out now whether we can build it for the sum that was first named.

Ald. Jones—I'm not opposed to the bridge, but we should look thoroughly into the preliminary work.

Ald. Weir—We have our own engineer's figures and we want to appoint a man to make an independent estimate and prepare plans and specifications.

Ald. M. McIntyre said he felt safe in giving the work to either Mr. Barber or to James, London and Hertzberg Ltd.

Not Right Men.

"I don't believe we've got the right man to-night. It's too big a thing to put through in a slipshod way," was Mayor Duncan's unreserved opinion.

Ald. Dobbin moved an amendment seconded by Ald. Taylor that the report be sent back to the committee with instructions to consider all the applications received.

The amendment lost by a vote of 5 to 4. Those who supported it were Mayor Duncan, Ald. Taylor, Dobbin and Jones.

The Barber motion carried with the votes of Aldermen Saunders, Edgar, Weir, A .A. McIntyre and McIntyre.

"I believe the Quaker Oats would be agreeable to the postponement of the work if the condition were unfavorable," said Mayor Duncan.

Householders May Still Buy Sugar for 15 Days' Needs

There is no truth in the rumour that householders will be restricted to 1½ lbs. of sugar a person per month, according to a local wholesale firm. The last order issued by the Food Board concerning sugar limited a householder to fifteen days' supply, and this is still in force. Nor are the grocers compelled to sell yellow sugar with granulated sugar.

"Every car of granulated sugar we get contains one bag of yellow sugar to two bags of granulated sugar, and we sell it to the grocer in that proportion. He may sell the sugar any way he sees fit."

It is also denied that sugar cards will be shortly issued. The only sugar cards issued are those to houses which give fifteen meals or more a day, which are classed as boarding houses. This wholesale firm will likely receive a car-load of sugar about September 15th, and another wholesale firm in town received a car-load yesterday.

Council to Urge More Power From Hydro Commission

"The Hydro-Electric Commission hasn't spent one dollar in the development of power in this district," Mayor Duncan asserted last night, in announcing that a deputation would shortly wait on Sir Adam Beck. The Mayor declared that money had been spent in the development of power in Western Ontario, and it was gradually becoming necessary to obtain more power in the Trent district. A number of manufacturers are expected to accompany the Council's deputation.

CROWN PRINCE RUPPRECHT IS BACK AGAIN

(Special to Examiner.)

Amsterdam, Sept. 4.—Crown Prince Rupprecht of Bavaria, has returned to the front, a semi-official despatch from Munich announced to-day.

Mr. Hall States Reasons Why Power Development Should Not be Suspended

More Power Plants Are Needed Close to Peterboro to Avoid the Hazard of Long Transmission Lines and Especially to Prevent an Actual Shortage—A Little "Shock" for Mr. Burnham.

Mayor Duncan and the City Aldermen are to be very much commended in taking immediate action to make representations to Sir Adam Beck, Chairman of the Hydro-Electric Power Commission to induce him to take immediate steps for the development of Dams numbers 4 and 5 under one head.

Owing to the great demand for electric power in this whole district between Oshawa and Kingston, it is quite evident that the Hydro should have years ago proceeded with the development of several of our water powers that are running to waste because it has been necessary recently for some plants along the Lake front to actually close down for the want of electric power. The existing plants along the whole Trent system are being run to their fullest capacity and still there is a shortage of power. What would the situation be, if we had had a dry season and a consequent decreased supply of water to operate these power plants.

SHORTAGE OF POWER.

In the interests of Peterborough it is essential that Dams 4 and 5 should be immediately developed for the following reasons:—

1. The Power plant at Dam No. 5 has been dismantled and the 1200 horse-power that was produced by that plant is now entirely cut off.

2. The Quaker Oats Co. had a surplus quantity of 1500 horse-power to sell to the Peterborough Light and Power Company now operated by the Public Utilities Commission in Peterborough and that extra supply of 1500 horse-power will now be required by the Quaker Oats Company for its own purposes and will not be available for use by the Power and Light users in Peterborough.

3. These shortages are made up by the transmission of power from the dams at Healey's Falls and further down the Trent River which means that a large portion of our electric energy consumed in Peterborough has to be transmitted along pole lines from Healey's Falls to the Lake Front and thence along the Lake Front through Trenton and Cobourg, Port Hope, and up as far as the Township of Emily and thence East into Peterborough which means an electrical transmission of probably over 100 miles.

THE DANGER OF LONG TRANSMISSION LINES.

4. It is well known that the longer the transmission line the greater the risk of the electric power supply being shut off by accidents, sleet storms and wind storms. A sleet storm combined with wind will frequently destroy miles of transmission lines. This would cause great loss and inconvenience to many of our factories in Peterborough and inconvenience to the household consumers of electric light.

5. The short transmission line between Peterborough and Dams 4 and 5 would eliminate a great deal of this risk to our factories and household consumers.

6. Dams 4 and 5 are capable of developing under one head 4000 horse-power of electric energy at a very moderate cost even in War times. Before the War Messrs. Ross & Holgate, Consulting Engineers of Montreal, estimated the cost of the entire development and equipment at $210,000.

I notice in last Friday's Evening Examiner Mr. Burnham, M.P., stated that I was responsible more than any other person for the arrested development of electric power at or near Peterborough, and he suggested that I hire a hall and he would undertake to prove what he said was true, or make an apology.

COMMISSION PROMISED MUCH.

It is evident that Mr. Burnham has been wholly misinformed as to the facts, because years ago I made all necessary financial arrangements to have these two Dams 4 and 5 developed under one head and they would have been developed long ago but for the interference of the Hydro Power Commission. I am not finding fault with the Commission as they desired to adopt Public ownership of water powers, but they must not be allowed to avoid the responsibility of doing their duty.

No one accuses Mr. Burnham of arresting Power development because no one ever expects Mr. Burnham to really do anything for the general benefit of the public. Happy are the Electors who expect nothing, for they shall not be disappointed.

Will Interest the School Children in the Navy League

Members of Local Boards Receive Permission to Talk to Scholars—Inspector Mowat Reports to the Board of Education That There is Considerable Overcrowding in the Schools.

At the regular meeting of the Board of Education last night, a delegation, composed of Judge Huycke, Mr. N. H. Dunsford, Mr. E. A. Peck and Mr. W. R. Morris, waited on the Board and asked that in view of the coming campaign for the Navy League the children from the local schools should be allowed to enter into the work. To enroll their sympathies while they are young would stimulate patriotism. Towards this end Judge Huycke asked the Board's permission to send ladies from the I.O.D.E. Chapters to the local schools on Friday afternoon next at 3.45 and inspire the pupils with the traditions of the British navy and subsequently to enroll them to membership of the Navy League. The fee for pupil membership is 25 cents, and each member will receive a button. The campaign is conducted from an educational and sentimental side. The request was heartily granted. The Board was invited to attend the organization meeting of the Navy League to-morrow night.

A letter was read from Mr. A. E. Dixon, stating that surplus water from the Central school is undermining the residence of Mr. W. J. Weeks, and requested that the School Board take some action in having the course of surface water directed elsewhere. "He'd better move his house," commented Mr. Denne.

The high cost of supplies used by janitors, and the general advance in cost of material caused the eight janitors in the local schools to petition the Board for an increase of $10 a month each. As this would mean a considerable outlay, there was some deliberation, after which the matter was eventually left to the Committee on Appointments.

Holiday For Pupils.

On the request from the secretary of the Industrial Exhibition, the Board granted the annual half holiday to the school pupils to attend the Fair.

Will Teach Agriculture.

As a result of Mr. R. F. Downey's completion of a course at the Guelph Agricultural school, agriculture will be taught to a certain extent in the Central school. The course Mr. Downey proposed will not interfere with the general routine, but combine with nature study. The government grants are included.

Collegiate Attendance.

Mr. H. R. H. Kenner reported that the Collegiate attendance is 344 for this year, and one new teacher, Miss Faint, has been added to the staff to teach French and German. On his request the High school English grammar used last year will be used this year in Form II of the Collegiate.

Schools Overcrowded.

Mr. Mowat issued a timely hint to the Board of a difficulty that will undoubtedly confront them. At present there is considerable overcrowding in the schools and the only solution for this lies in transferring, in one case, an entire class from one school to another. In a second case, 12 pupils were transferred. In this matter Mr. Mowat warned the Board that in all probability letters, both personal and through the press, will be circulated from irate parents who cannot see the necessity of such readjustment. The Board admitted such steps as have been taken were the only possible solution.

A New Room.

With the increased attendance at the East City school, it has been found necessary to open a new room for the overflow from Form III, with the supply teacher in charge. Mr. Mowat has been given power to act in the matter of settling the new room.

Quoit Bed.

No Half Holiday To-morrow Afternoon

The Early Closing and Half Holiday Season Appreciated.

The early closing of the stores in the City at 5 o'clock during the past two months and the weekly Thursday half holiday came to a successful termination with the end of the month and end of the week on Saturday last, the new order of things coming in without any mid-week break to disturb it.

The months of July and August just passed were exceptionally favourable for a measure of this kind, cold, very hot and exceedingly fine weather such as we had would have curtailed the shopping hours in any event.

One class of shopper, however, who did not take kindly to the early closing at first was the farmer. He did not as a rule turn back the clock but carried on his daily affairs after the old order and felt to get into town and shop before five o'clock which was four o'clock with him, that this added to the time required to get into the city spoiled the afternoon altogether, so far as work on the farm was concerned.

However, there is no doubt but that a great many people benefitted by the move and the majority generally rules. The cash drawer of the merchant will let him know if he did his anticipated summer's business, the busy clerk will have realized the benefit of the shorter business day and the shorter week and be prepared for the busier seasons to follow and the householder will recollect whether he or she has been inconvenienced or not.

The success or otherwise of any new move in a community is usually ascertained by manner in which similar proposition is received on later occasions and it will be a simplier matter next year to get an expression of opinion with this years experience as a guide.

K. C. APPEAL IS POSTPONED TO AVOID NAVY WEEK

Deferred Until October in Order That the Two Campaigns May Not Conflict.

The Knights of Columbus of Canada will, between Sept. 15th and the 23rd, next, inaugurate a campaign to raise five hundred thousand dollars ($500,000) for Army Huts for our Canadian Soldiers and while this campaign will be the greatest and most important work ever undertaken by them, they feel that because the cause is a most worthy one and because they will appeal to all creeds and classes alike that their objective will be more than obtained.

This fund is for the purpose of building army huts for Canadian soldiers overseas, where recreation, rest and amusement may be furnished them, where everybody will be welcome regardless of race or creed and where everything will be free for the men both here and overseas It is with every reason, therefore, that the order relies upon the fullest support not alone of Canadian Catholics but of Canadians of all creeds and classes. With thousands of Knights now in the service and tens of thousands of Catholic boys bearing arms for the Motherland it is safe to say their fellow citizens knew them for what they are—second to none in practical patriotism. The campaign will be extensively advertised and vigorously conducted and capable speakers will also be brought here to lay the facts clearly and concisely before the public and explain more in detail the aims and objects of this appeal. However, while the Campaign throughout the Dominion is set for the week of Sept. 15th, it has been deemed advisable locally, owing to the fact that the Navy League Canvas has been postponed a week which would bring it on just a few days ahead of the Knights of Columbus appeal to postpone the drive, here in Peterboro until sometime in October.

It was felt that two campaigns of a general nature coming so close together would only act as detriment to both, so the Knights of Columbus have decided to postpone theirs until October when due notice of the date will be given. The local committee on arrangements has Dr. McNulty as chairman and John R. Corkery as secretary and already a number of the best workers on the recent Red Triangle drive have volunteered their services which have been very graciously accepted. The Knights of Columbus therefore, ask you to keep their campaign in mind and be ready with your donation, big or small when their canvassers call upon you.

CAN THE HOUSEWIFE BE HELPED OUT

The Matter of Canning and Preserving in a Chaotic State This Season.

The government's regulation that one hears repeated everywhere that only 25c worth of sugar can be purchased at one time is causing the housewife grave concern. This is the season of canning and preserving our domestic fruits and unless they are "done down" as the saying is, right now there will be a great fruit loss and many homes will be far short of the winter's supply of canned fruit. The situation so far as sugar is concerned many warrant the regulation but if it could be postponed until after the preserving season it would save a great loss in fruit, relieve the anxious housewife and allow the sealers to be filled with home made preserves instead of making it necessary to purchase the product of the canning factories, whom the average citizen feels will not be seriously interfered with.

WEDDING BELLS

DOWNER—GUTHRIE.

On Monday, September 2, William James Downer was united in marriage to Josephine Franvis Guthrie, both of this city, by the Rev. A. J. Thomas. They left on the early morning train for Toronto, and returning will reside in this city.

HAMILTON—CUNNINGHAM.

Quietly this morning at 7 o'clock in Knox church, the wedding was solemnized of Minnie, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Robert Cunningham, 378 Stewart street, and William John Hamilton, of Peterborough, who lately returned from three years' service overseas, after being wounded. Rev. Mr. McKenzie performed the ceremony. On account of a recent bereavement in the family, the wedding was very quiet and the bridal party unattended.

The bride, who was given away by her father, looked charming in her travelling suit of navy broadcloth, navy hat and fox furs, and carried a shower bouquet of Ophelia roses.

Immediately after the wedding ceremony Mr. and Mrs. Hamilton left, amid showers of confetti, for a wedding trip to Hamilton, Toronto and other cities. On their return they will reside at 378 Stewart street.

GOODFELLOW — SANDY.

Omemee, Sept. 3. (Special.) — The home of Mr. and Mrs. John Sandy was the scene of a pretty wedding on Wednesday afternoon, when their second daughter, Maye, became the bride of Mr. Cecil Goodfellow, Peterboro.

To the strains of the wedding march ably rendered by Miss Blanche Stinson, the bride entered the parlour leaning on the arm of her father and looking sweet and girlish in her pearl embroidered gown of cream crepe de chine, with wreath of orange blossoms and carrying an armful of fragrant white roses. Miss Evelyn Sandy, sister of the bride, acted as bridesmaid, and presented a charming picture in her frock of silver grey crepe de chene trimmed with shell pink ninon, and carrying pink roses, while Mr. E. Kidd of Peterboro, ably assisted the groom.

The ceremony was performed in the presence of about 25 guests by the Rev. J. Lewis, assisted by Rev. W. J. Smyth, of Toronto, after which the guests were conducted to the dining-room, where a bounteous wedding dinner was served.

The bridal couple left amidst showers of confetti and good wishes for their honeymoon, which will be spent at Toronto, Niagara Falls, and points west, the bride travelling in a suit of nigger brown, with small fall hat to match, high white kid boots, and white fur neck scarf.

The groom's gift to the bride was a handsome black leather purse containing a substantial cheque.

The presents were both numerous and costly, showing the high esteem in which the bride is held.

After their return Mr. and Mrs. Goodfellow will reside at 190 Brock Street, Peterboro.

Toronto, Sept. 3. — Food Controller Thomson has issued one more proclamation which is going to hit the patrons of the restaurants and quick lunch mighty hard, and means that from to-day only one teaspoonful of sugar will be permitted to be served with each meal. If a man orders fruit cereal, fruit and coffee, one teaspoonful will have to suffice.

The order, of which a copy has been received by the Retail Merchants Association, reads:

"On and after the first day of September, and until after further notice, the amount of sugar to be used in public eating houses shall not exceed two pounds for every ninety meals served (for all purposes, including the sweetening of beverages and cooking) and the allotment of sugar to the public eating places shall not be more than 60 per cent. of the average monthly quantity of sugar used during the year ending December 31, 1917. 'Tis sweet to know we'll meet again
Where parting is no more,
For our dear child we loved so well
Has crossed to yonder shore.
God knows how much we miss her,
He counts the tears we shed;
He whispers, "Hush, she only sleeps,
Your daughter is not dead."

Some day, some time, our eyes shall see
The face we loved so well;
Some time, some day, her hand we'll clasp,
To never say farewell.

Mr. and Mrs. J. T. McCoy.

THURSDAY MORNING BULLETINS

CLOSING ON CAMBRAI.

LONDON, Sept. 5.—Canal Du Nord and Tortille River have been crossed on a wide front north of Moiselanias by English and Welsh troops. Canadians reported to have reached the west bank of the Canal on a front of two thousand yards. Excellent progress is being made toward Cambrai.

FRENCH MAKE BIG GAINS.

PARIS, Sept. 5.—In addition to forcing the Germans to retreat north of the Oise and on the Vesle front, the French made big gains northwest of Noyon. The Greatest gains were made north of the Vesle which has been crossed on a twenty-mile front. The French have reached a point six miles from Vailly on the Aisne River.

BATTLE LINE SHORTENED.

LONDON, Sept. 5.—The French reduced the length of the western battle front by sixty miles since July 18.

SKYSCRAPER BOMBED

CHICAGO, Sept. 4—Thirteen-million-dollar Federal Building was bombed this afternoon. Several were killed and seventy-five injured.

Sports In War Time.

A new event is being added to the list of athletic contests participated in at college track meets. It is grenade throwing. Dummy grenades have been placed on the market which are exact duplicates in weight and appearance of the deadly hand missiles employed by our men in the trenches. In recognition of the fact that correct throwing may be something more vital than a mere accomplishment for our young men, college coaches are giving it a place along with shot putting and hammer throwing, indicating that even our sports are being affected by the world war.

Bolsheviki Executed Hero But Permitted Coward to Live

Had Saved Russian Fleet at Helsingfors But Aroused the Suspicions of Trotsky—Contrast With Treatment of a Drunken Coward.

BOLSHEVIST JUSTICE

(By Joseph Shaplen.)
(United Press Correspondent.)

NEW YORK, Sept. 5. — Bolshevik "justice" killed Capt. Schastny, patriot and hero, and saved the life of Dibenko, coward, traitor, and drunken officer.

The stories of the two men bring out so clearly the "quality of mercy" of the bolsheviki, that I relate them together.

Capt. Schastny was a brilliant young Russian naval officer. He was a socialist revolutionist of the conservative wing. When the Germans landed troops in Finland and began their advance on Helsingfors where nearly the entire Russian Baltic fleet was stationed at the time, Capt. Schastny, with the personnel of the fleet reduced to 1-3 and none of the ships being ready to put to sea, was given command and requested by the sailors to do his best to transfer the fleet to Kronstadt and thus save it from falling into the hands of the Germans. For a while the sailors thought they would be unable to move the fleet from Helsingfors in time and had begun to make preparations to blow it up. When the Germans heard of their plan they published a proclamation stating that the blowing up of the Baltic fleet by the Russian sailors would mean the execution of as many of them as may be captured.

The Germans wanted to seize the Baltic fleet and thus make good all the naval losses they suffered throughout the war. The only thing left was to transfer the fleet to Kronstadt. Under the able and brilliant command of Capt. Schastny this was accomplished in time. When the Germans reached Helsingfors they found most of the Russian fleet gone.

Some three months later Trotsky, bolshevik war minister, called Capt. Schastny for an alleged conference to Moscow. As the captain entered Trotsky's office, the latter walked out, summoned two red guardsmen and ordered Schastny put under arrest.

Trotsky accused Schastny of engaging in counter revolutionary conspiracies against the bolshevik government, of attempting to rouse the sailors of the Baltic fleet, among whom Schastny was very popular, to revolt against the directorship of Lenine and save Russia from German and other foreign domination.

Schastny was put on trial. Krilenko, former commander-in-chief of the bolshevik "armies," was prosecuting attorney. Trotsky was the only witness. In a dramatic three-hour speech he demanded the execution of Schastny. Among other things he said:

"Capt. Schastny has performed a brave task, but like every counter revolutionist, Capt. Schastny had the right to engage in counter revolution conspiracies against the Soviet government. He had no right to play with the fate of the fleet."

A sailor in the courtroom could not stand for the latter.

"How about you playing with the fate of Russia?" he cried. Capt. Schastny, Russian patriot, republican and saviour of the Baltic fleet, was executed. His last words were:

"One must know how to die bravely in a revolution."

A few weeks prior to the execution of Capt. Schastny another man, high in the councils of the Bolshevik government, chief commissary of the Baltic fleet, was also on trial. His name is Dibenko. He was accused of cowardice, drunkenness and conduct unbecoming of a revolutionary leader. At the trial it was proved that when sent at the head of a detachment of 2,000 Baltic sea sailors to stop the German advance on Narva, in February, he got drunk and ran away, leaving his men in the lurch. Such cowardice is certainly punishable by death, especially by any self-respecting revolutionary government. But Dibenko, the coward and drunkard, was a bolshevik. He was found guilty and simply expelled from the bolshevik party. He is alive to-day and is engaging in silly braggadocio and in robber raids up and down the Volga.

Thus does bolshevik justice work.

Capt. Schastny performed a brave task. He is dead.

Dibenko was a coward and ran away, surrendering Narva to the Germans. He is alive and free.

The Death of R. J. Mulligan.

The announcement of the sudden death of the late R. J. Mulligan at his home in Omemee on Saturday morning, came as a shock to his host of friends in town and throughout the district.

The deceased sustained a paralytic stroke in February last, but recently his condition was such as greatly to encourage his relatives and friends. The late Mr. Mulligan was born in Emily Township about fifty-eight years ago, and has resided in Omemee practically all his life. His parents pre-deceased him about ten years ago. For thirty years the deceased conducted a drug store in Omemee, and was prominently identified with the growth and development of the village. He was prominent in all the activities and movements in ths history of the village, and served in the capacity of reeve for several years, and was also Warden of the County of Victoria. The late Mr. Mulligan possessed an affable and genial disposition. He was one of nature's noblemen and always wore his heart on his sleeve. It was a pleasure to meet and converse with the deceased on any occasion, his geniality, good nature, and optimism winning scores of friends who will miss the hearty hand-shake and the sincerity and warmth of his greeting.

The deceased was a Methodist in religion, and was prominent in the activities of the church, being choir leader for a great many years. In politics he was a Conservative. The deceased leaves to mourn his loss his sorrowing wife (who was miss Amy MaCrea, of Omemee), one son, Lieut. C. Mulligan, Toronto; one sister, Mrs. G. Adams, Lindsay, and four brothers, George W., of Peterborough; Hurry, of Rochester, and Dr. Walter and Howard, of Fort Coulonge, Quebec.

The funeral from his late residence to Emily cemetery on Monday was largely attended.

The country south and east of Arras has been the scene of a tremendous Allied victory. Canadian and English troops have broken and hold the famous Hindenburg switch line running north from Queant up above the Scarpe River. The country between Queant and Cambrai is now the scene of terrific fighting with the capture of Cambrai as a possibility within a very short time, and the consequent wrecking of all the German plans. The area in this map may be the scene of the pivotal fight of this year's campaign. But it is intimated that there will be sensational news from the section between Noyon and St. Quentin

EXPORT OF WHEAT IS UNDER CONTROL

All Purchase and Sale Now in Hands of Canadian Government.

OTTAWA, Sept. 4.— Complete control of the purchase and sale for export of Canadian wheat has been assumed by the Government. Control of methods of export has also been assumed.

Under the new arrangement the situation will be:

1. The price for wheat for the crop of 1918 has been fixed and will be maintained for the crop year.

2. The purchase of wheat and grains for export and for internal demands will be thrown open to dealers and shippers as before the war, subject, however, to supervision and control by the Government.

3. The Government will guarantee the purchase of all surplus merchantable wheat raised by Canadian farmers in the year 1918 at the price already fixed.

4. The apportionment and distribution of wheat for Canadian mills and for export will be made under Government control and also will be the supervision and allotment of cars and lake tonnage, arrangements for lake insurance and shortages, and the mechanism for insuring the steady, speedy and effective transport of wheat from the head of the lakes to the seaboard.

5. The Board of Grain Supervisors whose members represent the interests of grain producers of shipping and forwarding agencies, of the millers and consumers of grain products, has been entrusted by the Government with the carrying out of the above programme and clothed with full powers for executing the same.

Under the arrangement of last year, the sole purchase of wheat for export was placed in the hands of the Wheat Export Company, whose headquarters are in London with branches in New York and Winnipeg.

The result was that the normal and usual Canadian agencies for purchasing, selling and forwarding wheat across the lakes and by rail to the seaboard, were practically excluded from doing business. Incident to this, control of purchase by the Wheat Export Company, the business of internal distribution to the mills and the control of the same company. Now that the price of wheat has been fixed and speculation therein eliminated it is not considered necessary to continue such arrangements to the exclusion and detriment of Canadian dealers and shippers.

By reason of its intimate relations to the Ocean Transport system and owing to the co-operation of Canadian transport agencies, the Wheat Export Company was able efficiently to carry on the work of transport to destination. It is not proposed to relax in any particular the central supervision and direction necessary to secure efficient handling from the head of the lakes to the port of delivery on the Atlantic seaboard

CATTLE MARKET

TORONTO, Sept. 4.—Receipts at the Union Stock Yards for Wednesday were 77 cars, 753 cattle, 139 calves, 720 hogs, 511 sheep and lambs, which was a fair run of common cattle, and a scarcity of good choice stock.

Lambs were steady to firm, a few head selling at $17.75, but the general run of sales stood at $17.50. Cattle prices were unchanged from yesterday's figures and hogs still remain at $19.50 per cwt., fed and watered.

Calves were steady and the offerings were small.

Trade for a Wednesday was a little draggy. A number of visitors were noticed around the yards, this being Farmers' Day at the Exhibition, and although it gave the market an aspect of a very busy day, sales were not above the average.

"The Girl Who Had No God"

By MARY ROBERTS RINEHART
Author of "The Man in Lower Ten," "The After House," Etc.

"But surely the police——"

Mrs. Bryant flushed with anger. "The police!" she said. "It wouldn't surprise me at all to discover that the police are in with the thieves. Look at the condition of the country! It has been terror-ridden for the last two or three years. You yourself are a victim. Your poor father!"

Actually she had detested old Hilary. She sat forward on the edge of her chair and spoke with great unction.

"There is a band of organized, intelligent bandits working in this neighborhood, Miss Kingston, a band of murderers. In these days of feminism it wouldn't astonish me at all to discover that some woman is at the head of it. The things that have been planned have been so fiendishly clever!"

Mrs. Bryant rose.

"It shows how demoralizing such things are," she said. "I assure you that I never look at a woman's throat these days without expecting to see my pearl."

From that dangerous ground she stepped quickly to the burning of the parish house, which she believed was the work of militant suffragettes.

"The dear rector is not a feminist," she said. "His assistant, I fear has a strong tendency in that direction. But he is a wonderful person, really. Just imagine, seventy-eight thousand dollars was collected in Saint Jude's Church this morning for rebuilding the parish house!"

She turned at the doorway.

He's single, and very attractive, my dear. The entire village is trying to marry him. There is talk of the doctor's daughter, a common little thing."

When she had gone, Elinor, a little faint and dizzy, went out on the terrace. All at once she realized that the barrier between Ward and herself was not only of his faith against her unbelief. There was the insurmountable gulf between his world and her world. She did not fit into his life. Into his arms, perhaps, into his life—never.

Walter would try to get the money. She must get word to him somehow, for if the Bryant pearl was recovered and Boroday given his freedom, money would not be an immediate necessity.

She paced the terrace and tried to think it out. For Talbot to go back to the city an hour; for the delivery of the special delivery, another hour. Then the police would have to come out by train or motor. With the best of luck, it would be four o'clock before the pearl could be recovered.

There were a dozen possibilities; the Chief might be out of town; the pearl might be recovered from the box without his assistance. In that case he would not hold to his agreement with Boroday.

She tried to head Walter off, but she could not locate him. At none of his various haunts could she find him by telephone; he was not at the Dago's; at the taxicab office he was said to be laid off for the day. As the white clouds of the afternoon turned to flame in the sunset, Elinor's face grew set and hard.

"I'm not blind. I'll get him for this!"

That was what he had said. He would go after the money that night, and there was murder in his heart.

Old Henriette, watching Elinor's set face, grew fretful. She squealed if a door slammed; brought food that Elinor could not eat, and finally, divining a crisis, tried stealthily by telephone to locate Talbot or Lethbridge and failed.

"You had better eat a bite or two," she entreated.

Elinor's nerves, too, were on edge. "I don't want it," she said.

"Just a little soup!"

"If you bring that tray here again I shall throw it out of the window."

Henriette was cheered. Elinor, whitelipped and speechless, was alarming. Elinor in one of her rare rages was reassuring.

By seven o'clock Elinor knew what she must do: go to Ward, tell him what she feared, and how she knew. She was not craven but her very soul was sick. She sought about for some way to evade the issue or to postpone it, and finally she struck on one. On plain note paper she scrawled a little note in a feigned hand.

"An attempt will be made to-night to secure the fund raised at the morning service. Be advised and give it to some one else to keep over night."

But she realized before she had finished it the uselessness of such an attempt. Ward would not transfer a danger.

The night had fallen. A line of cars from the Country Club was carrying town people and villagers home to the late dinners of the golf season. Groups of girls and men in Summer garments chatting gaily, passed under the wall of her garden. Down in the valley, straggling lines of church goers moved decorously toward the churches. A ragged child stood in the road below her garden and wept. Elinor ran down to him and took him up in her arms. When she had soothed him she felt quieter. She went into the house and put on her hat. There was no message from Talbot; no word of Huff.

Evening service was over when she reached Saint Jude's. The last straggler had gone and Ward was not in sight. She avoided the street lights. She felt sure that Walter was in the vicinity; his keen eyes missing nothing.

He had put his hand on her before she knew he was near.

"Worshipping again!" he jeered.

"I have not been in the church." Her quick mind was scheming desperately ahead. "I have been alone this evening. When you did not come, I—I—"

He swung her around.

"You were looking for me?"

"I thought you might be here. You said last night——"

The memory of the night before stung him. He released her wrist.

"Walter, I am afraid! I tried to make you understand last night, but you would not listen. If he were roused, he might be dangerous. Don't think, because he is a churchman—"

She was talking against time. She had her plan now.

"I can take care of myself," said Huff sullenly. But he kept his place beside her as she started back. Her solicitude was for him, then. She cared after all. But it wouldn't do to unbend too much. Elinor had treated him with a high hand. His very pulse ached with her nearness, but he did not ouch her.

He left her without even a handclasp.

"You might wish me luck."

"I wish you safety," she replied. He stood down in the road and watched her shadowy figure threading its way along the garden paths. He had a wild impulse to run after her, to kneel in the earth at her feet and cry out for her old tenderness, for her wistful-eyed caresses. Then into his suspicious young heart crept the vision of Elinor's face when he had planned his new coup.

"I shall warn him," she had said.

Huff's mouth was hard as he turned and walked down the hill.

A NECESSITY IN THE HOUSE.

Most of the common ills of life arise from a torpid, sluggish condition of the Liver, Kidneys or Bowels, and because they act on each of these organs in a direct and specific way Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills overcome serious and painful diseases over which ordinary medicines have no control.

"I Need Hardly Say" how thankful I was to get out alive, and fully made up my mind that I would write and tell you how useful Dr. Chase's Ointment was," writes a survivor of the Gallipoli Peninsula campaign. "We found that it afforded instant relief from poison from shrubs and bushes, and got to using it for all manner or minor wounds and grazes."

REMEMBER BY GIVING

CAN you ever forget the stark horror when the newspapers spread the word that on May 7th, 1915, the unspeakable Germans had sunk the Lusitania, murdering women. children, and non-combatants?

¶ The horror is very fresh in the minds of the widows and orphans of the heroic crew.

¶ To their mental distress is added the torture of threatened poverty. Governments do not make recognition of their needs,—makes no allowance as in the case of dependents of the men of the Army and Navy.

¶ The widows and orphans must rely on your benevolence, as do the families of 15,000 merchant seamen lost in the war, victims of the U-Boat and the floating mine.

¶ Surely no life was ever more nobly given than by these unsung heroes who go down to the sea in ships.

¶ What shall be said to their dependents? Let your cry be "They shall not want!" and make your offering as large as a worthy sacrifice will allow.

OUR DAILY SHORT STORY

The "Telegraph Touch"

By Ellis Lee

Edson Worth was dreaming of Marie Duntley, when he should have been wide awake. Marie was the night operator at Wolf Springs, forty miles west, yet he felt as near to her as though she was the width of a partition beyond him. Edson had been at Merrivale in charge of the station for two years. He used to boast—and prove—that he could identify the sender of half a dozen ticks over the wire, through familiarity with the touch."

"It isn't the ticks, they are all the same, plain as the alphabet," Edson used to say. "But every operator has a touch essentially his own. It's like a mannerism in speech. It takes an expert to detect it. I call myself one. So, I always know who is talking."

Edson had been "talking" up to an hour previous, little snatches of greeting, snappy raillery, to greet responsive brief words that made Edson sure he was not indifferent to the bright, dainty little operator at Wolf Springs.

"Why, when Marie is on the wire, the first tick of the call sends a thrill through me. It's just as if our fingers met," Edson had told his sister once. "That must mean true love, hey, Maggie?" and Maggie had encouraged his conception with a smiling nod, and Edson was content.

He was all alone, and it was nearly midnight. He had slipped down in his chair into a comfort seeking position, for routine stuff was out of the way, and there was nothing due on train detail under an hour, unless special orders came out. Usually Edson read or smoked to keep awake. His thoughts of fair Marie, however, lulled him into a hazy, pleasant thrall, and insensibly he glided into somnolency.

Edson was guilty of a fatal lack of diligence., If No. 27 on the North Branch was reported on time, he was to telegraph the bridge station at Woodville to hold 34 on the main until the branch train had cleared the bridge. Orders were due within the hour. For the hour and beyond it Edson slumbered. He awoke with a start. Such a thing had never happened before. His first glance was at the clock. He sprang to his feet, a white horror in his face, his body in a cold perspiration. Train 34 had passed eighty minutes agone, and he had not heard it, and—

"—met on the bridge. Both trains were late and must have disregarded signals. Casualties heavy and two coaches in the river, completely submerged."

A hand of ice seemed to seize his heart in a crushing grip, his brain reeled. Before his mental vision there passed a frightful picture of carnage and destruction. For the moment and for hours later Edson Worth was an insane, irresponsible creature of frantic unreason and impulse.

His first action was to close his ears to the monotonous drone of what he reconized as a fragment of a press dispatch. He dashed from the station like a being pursued by dreadful phantoms. That noon he had received his monthly salary and it was still intact in his pocket. He passed the cottage in which his sister lived, but only increased his reckless rate of speed. Its welcoming lights had no influence to lure him to shelter, to compassion, to safety!

Edson tore along the dark country road until, breathless, exhausted, he sank to the platform of a railroad depot on a line going north. A train came along within the hour. Edson entered its dimly lighted smoking car and crouched in the corner of its darkest seat.

"Where to?" challenged the conductor.

"Terminus," sounded hoarsely in the parched throat of the new passenger.

He paid the fare, knowing from the pretentious amount named that it was over two hundred miles ahead. One urging impulse directed him—to get as fast and as far from home and friends and all the world as speedily as possible.

The wilderness, the furtherest outposts of civilization seemed to beckon him on—he, an Ishmael, accursed of all mankind as a murderer! His crime crushed him. He would bury himself amid an obscurity barren of men and homes. He might not be able to forget, but he would meet with no familiar poignant reminders of what had been, what was never to be again.

The pineries—it came to him like an inspiration as at the end of the first stage of his journey he took another train, still headed north. Two roughly garbed men in a seat in front of him were discussing their plans and prospective destinations—a logging camp far over the Canadian border.

"They shall be my guides," he reflected. "Surely I can get work, and work may enable me in time to drive this awful dread and remorse from my guilty soul."

Certainly it was remote enough from civilization, the hermit spot he had chosen. Little danger of his identity or his crime penetrating this vast solitude of nature. When he arrived at the camp, the foreman of one of the logging gangs was glad to engage his services, for help was scarce that season.

Edson, as Mark Lane, was quartered in a rudely constructed hut with a mate, a lively genial young fellow about his own age. They messed at one of the big eating sheds, but slept in the ten-by-twelve shack with a narrow fireplace and some skins for bed covering. Ned Walters strove hard to break through the reserve of his mate. And at last he succeeded. Gradually Edson became so that he longed for and cherished the companionship. Ned Walters told of a wife and little child, whom he had been forced to leave to seek work where he could find it. He had landed up against the hard servitude of the logging camp. Once a month he sent to the nearest post office with the camp messenger his entire salary, to be forwarded to the loved ones at home. One day he sat reading and rereading a letter he had received from his wife. It seemed to oppress him greatly.

"Bad news," insinuated Edson in sympathetic inquiry.

"Pretty bad," responded Walters. "You see, our few sticks of furniture were mortgaged, and they are bringing the pressure of collection to bear. I can't send enough to run the house and release the debt."

"Will that help?" asked Edson, handing over his pay envelope.

"Yes, but—"

"Money is no use to me. I have no home, no friends to send it to," murmured Edson in a broken voice. "You are welcome to it, mate."

"It will be repaid, believe me that!" cried Walters, overcome with relief and joy.

One month later Edson Worth was taken down with a two-weeks' spell of fever. Walters nursed him constantly. When Edson recovered, Walters informed him that a relative of his wife had come to the rescue of the family and had secured an opening for work for him back in his home city.

"You will receive back that money you so generously loaned me just as soon as I get my bearings," promised Walters.

It was pretty lonesome for Edson after this chance friend left him. Then one day he made a discovery that unsettled him greatly. On a strip of paper lying under the bed he observed penciled notations, his own name, that of the station he had deserted and the name of Marie Duntley.

Edson tried to figure out the meaning of this. The handwriting was that of Walters. Suddenly his mind was illumined. In his fevered delirium he had bared all the story of the past, and Walters had it in mind to investigate it when he returned to civilization: no matter what kindly motive might impel him, there was danger of his setting the emissaries of the law upon his track.

Cowardly fear oppressed the forlorn refugee. He decided to leave the camp. The first sledge over to Warrenton, the nearest post, Edson as a passenger. There was no train for twenty-four hours. The little station was free to all. He slept upon one of its benches that night, got his breakfast outside and then sat down in the station again to wait for the train.

Edson had dozed. Only himself and the depot agent were in evidence. He aroused at the sound of the ticking of the telegraph instrument. Then he sat bolt upright like one turned to stone, for the message came over the wires:

"At any expense learn at once if a man calling himself Mark Lane is still at the logging camp." And the sender of the message—oh! he could not mistake that peculiar telegraph touch—was Marie Duntley! His senses reeled, he doubted the evidence of reason. What could it mean? She, his love, the fond spirit of all his dreams way up here at land's end, and seeking him! Only love, loyal love, could bring about this situation. Edson staggered to the window of the little office.

"That wire," he spoke in an unsteady tone—"from Bassville?"

"Yes. What's the matter, friend?"

"I am the person inquired about. Wire back that I will be at Bassville on the next train."

What was he rushing into? Upon what vague menacing fate? What was he to meet? Marie, only Marie!

And, joy and rapture and love in her radiant face, she greeted him twelve hours later.

"My poor dead! my suffering, desolate love!" she sobbed. "Your friend, Mr. Walters, came to me, and I left everything to bear to you the tidings of wonderful happiness."

"The wreck at the bridge—"

"Not Merrivale bridge, on our line, but one hundred miles away. You slept at your post and misconstrued it all. Close your eyes and put your face close to mine, heart of my heart, for whom I have pined and pined, and loved, and then a little prayer, a fervent word of gratitude, that the dark cloud of your life is lifted at last!"

"Thank God for Tea" —Sydney Smith

In Sydney Smith's delightful volume, "Lady Holland's Memoirs," there appears this passage:

"Thank God for Tea! What would the world do without Tea? How did it exist? I am glad I was not born before Tea."

A more concise testimonial to the joys of Tea drinking could hardly be written.

Thought She Would Lose Her Little Girl With Diarrhoea

Thousands of infants die annually who could be saved by the timely use of Dr. Fowler's Extract of Wild Strawberry.

There can be no doubt about it.

During the seventy-two years that this wonderful remedy has been on the market, it has been proved conclusively that it is the best for diarrhoea, dysentery, colic, cramps, cholera infantum, and all looseness of the bowels, especially when the children are teething.

Many of the imitations of "Dr. Fowler's" being offered to the public to-day are positively dangerous, as they often check the diarrhoea too suddenly, cause inflammation and leave the bowels in a constipated condition. "Dr. Fowler's" will not do this, but will impart a healthy tone to the mucous surface, and stop the diarrhoea in an easy and natural way.

Mrs. M. Tyler, Orland, Ont., writes: "I have used your wonderful medicine for nine years with great satisfaction. My little girl was only five months old, and she was so sick with diarrhoea I thought she would die. I was advised by a friend to try Dr. Fowler's Extract of Wild Strawberry, and it gave her quick relief. I have used it ever since for the whole of my family, six in all, and can praise it more than anything I ever used."

The genuine is put up by The T. Milburn Co., Limited, Toronto, Ont. Price, 35c.

GERMANS RETREATING TO ST. QUENTIN

GREAT BRITISH GAINS IN FLANDERS

FOCH STRIKES AGAIN ENEMY IS ON THE RUN

Germans in Full Retreat Before the French Not Only on the Southern Flank of the Picardy Battlefront But Further South as Well, the Franco-American Forces Having Crossed the Vesle River.

ADVANCE IS STEADY

PARIS, Sept. 5.— The German retreat before the French north-east of Noyon continued during the night. French troops kept in touch with the enemy rear guards and pushed after the retreating foe east of the Canal Du Nord.

Franco-American forces, pursuing the Germans north of the Vesle, have reached the line of the Aisne, according to advices from the front this morning. Advancing north of the Vesle, French and American troops reached the crest of the ridge dominating the River Aisne. In the Nesle region on the Somme front, the French crossed the Somme canal near Voyennes and Offoy. Just to the south they have reached the region beyond Hombleux, Esmery-Hallon and Flavy-Le-Meldeux.

Between the Ailette and the Aisne the towns of Clamecy, Braye and Missy-Sur-Aisne have been captured. The operations on the Vesle have been extended to the east, and a crossing has been effected between Venteaux and Jonchery.

Advance is Steady

(By Webb Miller.)
(Special to The Examiner.)

PARIS, Sept. 5.— (10.20 a.m.). — North of the Oise on the southern flank of the Picardy battle front, the French line is pushing forward hourly, according to advices from the field to-day. The advance is so steady that it is impossible to outline the present location of the foremost troops. The Germans are withdrawing in the general direction of St. Quentin. According to captured German officers the enemy has established a new provisional defence line which runs through Ham, Berlancourt and Dampocourt. Berlancourt is just north of Guiscard, which the French in their last night's official statement declared had already been reached. Jussy Chauny and La Fere are in flames.

On the Vesle front the Germans are now half way back to the Aisne.

GERMANS FACING THE NECESSITY OF RETREAT ON A LARGE SCALE

Whole System of Hindenburg Defence is Crumbling and a Withdrawal That Would Open the Eyes of Even the German Home Folk May be the Result—German Plans Were Foiled.

(By William Philip Simms).
Special to the Examiner:

PARIS, Sept. 5.—The German general staff is to-day facing the possibility of a withdrawal which would entail giving up practically the remainder of France under Teuton management. It is evident that the plans of Hindenburg and Ludendorff must undergo important revisions owing to the British blow in Sensee Valley, which, as I cable, has brought the Allies to within seven miles of Cambrai and within six miles of Douai, or less than the distance from the battery to the Central Park Lake in New York, while the important railway communications between Douai and Cambrai, as far as the highway and communications generally between these two cities are themselves dominated.

Unless the Germans can stop the advance of General Horne, the whole system of the Hindenburg defences must crumble, and beyond this there appears to be nothing until the line is reached running from Nieuport on the Belgian sector past Lille, and from there to Mezierest and Charleville, through the valley of the Meuse, and joining up with the old line at Pont-a-Mousson.

Such a retreat would open the eyes of even the German home folk to such an extent that the higher command will not dare to face it unless forced to do so by the Allied blows.

The Germans will unmistakably sacrifice additional legions before they begin such a crawl. They may yet be forced to save themselves by retreat from the Hindenburg line as they did of old.

There is reason to believe that the Germans hoped to snatch the initiative from the Allies before the end of the season's campaign by rapidly withdrawing the bulk of their army to the Hindenburg line, leaving their picked troops and as many machine guns and heavy artillery to prevent the rapid advance of the Allies.

Expected to Attack.

It is argued that they might have sufficient divisions rested to form a reserve for use as storm troops, these to attack at the precise moment, when the Allies came into contact with the Hindenburg line, when the Germans might believe them tired and disorganized, but instead of stopping when they reached the Hindenburg defences Foch sent the British tearing through, completely smashing any plans the Germans had, while the fresh reserves they were saving for offensive purposes were sent to fill the breaches in the lines.

With the reported evacuation of Lens by all save a nest of machine guns, and with the great possibilities opened up by the threat at Cambrai and Douai, the forcuses of interest are on this part of the line. However, to the north in Flanders, the British are at the doors of Armentieres, in which region the Germans are continuing to retreat, while around Soissons and in the vicinity of Noyon the French troops are ceaselessly biting into the enemy's flanks, making further withdrawals thereabouts.

AMERICANS AND FRENCH HALF WAY TO AISNE

(Special to The Examiner.)
(By Fred S. Ferguson.)

WITH THE AMERICAN ARMIES IN FRANCE, Sept. 5.—The Americans and French who swept across the Vesle River on a wide front are practically half way to the Aisne to-day at the furthermost point of their advance.

As the enemy troops fall back toward the Chemin Des Dames positions they are being steadily followed up. Rearguard actions continue with the pressure from the Americans and French gradually increasing.

The first crossing of the Vesle by patrols was followed last night by a crossing in force when large bodies of Allied fighters marched over the stream at a number of different points. At the last reports the Americans were beyond Vauxcere, Blanzy and Basliеux.

Basoches and Fismette fell into American hands through a flanking movement. Vauxcere is nearly three miles north of the Vesle. Blanzy is about two miles north of Fismes, and Basliеux is southeast of it, about a mile north of the Vesle.

Marked Progress by Plummer's Army in Flanders Fighting—British Are Back to Their Old Lines on One Part of the Salient.

GAINS FURTHER SOUTH

LONDON, Sept. 5.—(Official). — Marked progress was made by the British last night along the Flanders front. Ploegsteert Village has been captured, and also Hill 63, south-west of Messines.

On the Lys front the British hold the general line of Voormezeele, Wulverghem, Ploegsteert, Nieppe, Laventie and Givenchy. From Neuve Chappelle southward to Givenchy the British have reached the line they held up to the German attack on April 9 last, while to the eastward of Givenchy, the sections of the old German positions have been taken.

On the battle line in front of Cambrai an improvement in the British positions south of Moeuvres is reported. The positions to the east of Hermies, near the Canal Du Nord just to the south, also have been improved. Still further south the British have captured the village of Neuville-Bourjouval, east of the Canal Du Nord.

More than sixteen thousand prisoners and more than a hundred guns have been taken by the British in the past four days.

WAS KILLED IN ACTION

Captain C. Ross Cameron, Well Known Peterboro Officer, Meets Death in Recent Successful Advance of the Canadian Corps.

THE ROLL OF HONOUR

Another well known Peterboro officer has made the supreme sacrifice for the Empire in France.

Word was received from Ottawa this morning that Captain C. Ross Cameron, son of Mr. John A. Cameron, of the Perkins-Ince Company, had been killed in action in the recent fighting. The news will be a shock to the citizens generally. Capt. Cameron was a native of Peterboro, and was widely known and extremely popular throughout the city. He was a young man of sterling character, genial and kindly, and had a host of friends, who will be grieved to learn of his death.

Before the war, Capt. Cameron was ardently interested in military affairs, and had done good work as an officer in the 57th Regiment, Peterboro Rangers. When hostilities commenced he was not long in getting into uniform, and at the end of December, 1914, had been appointed to the 39th Battalion, being second in command of the Peterboro detachment of that unit during its training in Peterboro. When the 39th Battalion went to England, where it became a reserve battalion, Capt. Cameron did admirable work in organization and training operations. He soon won a promotion to the rank of major, and was afterwards made second in command of the 39th. His name was included in a list of Canadian officers brought to the attention of the Secretary of State for War for valuable services.

Six months ago Capt. Cameron went to France to join the famous 2nd Battalion, reverting in rank in order to do so.

He was a graduate of the Peterboro Collegiate Institute, and was at the head of the office staff of the Wm. Hamilon Company when he enlisted.

He is survived by his father, two sisters, Miss Florence and Miss Gladys Cameron, at home, and by one brother, Lieut. Alan Cameron, on active service in France.

Capt. Cameron was a promient member of Peterboro Lodge A. F. & A. M.

WAS DROWNED

Tragedy in Deer Bay, One of the Kawartha Chain, Yesterday Afternoon Was Unwitnessed—Body Not Recovered.

WAS WELL KNOWN HERE

Thomas Speirs, son of Mr. David Speirs, a prominent Otonabee farmer living on the river road a short distance below the locks, was drowned in Deer Bay yesterday afternoon, when in some obscure manner the canoe from which he and Gordon Welch, a twelve year old neighbour, weer fishing, upset more than a quarter of a mile from shore

They had set out to paddle while their fathers were repairing the cottage which is used as the headquarters of the ranch they work together, and also as the centre of their wood cutting operations in winter.

According to information received from relatives of the family, the boys had trawled a considerable distance from the shore when the canoe was accidentally upset. Speirs righted it, and managed almost to empty it. He then ordered his companion to cling to the boat, but he struck out for shore alone. An excellent swimmer, the expanse of water apparently had no fears for him, and yet when his father and Mr Welch rushed to the shore at the first call for help they saw only the upturned boat

Boy Exhausted.

Gordon Welch had obeyed his older friend's admonition to the letter, and when reached was almost overcome by the cramping struggle to hold on to the canoe. He had seen Tom Speirs swim away from him, and immediately afterwards he was alone. He had no idea how far Tom swam before he sank, and in that comparatively deserted stretch of water and shoreland between Buckhorn and Lovesick there were no eyewitnesses of the tragedy that fell upon this Otonabee family and saddened the many friends of the deceased young man. His body had not been recovered at a late hour this afternoon. The deceased was about 30 years old.

Besides the bereaved parents there is also one brother surviving, Pte. Roy Speirs who went overseas with the 93rd Battalion, and two sister, Miss May Speirs, a nurse in training in the Harper Hospital, Detroit, and Miss Audrey at home.

Searching parties have been at work all day, but the water is said to be extremely deep in Deer Bay

GERMANS HAVE TO RETIRE FROM THE VESLE RIVER

Retirement Beyond the Chemin Des Dames Itself Was Less Necessary in View of the Latest Successes of French and Americans.

THE WAR REVIEWED

(By J. W. T. Mason—United Press).

NEW YORK, Sept. 5.—The resumption of the German retreat from the Vesle River has been forced on Von Hindenburg at this time by the necessity for finding reserves for the operations in Flanders, and preventing the American and French from outflanking the southern German line by an attack along the Chemin Des Dames.

The retreat, now started, has for the moment been confined to the western sector of the Vesle front. This is a dangerous proceeding.

The German line between Fismes and Rheims, which has not yet had to move backward ot conform to the retiremen west of Fismes, has already started to fall into a wedge formation, with its apex at Fismes. The Americans and French therefore are now in a position to bring heavy pressure to bear on the Fismes-Rheims sector, while pushing the line west of Fismes still further northward.

Von Hindenburg must incidentally rectify this condition or suffer exceptionally severe losses. This partial retirement of the enemy has been full notice to Marshal Foch that the rest of this front will eventually be moved back in keeping with the retreat west of Fismes. The Americans and French therefore are expecting the possibility of knocking the enemy off their balance when the new retirement begins. It is for this purpose of pressing home this advantage that the Franco-Americans to-day are crossing the Vesle in the direction of Jinchery, midway between Fismes and Rheims.

The Germans will increase their peril if they attempt to stop their retreat temporarily north of the Aisne. The Americans and the French are now at the western entrance of the Chemin Des Dames. From that position they are in a better position to outflank the Germans north of the Aisne than when the German line clung to the Vesle.

For this reason, Von Hindenburg must continue to fall back beyond the Chemin Des Dames itself.

VALUE OF REPETITION

In advertising, it is impossible to estimate how many times the words, "Quaker Oats," "Old Dutch," "Overland," "Scotland Woolen Mills" and "Pears Soap" have had to be repeated to become the household words they are to-day.

So it is almost impossible to hammer home the Scotland Woolen Mills Coy's story too often, about saving the "Middleman's Profits" to their customers. Keep this fresh and interesting before your mind, so that each time it will make a favourable impression.

Drop into Hourigan's office and surprise him with your knowledge of the Scotland Woolen Mills Co. message: "We save you the Middleman's Profits."

1,000 BUSHELS ON 20 ACRES.

Kingston, Sept. 4 — Sands Brothers of Sunbury, report a yield of one thousand bushels of oats and peas and peas from 20 acres. Twelve were sown in oats and eight acres in oats and peas mixed. The variety was secured from the agricultural department of the Ontario Government. The average weight was 40 pounds per bushel, being eight pounds above the legal standard, so that the crop was an exceptionally heavy one.

Hamilton Firemen Want Platoon System

HAMILTON, Sept. 3.—The Fire, Police and Jail Committee of the City Council this evening discussed a communication from John A. Robertson of the Fire Underwriters' Association, which looked like an omen of an advance in fire insurance rates in this city. A petition signed by practically every member of the Fire Department, and asking for the adoption of the two platoon system, which is in vogue in many United States cities, was read. Chief Ten Eyck said it would require probably one-third more than are now on the force to effect this reorganization. Ald. Halcrow, Cooper, and Young comprise the committee to gather information in the matter.

Czechs Destroy Boleshevik Army

80,000 Russians Co-operating With With Slovacks Moving West Along Siberian Railway.

WASHINGTON, Sept. 4.—Belated despatches reaching the State Department from Irkutsk, Siberia, via Pekin, dated August 13, say the Bolshevik army east of Lake Baikal has been destroyed by the Czecho-Slovaks; that Cossacks are co-operating with the Czechs, and that all Americans in Siberia are safe.

A Czecho-Slovak officer has arrived at Archangel with word that 80,000 loyal Russians are operating with the 40,000 Czecho-Slovak forces moving westward along the Trans-Siberian Railroad from Ekaterinburg. The news reached the State Department to-day in a message from Ambassador Francis, dated August 26.

Since the officer left Ekaterinburg, more than a month ago, further advances by the Czecho-Slovaks have been announced by telegraph, but his report is regarded as important because of the light it throws on the relations of the Czechs with the people of the country through which they are moving. He says the Russians are pleased with the overthrow of the Bolshevik control and that Bolshevik soldiers are flocking to the support of the Czechs.

Berlin Admits That the British Are Pressing

Canadian Press:

BERLIN, Via London, Sept. 5.—Between Ypres and La Bassee, in the Lys salient, the British yesterday pressed forward against the new German lines, the German War Office announced to-day. Between the Somme and the Oise rivers, the statement adds, the Germans continued their movement out of the region of Roye. Rear guards, which had been left behind to retard the French, followed the Germans slowly.

"Peterborough Presents Possibilities Unsurpassed."

THURSDAY, SEPT. 5TH, 1918.

FOR THE SAILORS.

The organization for the Peterborough campaign of the Navy League has been completed, and during the first three days of next week the citizens will be given an opportunity of showing how much they appreciate the self-sacrificing heroism of the mercantile marine who, through the long months, have faced the ever-present menace of the Hun undersea pirates. $15,000 is Peterborough's objective, and the urgency of the appeal, and the merit of the cause should ensure the securing of the required amount without difficulty. Our debt to the brave sailors who have "carried on" despite the murderous efforts of the ruthless enemy, cannot be written off by a grant of money, but at the same time by a liberal contribution to this fund, which aims to take care of the dependents of the merchant sailors who give up their lives for the Empire, we can feel satisfied that we have done what we could to show that we are grateful for what these brave men have done for us.

No fewer than fifteen thousand members of the mercantile marine—three-quarters of the population of Peterborough — have been murdered by the Huns since the beginning of hostilities. Is there any one in Peterborough who, realizing that there is no pension for the wives and children of these men who have as truly died for the cause of liberty as if they had been killed in action in France or on board a battle cruiser, would refuse to contribute to a fund that is intended to see that the loved ones of the merchant sailors are looked after?

Of all the causes that have appealed to the generosity of the people of this city there has been none that has been more worthy than that which the citizens will be asked to contribute next week. The $15,000 objective should be reached and passed. Every cent will be needed, and Peterborough's response should be adequate to the occasion.

"FIGHTIN' SONS OF GUNS."

The extent of the Canadian victories in the past month can be judged by the statement that since August 8th, General Currie's army has taken prisoner 20,000 Germans. How many Huns were killed and wounded in the same period cannot be ascertained but the total must have been enormous. The smashing of the Drocourt-Quentin line alone netted the Canadians a bag of nearly six thousand prisoners.

The figures are a clear proof of the sweping nature of the Canadian success and every Canadian heart should be filled with pride at the achievements of the army under General Currie. No wonder Mr. J. P. B. Livesay, the Canadian Press Correspondent at the front says that it is difficult to write with modesty of the achievements of the Canadian troops and that the Toronto Star should refer to the early days of the war and the opinion that some people held of the Canadians in the following terms:

One hears no more talk these days from those who in 1914 and early in 1915 declared that the Canadians were an "undisciplined mab," officered by incompetents, and that those who expected them to do credit to the country had nothing awaiting them but disappointment. Those who talked that way three and four years ago have forgotten all about it now. They forget, too, that they used to declare that the only hope for the Canadians was to incorporate them with Old World troops—to stiffen and steady them against the shock of battle. The gloom merchants of thre or four years ago put up their shutters long since and pulled down their signs. The Canadian forces have made good in brilliant fashion, and all those of little faith here at home who did not expect much of them long ago swung around, claiming that they knew just how it would be from the start and had always told everybody so.

Last year George Pattulo in "Fightin' Sons of Guns" spoke of the Canadian corps as "the most formidable weapon of its size on any front." Since then much the same estimate of our fighting army has been made by many competent valuators, British, French, and American. Charles H. Grasty, of the New York Times, is the latest to pay tribute to the excellence of the Canadian forces. He finds cause for pride in the fact that they are North Americans, and that "nobody else quite plays the game up to their glory." He says of them that they can fight as individuals or as organized units, on foot or on horseback, are as practical as they are brave, and that the Germans will go miles out of their way to avoid the Canucks. The enemy has never made much out of his dealings with them.

There is plenty of evidence in captured documents showing that the Germans are specially apprenhensive as to what the Canadians will next be up to. They have had increased cause for this feeling within the last few weeks. As storm troops the Canadians have recently surpassed all previous exploits.

It is right and proper that the people of this country should thrill to the story of what the Canadian army is doing in the war. Those who would hush and discourage the natural expression of patriotic sentiment in this connection would, on examination, be found to be not quite Canadians. They would prove to be, many of them, only boarders in this country—sojourning here, but not of us.

TWO IMPORTANT STEPS.

The appointment of a pensions committee by the Peterborough branch of the Great War Veterans' Association and the decision to invite Mr. W. H. Smith, of the Soldiers' Civil Re-establishment Department to address the Association on the work of that important branch of the government are two steps upon which the Veterans are to be commended.

The Pensions' committee will investigate all cases in which returned soldiers feel that there has been an injustice done. There are many men who believe that they should have a pension, or feel that the pension they are at present in receipt of is not adequate. Such cases will be investigated by the committee and all legitimate claims will be brought before the proper authorities, who will be urged to reconsider the cases and right the grievances. By weeding out all trivial claims and only supporting those in which it is clear that justice has not been done, the recommendations of such a committee are bound to have an effect upon those who are administering the Pensions system. There are many returned men who are not satisfied with their pensions; the appointment of a special committee of the Veterans opens a way for these men to have their cases re-opened and rectified if the committee feel that the men in question have not been fairly dealt with.

Almost equally important is the arranging of a special meeting for the purpose of hearing the representative of the Soldiers' Civil Re-establishment Department. There are many things about the aims and work of this department about which not only the returned soldiers, but the public generally are hazy, and the visit of Mr. Smith should be decidedly beneficial. Every member of the Veterans' Association should bear in mind the importance of this meeting, which will be held on Tuesday night next.

EDITORIAL NOTES.

The grant from the City Council to the Navy League fund will be endorsed by the citizens generally.

The Canadians have taken over 20,000 prisoners in less than a month. General Currie's men are setting a lively pace for their comrades from this continent.

Peronne captured by the Australians. Bapaume occupied by the New Zealanders, and the Drocourt-Queant line smashed by the Canadians. Let us see—wasn't it Von Bernhardi who said that any help Great Britain would receive from her colonies wouldn't be worth considering?

Canadians have made shocked troops out of most of Germany's shock troops.

A war correspondent says last week was the greatest of the war, but Ludendorff uses other terms in his description.

The Food Board regulations affect the quantity of food a restaurant patron may eat, but the proprietors have no complaint. The prices remain the same or climb higher.

That mysterious army that General Mackensen is reported to have available is probably about as substantial as the Russian army which was supposed to have passed through England in the early days of the war.

The Crown Prince says the English soldiers are brave, but badly led. Well, the Crown Prince should be a good judge of poor leadership.

Another quarter of a million American soldiers went overseas last month. A nice little contribution for Foch's reserve.

A Berlin paper says Field Marshal Foch is striking desperately because he knows he cannot depend upon the help of the United States. That statement would be quite correct if the "not" were deleted.

The Germans are said to have been caught napping on the Drocourt-Queant line. Evidently a case of being asleep at the Switch.

Oppression instead of crushing out a drone-bass, a single note, and they to dance to. But after the subjugation al dance which was afterwards perstates that the victualling of the Midtime products to private buyers, at try, carrying bags, baskets, trunks, dows and doors are broken, men climb

WHAT OTHER EDITORS SAY

The War Referendum.

(Baltimore Sun.)

One by one, pacifist and obstructionist Senators and Congressmen are getting the referendum on the war they so loudly demanded months ago. They didn't get it then, but they are getting it now in the primaries, and most of them are getting it "in the neck."

Wait Till Noon.

(New York Globe.)

German power at its zenith has been smashed by opponents whose power stands not at noon, but at nine or ten o'clock. When 12 strikes next spring the German staff is well aware what will happen. If the Allies can beat the Germans on the lines of the Marne and the Somme, they can beat them anywhere else.

Waste of Apples.

(Mail and Empire.)

Has the Food Board taken note of the apples being wasted on the farms, being left on the ground under the trees as is usual? Waste in food of any kind is to be condemned these days.

A True Story.

(Toronto News.)

This is an actual fact. The wife of a clergyman warned him as he went off to officiate at a funeral one rainy day: "Now John, don't stand with your bare head on the damp ground."

Allied Weariness.

(Manitoba Free Press.)

"Success is with us," says Von Hindenburg, and he adds that "The enemy begins to show signs of weariness." He mistakes the kind of weariness, however; it is the sort that is intended when we say, "You make me tired."

Couldn't Beat Britain.

(General Ricciotti Garibaldi in New York Herald.)

"I do not say that the participation of America will have a decisive result on the final outcome of the war, because that never was doubtful as long as England could dispose of her unlimited resources."

$2,000 is Council's Contribution to the Sailors' Relief Fund

Two thousand dollars was the sum recommended by the Finance Committee last night as the Council's contribution to the Sailor's Relief Fund. When the appropriations were fixed last winter $1,000 was allotted for this purpose, and $1,500 was set aside for contingencies. One thousand dollars was taken from this appropriation thereby doubling the original sum for the Sailor's Relief. There remains for unforseen demands about $300.

The $2,000 will be paid in four monthly instalments of $500. The Committee felt confident that the citizens would over subscribe the amount expected from this city.

Mayor Duncan stated this morning that a special meeting of the Council would be held on Friday night to ratify the Finance Committee's recommendation.

ALEX. MURRAY RECOMMENDED FOR FUEL COMMISSION BY TRADES AND LABOUR COUNCIL

Mr. Alex. Murray was recommended to the City Council by the Trades and Labour Council last night as a fuel commissioner. This action was inspired by a letter from Ald. A. A. McIntyre suggesting that the Labour men might nominate one of their members for the existing vacancies or vacancy, whichever it may be, and promising to support their nominee at the next meeting of the Council.

Another reason that prompted this offer to assist in establishing a fuel commission was the fact that many of the members of the Council, apart from other citizens, have thus far failed to secure any quantity of coal. Several of them reported last night that orders they had placed in the spring had not yet been filled, and others had not received even the doubtful encouragement of having their orders accepted by the dealers.

The fuel problem was discussed last night in many of details, but with scant hope of sharing to any appreciable extent in the allotment of coal that has been decided for Peterborough. Some of the delegates again complained that large houses with only two occupants have received as much as eighteen tons of coal, while smaller homes of workingmen with five and six children have not yet obtained even one pound of coal. It is thoroughly understood that the regulations permitted this unequal distribution, but that knowledge does not lessen the anxiety that deepens with the near approach of cold weather. It was asserted that the Government could impose restrictions on the farmers' grain, on sugar, flour and other commodities, in short could definitely control the distribution of these staples, but that it had failed to consider the common needs of the people for next winter's fuel.

One Bright Spot.

The Council was highly satisfied with the financial results of the Labour Day ball games. The gross receipts were $194.35, and the expenses $144.35, leaving a balance of $50.

A hearty vote of thanks was passed to the committe who arranged the games, Messrs. Fred Browne, A. J. Bolwell, and Chas. Duggan.

Mr. Browne moved a similar resolution thanking Dr. Wightman for his assistance in making the holiday enterprise a success.

Mr. J. A. Sharpe seconded it, and the secretary was instructed to forward a copy of the resolution to Dr. Wightman.

Grant to Sailors' Relief.

It was unanimously decided to make a contribution of five dollars to the Sailors' Relief Fund.

Auditors' Report.

The auditors' report of the finances of the Board of Trustees was adopted. The books were reported in order and entirely satisfactory.

Is Well Recommended.

It was reported that Mr. Wm. Dineen, the new manager at the Grand Opera House, is a member of the Toronto locals of the Theatrical Stage Employees' Union and the Moving Picture Operators' Union, and is highly recommended by those locals. This makes the Grand completely "union," a condition that was more than satisfactory to the men.

Organization Committee.

It was suggested that the Council should appoint an Organization Committee to help the new locals, and to assist in the formation of others that are under consideration. This matter will be dealt with at the next meeting.

A Call to Prayer; List of Meetings On Friday Night

Our King has called the nation to prayer. President Wilson has called the American people to prayer. To-day the Governors of the different States were calling the people to special prayer. Above all these voices is the voice of Almighty God calling at men to repentance and humiliation in prayer.

A day of visitation is coming to the people of Peterborough, it is even upon us now, and in a few weeks Dr. Honeywell, evangelist, will be in our midst and the fruit of his ministry will depend largely upon the preparation of our hearts by prayer.

It is to-day as in eden times, "not by might nor by power, but by My Spirit saith the Lord." Christian citizens of Peterborough, let us arouse ourselves and put on the garments of humility and dependence, read the book of Nehemiah through and then go to prayer as if the success of the entire campaign depended upon you.

Let there be a mighty, unprecedented, co-operative effort on the part of every Christian in the city, attend the prayer meetings that are being conducted all over the city, every Monday and Friday evening, talk prayer meetings to your neighbours, to your customers, to your employees and be sure you go yourselves. When you get there, take part. Sing, pray, exhort and you will kindle revival fires in other hearts that will girdle the city with prayer until God will come down and souls will be saved and the angels of God as well as we all will have cause for rejoicing.

ATMOSPHERE OF VICTORY IN THE BRITISH ARMY

(Special to The Examiner.)
(By Lowell Mellett.)

WITH THE BRITISH ARMIES IN FRANCE, Sept. 5.—An unmistakable atmosphere of victory prevails in the Somme battlefield. It wasn't necessary to-day to hear the triumphant bands miles along the roads to catch the spirit animating the British army. The exultant squeal of bagpipes seemed to epitomize, all the unexpressed feelings of the men. It was necessary only to see the faces of marching troops, to note the easy swing of their stride.

Whether tired or fresh the British troops when they are marching carry the conviction that they are an undefeated army, but now one sees that they are not merely an undefeated army, but a winning army. The period of rest preceding the present offensive partly accounts for it. But now the tide of war accounts for much of the new enthusiasm. The British veterans look as young and eager as the Americans, whom they meet banteringly on the road some times. Contrasting with this are authenticated instances of a reverse spirit among enemy troops accumulate to-day.

A Home Recipe For Removing Wrinkles

Who will blame the modern woman for trying to look as young and attractive as she reasonably can? Why should she be placed at a disadvantage in numerous ways by wearing wrinkles, if she can avoid these hateful marks of advancing age? Few women, however, know what to do to effectually rid themselves of wrinkles or sagginess. Most of the advertised preparations are unsatisfactory and very expensive. But a very simple and harmless home remedy, which any woman can make, will work wonders where all the patent preparations fail.

Buy an ounce of powdered saxolite at any drug store. Dissolve the whole ounce in a half pint of witch hazel, and use as a wash lotion. The results are practically instantaneous. Marked improvement is noticed immediately after the very first trial. Wrinkles and sagging are corrected, and the face feels so refreshed and smug-like.

Victory Still Smiles Upon Allied Armies

(Canadian Press Despatch.)

PARIS, Sept. 5. — Victory still smiles on the Allied armies. The enemy is in retreat along the whole line from Ypres to Rheims. Honours yesterday were with the French-Americans of the Allied right wing which at last gained the reward of several days' persistent effort. Exactly how far they have advanced is difficult to say for the line moves forward hourly. The enemy, who has lost heavily in men, and this is announced by the hurried destruction of material, and is evidently abandoning if he has not already done so, Chauncy, Jussy, LaFere and probably Ham. The British also continue to make very important progress to-day.

WORLD'S SERIES BEGINS TO-DAY

CHICAGO, Sept. 5.—With clear and warmer weather predicted, the Chicago Nationals and Boston Americans at 2.30 this afternoon were scheduled to make a belated start in their battle for the baseball championship of the world. Despite the fact that the present series marks the swansong of baseball until after the war, interest was at a lower ebb this year than ever before, in the opinion of world's series veterans.

Following is the probable batting order of to-day:

Boston— Hooper, r.f.; Shean, 2b.; Strunk, c.f.; Ruth, l.f., McInnis, 1b; Scott s.s.; Coffey or Thomas, 3b; Schang, c.; Mays or Bush, p.

Chicago—Flack, r.f.; Holiocher, s.s.; Mann, l.f.; Paskert, c.f.; Merkle, 1b; Pick, 2b.; Deal, 3b.; Killifer, c.; Vaughan or Tyler, p.

British Report Bares Ruses of Decoy Boats That Lure Hun Submarines to Destruction

Phase of Campaign Against Frightfulness at Sea Shown in Story of Operations of Q-Boats—How Make-Believe War is Staged.

LONDON.— The revelation by Sir Eric Geddes of the wily enterprise and skilful initiative of the British seamen in employing what are aptly called "Q"-boats to deal with German submarines, must have come as a shock and surprise to those critics who have been forever asking why the navy did not exhibit some of the same cunning spirit which has made our enemies notorious. It now appears that for the last three years—in fact, as far back as the time when Mr. Churchill and Lord Fisher first began to grapple with the U-boat problem—this sort of thing has been going on.

Decoy Warfare is Dangerous

Two things are clear from the recent disclosures of the First Lord, the first being that a considerable degree of cool courage and daring, combined with calmness and judgment, must have been displayed before the "Q"-boats could get to grips with the enemy submarines. A decoy in any form of warfare is more or less hazardous, but the operations of the "Q"-boat are especially so, because to make certain of doing her work effectively she has to get to such close grips with her antagonist.

The second feature which characterizes the work of this class of war vessel is the mechanical ingenuity and skill—the stagecraft, it might almost be called—shown in the design and manipulation of the "Q"-boat's appliances. The story of "Q"-50, as told by Sir Eric Geddes shows with what cleverness the various phases of the "battle" were staged in order to deceive the Hun. Considering how small a hitch in the arrangements for the mock explosions, the panic party in the ship's boat and the like, hight have given the whole show away, it speaks very highly for the training and state of discipline of the bluejackets that they achieved their purpose.

Staging Make Believe Dramas

A game of this nature—arranging make-believe dramas for the purpose of precipitating very real ones—should appeal specially to American seamen. Few things more in keeping with their alertness, initiative and enterprise could be imagined. Although, like all other novelties in warfare, it becomes played out after a time it may be hoped that it is not yet too late for the seamen of the United States to share in the peculiar zest and thrills associated with this species of submarine fighting. No doubt, however, even if the German U-boat commanders are becoming too careful to be caught by now, the Allies have ready for use another weapon which they can employ in the suppression of these underwater pests.

In view of the German protests made in connection with the Baralong incident, it seems necessary to emphasize that the right to use disguised ships against an enemy is perfectly legitimate, and is sanctioned by centuries of naval law and practice. There is no illegality in war ship flying false colors for the purpose of deceiving her antagonist, provided she hauls them down before opening fire. No nation but the Germans would question this custom and Germany has frequently been guilty in this war of using false colors throughout an action.

Specious German Protests.

It will be remembered that violent protests were made in Germany over the early successes of the "Q"-boats, such as the Baralong, and in reply to one charge of "brutality," the British Admiralty in November, 1916, said that the whole allegation afforded a very fine instance of the typical German mentality. Any surprise of ruse de guerre by the German is legitimate but all become illegitimate when practised against Germans. In the submarine war, our enemies have been guilty of much worse conduct than mere stealth. They have no right therefore, to be heard in protest against measures of a lawful character which the Allies have adopted against them. In the "Q"-50 case, it is significant that the attacking submarine had no thought of detaining and examining the British vessel in the manner prescribed by international law, as a preliminary to sinking and capturing her if she was found to be carrying contraband. The eagerness of the German commander to sink on sight what he believed to be a helpless victim increased, as it turned out, the risk of his own destruction.

"Quiffs and Whim Whams."

Nor can there be any comparisons between these lawful methods of adoption practised by the mystery boats, which the Germans themselves copied in designing commerce raiders like the Grief and the Moewe—and the inhuman tricks of the Germans in poisoning wells and leaving concealed explosives in places from which they had retired. There is no material gain to them by such work, for the killing or maiming of a few isolated soldiers cannot be said to advance the main military situation. A ruse de guerre which removes a number of enemy submarines, saving thereby a large amount of shipping tonnage and many precious lives, is on the other hand a valuable asset to any Power, and doubly so to one which must depend for its very life upon the maintenances of its sea communications.

The "Q"-boats of the British Navy are manifestly only one class of vessel in use against the submarines. Other snares and strategems are no doubt prepared to continue the excellent work they have been doing during the last three years or more The reason why such craft were officially named "Q"-boats is not apparent, except that in alphabetical sequence "Q" comes well before "U" Three and a half years ago, a distinguished admiral expressed the opinion that to tackle the submarine problem, then in its infancy, the navy would have to rely not so much upon the regular classes of war ships, but would need to go in more for "quiffs' and "whim-whams." The "quiffs" now stand revealed and all well-wishers of the Allies will invoke an equally if not more successful career for the "whim-whams."

Mr. Geo. McClennan Swept Toronto Show in Buff Orpingtons

Mr. George McClennan has swept the Buff Orpington section of the poultry show at the Toronto Exhibition. He took ten prizes as follows: First and fourth for cock bird, first and third for hen, first and third for cockerel, first, second and third for pullet, and first for the best pen. One of his birds won from the three times first prize winner at the big show in Madison Square Garden, New York.

His success at the Toronto Exhibition is a further evidence of the fine strain of his Orpingtons, and is also an indication of the standard of the local Poultry Association, of which Mr. McClennan is a prominent member.

BARRED FROM CITY SCHOOLS.

Chatham, Sept. 4. — Scores of the pupils living just outside the city limits are out of school following the decision of the local Board of Education not to permit outside pupils to attend the city schools on account of congestion in the local institutions. In the majority of instances the children will be required to walk several miles in order to attend rural schools.

IS FINER THAN IN MANY MONTHS

"I Sure Take Off My Hat to Tanlac," Says Frank McQuade.

"Yes, sir, I sure take off my hat to Tanlac, for it has certainly made good in my case and done away with all my prejudices against patent medicines," said Frank McQuade, who is employed with the Prest-O-Lite company and lives at 2 Wilkins avenue, Toronto.

"I was in pretty good shape up to about six months ago," he continued, "when my digestion began to worry me and I started down hill. After eating anything my food would sour on my stomach and I would bloat up with gas and feel so tight across the chest that I couldn't draw a long breath. I felt like I would suffocate, and my heart would palpitate and flutter so I became alarmed. My nerves were in a terrible condition, too, and I was so restless and fidgity that I couldn't keep still a minute. After going to bed I would lie awake half the night without getting any sleep and the next day I'd be so cross and irritable that I was all out of sorts with everything. I felt as miserable as anybody you ever saw and took a prescription or two, but they did me no good.

"One of the men I am working with told me so much about how Tanlac had helped him that to please him I got a bottle, though to tell the truth I had no faith in it. Well, sir, it sure turned the tables on me for I began to improve at once. I have taken but two bottles and there is absolutely no comparison between the way I feel now and the way I did before starting on it. My food digests all right now, it never sours and I am never troubled with gas or bloating. My heart gives me no trouble, my nerves are much stronger and I sleep in every way better than I have been in months."

Tanlac is sold in Peterborough by W. B. Warne Drug Co. Ltd., in Havelock by A. C. Denike, in Lakefield by Tanner Drug Co., in Fowlers Corners by W. A. Hunter, in Gelert by A. J. Scott, in Westwood by G. Pringle and Son.

Labour Council Objects to Boys Collecting Mails

Pass Resolution to be Forwarded to Ottawa Requesting That This Alleged Laxity be Discontinued.

The collection of the mail from the street boxes by small boys, was regarded by the Trades and Labour Council last night as so lax and inefficient a method of performing this important public work that Secretary Stevens was instructed to write to the Postmaster General calling his attention to it. It was reported that boys as young as 9 and 10 years have been seen collecting the mails, especially at night, from 8 until 11 o'clock.

"These boys are too young to realize the importance of the work," said one delegate." "They are not accountable, and simply should not be tolerated as mail collectors. Most of the letters are important to some persons, and often they contain money. It is altogether too lax, and should be corrected at once."

Nearly every member of the council had observed this practice, and all were agreed that it should be discontinued at once.

A letter similar to the one Ald. Edgar received a few weeks ago, will be forwarded to Mr. Walter Stocker protesting against his delivery of letters during the postman's strike. It was positively stated that he had taken mail to houses on Charlotte and Wellington streets, and that he had also entered the sorting section of the post office and picked out some letters.

It was also stated that there was considerable laxity in this regard at all times, and that citizens trespassed in parts of the post office where they had no right whatever. During the strike, one member said, no other office in the Dominion had taken on strike breakers, as had Postmaster Edgar

One member said he had understood that the postmasters had been authorized to employ help for the emergency, but in reply it was alleged that Mr. Edgar had taken this step on his own initiative, before the instructions came from Ottawa.

Creator Complimented 57th Regimental Band

The members of the 57th band returned from Toronto last night, where the band played two concerts at the Canadian National Exhibition. The band was composed of 30 men and bandmaster. Their playing was much admired. Among the audience in the afternoon was Signor Creatore, the noted bandmaster of New York, who with his band is playing a two weeks' engagement. He complimented Mr. Gliddon on the really good playing and spoke particularly of the fine bass section.

Mr. D. C. Ross, who has charge of the bands for the Exhibition, and a very busy man, came over from the office for a few minutes and expressed himself as being well pleased, both with the playing and general smart appearance of the band.

Cereal Food That Contains Its Own Sugar

is utterly unlike any other prepared cereal.

Take a handful of its golden-brown granules and hold it in a strong light. You will see little shining particles on each granule—a result of the Grape-Nuts process of cookery, which turns the starch of wheat and barley into actual sugar.

The sweet, nutty flavour of Grape-Nuts requires no added sugar and where fresh milk or cream is not obtainable condensed or evaporated milk fits in finely.

No sugar is needed, and but little cream or milk, and this makes Grape-Nuts a very desirable cereal these saving days.

LT. "RODDY" LEMIEUX HAS DIED OF WOUNDS

Former Postmaster-General's Only Son Was 20 Years of Age.

MONTREAL, Sept. 2.—Word has been received by Hon. Rodolphe Lemieux, ex-Postmaster-General, that his only son, Lieut. "Roddy" Lemieux, has died of wounds received in action on August 26. Lieut. Lemieux enlisted when eighteen years old while at Bishop's College School, Lennoxville. At the time of his death he was twenty years old. He left Canada for the front in Lieut.-Colonel the Hon. P. E. Blondin's regiment. After further training in England he joined a famous French-Canadian unit as a Lieutenant.

Platoon System for Fire Hall to Get More Consideration

At the meeting of the Fire, Water and Light committee last night, the chairman, Ald. Dobbin, read the report of Fire Chief Grange, who attended the Fire Chiefs' convention at Toronto.

"The firemen might as well be in jail as be at that fire hall 24 hours a day," said Ald. McIntyre.

Ald Dobbin thought that sub-stations could be erected in the wards and thus meet the wishes of the manufacturers.

After a lengthy discussion the Chief's recommendation was allowed to stand over.

The city will take over four wood lots containing about 3,400 cords of wood, consisting mostly of beach and maple. A camp will be established as soon as possible and the wood cut. It will likely cost the citizens $10 a cord laid down here.

The wood is abou two miles from a railway line and will not be hauled on the roads till they have been hardened with frost. Hence, the citizens may be compelled to wait for three or four months yet for this supply.

ON THE FRONTIER OF INDIA

GEN. BARRETT'S DESPATCH

The Despatch describes the operations against the Mahsuds, a marauding tribe, on the right bank of the Indus, in the North West Frantier Provinces of India.

On 26th February, news was received at Wana that a large Mahsud lashkar was moving against Sarwakai, one of the posts garrisoned by the South Waziristan Militia. The Commandant of the Corps at once strengthened the garrison, which, by operating outside the post, on 2nd March successfully kept the Mahsuds at bay. On the following day, however, after inflicting considerable losses on the enemy, it had to withdraw into the post, having suffered many casualties, including the loss of its British officer, killed.

On learning of this attack, Brigadier-General G. M. Baldwin, D.S.O., Commanding the Derajat Brigade, ordered the concentration of the Derajat Movable Column at Murtaza.

The Mahsud Outbreak.

On March 4th, Lieutenant-General Sir A. A. Barrett received orders to assume control of the operations necessary to deal with the Mahsud outbreak. The Derajat Movable Column advanced up the Gomal (a tributary on the right bank of the Indus) and relieved Sarwakai on March 9th. Next day General Baldwin, whose column has been augmented by a detachment of 250 south Waziristan Militia, under Major G. E. Davis, the Commandant of the Corps, advanced to Barwand, a village in the Shahur Valley, where punitive measures were carried out in face of some opposition. No further hostile acts were committed by the Mahsuds during March, and, as it appeared that there was little likelihood of further trouble, orders were issued for the return of the Derajat Movable Column to Tank, which place was reached on 3rd April, and for the dispersal to their stations of the units of the 44th Infantry Brigade.

The hope that the Mahsuds would remain quiet proved fake. During April and the first week of May they made several attacks on British convoys.

It will be observed that the Mahsuds, in all their attacks on convoys proceeding along the Gomal route, selected for the purpose the stage between Nili Kach and Khajuri Kach. The country in this stage, in which the Gwaleri Pass has to be crossed, is extremely difficult and peculiarly favourable to the tribesmen's tactics. No movement of troops can be hidden from the Mahsuds on the hill tops; the track in many places follows deep nalas with precipitous sides; and the very broken and intricate nature of the country affords every advantage to the enemy for concealment, and for subsequent withdrawal.

It became evident that determined measures were called for, and on May 6th, the forces in the district were amalgamated under the name of the Waziristan Field Force, and Major General Beynon placed in command.

Punitive Measures.

As the result of an attack on May 10th near Carwakai, the Government of India sanctioned the taking of punitive measures, with the Khaisura Valley as the objective. By June 9th a striking force was concentrated at Jandola. During the intervening period, the enemy engaged in desultory fighting in the neighbourhood of the various detached British posts.

As Major-General Beynon was now about to proceed in command of this striking force up the Shahur Valley, it became apparent that he would not be in a position effectively to control any operations which might become necessary on the Tochi side. Consequently, His Excellency the Commander-in-Chief decided that the troops in the Bannu and Derajat areas should again become separate forces, being designated the North and South Waziristan Field Forces, respectively, under the general control of the General Officer Commanding, Northern Army. Orders giving effect to this decision were issued on 14th June.

The forward movement of General Beynon's force began on June 19th, and it forced the passage of the Nanu Pass, in the face of a determined resistance, on the 21st. The determination shown by the British convinced the Mahsuds of the futility of further aggressiveness, and by June 25th, after several minor engagements, the enemy made overtures of peace.

Whilst these operations had been taking place, the troops under Brigadier-General Bruce in the Bannu area were not called upon to undertake any offensive measures. The presence of strong forces at Bannu and Miramshah deterred the Mahsuds from raiding into the Bannu district and Tochi Valley, and kept them in a state of uncertainty as to whether an advance from Miramshah might not be contemplated. On one occasion only was it necessary for Brigadier-General Bruce to act against a body of the enemy. This was on the 14th June, when a body of Mahsuds approached the Saidgi defile in the Tochi Valley with the object of attacking the 1-1st Kent Regiment marching to Miramshah. The prompt concentration of troops both from Miramshah and Banu, to effect which mechanical transport was largely employed, successfully prevented the enemy from carrying out his design.

Peace Declared.

On the 10th August a full representative jirga of 3,000 Mahsuds ratified the settlement; peace was declared, and British territory opened to them for trade. By 12th August all troops had been withdrawn to Jandola, and the dispersal of the forces in the Derajat and Bannu areas commenced.

Trying Conditions.

The physical and climatic conditions of this portion of the North-West Frontier are peculiarly trying, and the period during which the recent offensive operations had to be undertaken was the hottest time of the year. Nothing, however, could have exceeded the cheerfulness and determination with which all difficulties and hardships were faced and overcome by the troops; not only by those actively engaged against the enemy, but by those on the lines of communication who, at first in the Gomal and later in the Shahur Valley, were continuously employed on piquetting duties in difficult and dangerous country.

At the time when it was decided to take the offensive the most unfavourable season of the year was just commencing. It was necessary that operations should be undertaken with the least possible delay and with a force of adequate size to ensure rapid success. This entailed the immediate expansion of the force already available, which threw a great strain on the communications leading into the area. The Kalabagh-Bannu-Tank narrow gauge line was inadequately equipped for the movement of large bodies of troops and was liable to interruption in the event of heavy rain. The unbridged passages of the Indus at Kalabagh and Darya Khan added greatly to the difficulties to be overcome.

German People Understood, Says Kaiser Wilhelm

Will Devote All Their Strength to Defend Their "Sacred Soil and Kulture."

Special to the Examiner:

AMSTERDAM, Sept. 5.—Telegraphing to a Munich paper the Kaiser said, according to advices received here to-day:

"The German people understand our difficulty in the present battle waging against an enemy filled with hatred, jealousy and a destructive will, and they have unanimously decided to devote all their strength to defend their sacred soil and kultur.

Holding His Customers

War has created difficult problems for the average business man. He has lost heavily in man power in his sales department, and he has forced upon him the necessity of adopting new standards of efficiency in conducting his business. How many business men have any idea of why customers change from one house to another. How many business men are able to retain their hold on their customers year in and year out? "Holding the customer" means good salesmanship. This is what Mr. M. Fine, of 417 George street, has been able to, in a large measure, succeeded in doing. Very few of his regular customers change from one house to another; and while he has been able to retain the old, he has attracted many new ones, since moving to his present larger premises.

Mr. Fine has some good news for shoppers this week end, if you have read his large advertisement.

Merchant Seamen Extend Zone of War

Eight Million Men Transported Overseas in One Year.

"Everything has been taken ashore," wrote an officer of transport in the East, "by lighters and rafts. The major part of our cargo is railway material, cattle trucks, ambulance vans, oxen, horses, mules, fodder, ammunition and troops. We have everything necessary for warfare, from a needle to an elephant."

That is tribute to the men of the Mercantile Marine. Think also of the coal carried overseas to the Allies; nitrate shipped from the South; munitions from Canada and the United States and ore from Spain and the Mediterranean, coffee and all the multitudinous necessities of life that Britain must have if she would live and prosecute the war to a victorious conclusion. The brain reels at the thought! Eight million of men; ten million tons of supplies and explosives; over a million sick and wounded; over a million horses and mules and fifty million gallons of gasoline—that is an approximate estimate of the gigantic effort put forth by the men of the Merchant Service during one year of war—1916. Think of it! The effort is epic! To complete the picture one had to add such trifles as 100,000,000,000 tons of wheat; 7,000,000 tons of iron ore; 21,000,000 centals of cotton. For the same period the value of British exports was £500,000,000. And all this has been transported by the men of the Mercantile Marine! Are they worth your sympathy and assistance? Answer by assisting the Navy League of Canada to raise $1,000,000 during "Sailors' Week" September 1st to 7th.

Voice of The People

To the Editor, of the Examiner,—

A number of Peterboro people who appreciate the urgent necessity of Peterboro having more power allotted to it by the Hydro-Electric Commissioner, have spoken to me recently on the neglect and if I might be permitted I should like to suggest in view of the urgent need of more power for Peterboro, that a request be made to the Hydro-Electric Commission to that end. If the City Council calls a special meeting at short date and throws it open to the public we could then form a deputation, officially and publicly, and proceed to Toronto with some authority. There can be no doubt it is most necessary that some direct and speedy course should be adopted.

MADGE KENNEDY IS AT THE EMPIRE

Appearing in "The Service Star," a Wonderful Story.

We are to-day showing in the Empire Theatre a Goldwyn motion picture that will reach the heart of every man, woman and child in Peterborough. This picture is a drama of the American home and of mothers', daughters' and lovers' hearts. Not one scene of it is laid in Europe. Not one scene reveals a battle, or preparation for battle. There are no spies, no struggles, no tense unhappy moments to bring grief or pain to the womanhood of the nation.

But there is a wonderful story and all the way through it you see a wonderful girl, who, through the power that God puts into the souls of women, sends away a wonderful boy to make this a wonderful world to live in.

Whether you are hard or soft of heart, whether you think you wish to or not, there is nothing in the world that can keep you from coming today to the Empire Theatre to see Madge Kennedy in "The Service Star."

British Press On Murder of Capt. Cromie

Canadian Press:

LONDON, Sept. 5.—The Times says that the murder of Captain Cromie, of the British Embassy in Petrograd, was a considered act of the Bolshevik government and not more outbreak of brigandage It calls for exemplary punishment of the murderers and their accomplices.

The Daily Telegraph interprets the outrage thus: "Bolshevik leaders know that their course is nearly run, and having waded in blood to power they are resolved to shed still more before the fatal hour strikes for their own bloody end."

The Chronicle asks how much longer the Russian people will endure corrupt and blood-stained tyranny, which has ruined a once great country and made it a by-word of contempt.

Canadians Have Fought 31 Enemy Divisions in Past Month

Many of Them Put Out of Action Completely in Recent Battles—Fifteen Divisions Encountered in One Week Alone.

GERMANS REALIZE DEFEAT

(By J. F. B. Livesay.)

WITH THE CANADIAN FORCES, —Some very brilliant battle tactics were pulled off during the recent engagements by individual brigades and battalions. Since August 8 the Canadian Corps have jumped in to no less than thirty-one enemy divisions, a number of which have been put completely out of action for the time being. It met as many as fifteen divisions in the fighting of the past week. Its success is accounted for, not alone by the valour and tenacity of the individual soldier, but by a high standard of leadership throughout all ranks.

Used Noval Device.

Last week-end a brigade whose commander is well-known in Alberta was set the task of taking and consolidating the positions in front of Cherisy, north of Hendecourt, including Upton Wood and the Crow's Nest. A frontal attack had failed. On the right a British corps had pushed out ahead of us into Hendecourt. The brigadier resorted to a device novel to modern warfare. Ignoring the front entirely he advanced his brigade through the left of the British lines, passed back of Hendecourt and fell upon the rear of the enemy troops holding the positions that were actually deployed for a counter-attack. His artillery laid down a barrage in front of them. Our troops advanced from the south, their right sweeping around by the east, and thus, untouched by the barrage, which was on the left, caught the Boche entirely by surprise and took many hundreds of prisoners.

"In war one expects frontal attacks, but one does not expect an attack in the rear," the captured commander complained

The Canadian corps has now penetrated through the battle-stricken belt and is again in country that shows little of the devastation of war. The Hun left it too quickly to destroy it, but he is shelling it with heavy guns. The villages which will now have escaped will soon be reduced to heaps of tumbled brick and mortar. Such a village is Ecourt. On Sunday night the population of this village was evacuated by the enemy, but 46 persons mostly old men and women, remained hidden in their cellars and gave an enthusiastic welcome to the British troops who released them after four years of slavery. They had been set at the task of the slave, the women even toiling in the trenches. Two young men of 22, fired with the desire to lay down their lives in the service of France, escaped through the bombardment to our lines. They are middle class and educated.

How German Tone Changed.

"In our house," they said, "were billeted German officers all July. They were very cocky, through the reverse on the Somme. What did it matter? Then came the Canadian attack on this line and their tone changed. On Sunday night they rushed, threw together a few of their effects, leaving the rest, and started off in great haste to Marquette, whence they said their divisional headquarters had been moved, to Cambrai which was now denuded of troops. They expected to make a stand before Douai

'A non-commissioned officer, not a bad fellow, who had shown us some kindness in our misery, shook his face in our direction: "We are beaten," he cried, "and the army knows it Our men are demoralized. They surrender in flocks. If those miserables of Berlin do not make peace soon a great catastrophe will overwhelm the fatherland.

GOT RID OF BRONCHITIS.

Mr. W. H. Walker, Calmar, Alta., writes: "I am pleased to say that Dr. Chase's Syrup of Linseed and Turpentine has done much good to myself, wife and children. My eldest girl, seven years old, had bronchitis and the doctor who attended her did not seem to do much good. We got Chase's Syrup of Linseed and Turpentine for her and she soon got well. We always keep this medicine in the house now ready for use and find that it soon cures coughs and colds."

"Bravest Man" Handles Gas Shells Lovingly

(By Frank J. Taylor.)
(United Press Staff Correspondent.)

WITH THE AMERICAN ARMY IN FRANCE, Aug. 14. (By Mail.)—There are a lot of "bravest men in the army," too many to be counted. Three of them are in the gas office of the expeditionary forces. They are gas officers.

"Come on over and see some new German gas we just took out of a dud Heinie tossed over," one of them said the other day.

His office was filled with shells, and bottles. He works among them all day, and never is scared. Ten minutes is about all anyone else can stand in the office.

The shells are mostly German "duds," that failed to explode. The gas officer picked one up, and explained how he had to take the fuse out and find out "what Heinie put in the shell."

He admitted that the fuse might start going any time, even with a little bump of the shell. The gas officer didn't mind playing with the shell, but someone else did mind his doing it.

Then he explained an array of bottles filled with dirty looking liquid, most of it very black. It was liquid gas, taken from shells.

There was enough gas in those bottles to put a whole town to sleep. Some of the liquid was almost strong enough to eat glass. Furthermore, bottles might break.

To show his contempt for gas, the gas officer took the cork out of one bottle and dished out a whiff of gas, just a "teaser," he called it.

It was enough—the gas officer went about his work among his shells and deadly bottles the rest of the day with no visitor bothering him.

SEPTEMBER "ROD AND GUN."

The September issue of Rod and Gun is full of good things, stories, and articles instructive to the sportsman, whether he be fisherman, gunner, dogman, or just plain out of doors man. Being the September number, "Wild Duck Shooting" by Bonnycastle Dale very properly has the leading place in this issue, followed by a fishing story, "Belle of the Big Brule," by George Gilbert; another duck article, "Inherited Instinct," by Edward T. Martin; "When the Goose Honks High," by George R. Bolton; "Moonlight and Black Ducks," by E. V. Williams; "The Wild Pheasant of Vancouver Island," "Three Important Wild Duck Foods," "Billy Mink's Diary," continued, etc., etc. The illustrations throughout are good and include three full page ones of scenes at the recent Grand International trap shooting tournament held at St. Thomas. Rod and Gun magazine is published by W. J. Taylor, Limited, Woodstock, Ont.

GALLI-CURCI CUT OFF HER ALLOWANCE TO HUSBAND, NOW HE SEEKS $250,000 HEART BALM

Famous Coloratura Soprano Alleges That Luigi Curci Was Squandering Her Earnings, in Her Denial of Alienated Affections.

TIRED OF BROTHER-IN-LAW

NEW YORK, Sept. 4.—Opera's most recent sensation, Mme. Amelita Galli-Curci, coloratura soprano, and her husband, Luigi Curci, artist are no longer pursuing their temperamental lives together in the atmosphere of domestic happiness. A wide gulf has opened between them causing the singer to take up her abode in her country villa, at Pine Hillsg in the Catskills, while Signor Curci occupies the city home at No. 27 West Sixty-seventh street.

This was revealed yesterday when Mme. Galli-Curci made public a statement disclosing she had taken retaliatory measures against her husband because he had served papers upon Charles L. Wagner, her manager, and Homer Samuels, her accompanist, in an action charging them with having alienated her affections. The artist, declaring his wife's love had been stolen from him through a conspiracy, demands damages of $250,000.

But when the star learned of her husband's action she at once conferred with her attorneys and directed them to reply in the sumptuous furnishings adorning the city home. She also issued a statement exonerating her manager and accompanist and asserted the court action was begun by Signor Curci to humiliate her because she informed him he could no longer take control of her finances.

Until recently, the prima donna avers her husband was permitted to hold her purse strings, but his lavish spending caused her to change this arrangement. His brother, Gennaro Curci, is accused by the singer with attempting to capitalize his association with her in studying operatic roles.

Has Supported Family

"I instructed my attorneys, House Crossman & Voorhees, to replevin my belongings in the apartment, No. 27 West Sixty-seventh street now occupied by my husband and his brother, and also to retake my automobile, which they have been making use of," said Mme Galli Curci in her statement. "This is the culmination of a long series of events.

"From the time of my marriage my husband has earned practically nothing, but has lived entirely on my earnings. Not only he, but for the last two years his brother, Gennaro, also has looked to me for support.

"To make matters worse, my husband and his brother have been squandering my money and have by their conduct been seriously interfering with my career.

"Upon my return to the East I ascertained that my husband had practically depleted my bank account accordingly, I was compelled to change banks and to revoke his authority to sign cheques in my behalf. When I did this, in an effort to intimidate me into giving him money, and if that did not succeed, to humiliate me, my husband sued my manager, Mr. Charles L. Wagner, and my accompanist, Mr. Homer Samuels for $250,000 for alienation of affections. No one knows better than my husband and his brother how absurd this is and why the suit was brought.

"Some months ago I gave my husband 250,000 francs with which to buy bonds for me. Recently I discovered that the bonds were bought but in his name, and although I repeatedly demanded their return, he has refused to turn them over to me.

"I propose to support my husband

15,000 Have Made Their Last Voyage

Help the Dependents of the Victims of the Subs.

DO YOU realize who it is that has borne the brunt of Germany's hellish submarine campaign? It is not the Navy, for the U-boat tries to to keep out of the way of our fighting ships. Not the ship-owners, for insurance covers their losses. Not the insurance companies, for high rates protect them.

No! It is the 300,000 men of the Merchant Marine and the widows and orphans of the 15,000 that have made the supreme sacrifice.

The submarine has hit hardest in the thousands upon thousands of homes which have been robbed of the breadwinner. Widows may mourn their loss in poverty, for the Government makes no provision for this service, as it does for the soldier and sailor of the Army and Navy.

To protect us, to protect our trade, to let our soldiers cross the seas in safety, and to feed our soldiers and the Allied people in Britain, in France and the other theatres of war, our Merchant Marine has "carried on"—submarine or no submarine. They have paid the price.

We can help. It is our privilege to contribute to the support of the dependents of the victims of the submarine warfare. Ontario's objective is to contribute one million dollars. Ontario has never failed! Give! Give liberally!

Alkali in Shampoos Bad For the Hair

If you want to keep your hair looking its best, be careful what you wash it with. Don't use prepared shampoos or anything else, that contains too much alkali. This dries the scalp, makes the hair brittle, and ruins it.

The best thing for steady use is just ordinary mulsified cocoanut oil (which is pure and greaseless), and is better than anything else you can use.

One or two teaspoonfuls will cleanse the hair and scalp thoroughly. Simply moisten the hair with water and rub it in. It makes an abundance of rich, creamy lather, which rinses out easily, removing every particle of dust, dirt, dandruff and excessive oil. The hair dries quickly and evenly, and it leaves the scalp soft, and the hair fine and silky, bright, lustrous, fluffy and easy to manage.

You can get mulsified cocoanut oil at any pharmacy, it's very cheap, and a few ounces will supply every member of the family for months.

"The Girl Who Had No God"

By MARY ROBERTS RINEHART
Author of "The Man in Lower Ten," The After House," Etc.

CHAPTER X.

Into and through her garden Elinor walked quietly until she was safe from surveillance. Then she ran swiftly, ruthlessly across the flowerbeds, through the roses. The terrace was lighted. She avoided it, making a detour that led by a side entrance into old Hilary's library. For obvious reasons old Hilary's private telephone was in a sound proof closet.

Before Walter had taken a hundred watchful paces down the road she had Ward at the other end of the line. What with running and terror she could hardly speak. Once, long ago, she had heard a discussion between Boroday and her father about the use of the telephone. Its substance was that when the transmitter is held to the chest a clear message may be sent, but with the effect of distance. She held the transmitter to her breast then, and it seemed to her that Ward must hear the throbbing of her heart.

"Hello, hello!" came his quick response.

No need to ask who it was. She knew every inflection of his voice.

"This is a friend," Elinor panted. "I want to tell you something."

"Yes?" Very incisive now.

"To-night—very soon—an attempt——"

She stopped. What was she doing? She, her father's daughter, the head of the band! By warning Ward she might be sending Walter to his death. A vision of old Hilary, gray-headed, keen-eyed at this very telephone, flashed into her mind, old Hilary, whose religion had been of keeping the faith, not with his God, but with his men.

"Who are you?" the impatient voice was saying in her ears. "Are you sure you want me? This is Ward of Saint Jude's."

Elinor quietly hung up the telephone receiver and stood in the darkness, her hands to her throat.

Old Henriette, ever watchful, came into the library beyond. Elinor could hear her wandering about, knew the moment when she discovered her wrap on a chair, heard her plaintive voice speaking through a window to the empty terrace.

"Miss Elinor," she called; "Miss Elinor!"

Elinor let her go. When her shuffling footsteps had died away, Elinor took the received down again and called the assistant rector's house. But this time she spoke directly into the transmitter.

"This is Elinor Kingston, Mr. Ward. I wonder if you are very tired to-night?"

"I? Tired? I'm never tired."

"Because I am asking you to come up. I—there are some things that I want to talk about, questions that are troubling me. I know it is late, but——"

"I saw you at the early service. Of course I'll come up."

He had seen her then!

"I'll do my best," he was saying. "Of course you know that I may disappoint you. These questions that come from within must be answered in the same way. But I'm coming at once."

Elinor's battle was only half fought but she had a great sense of relief. Let him meet Walter on the way; so much the better. Let Huff know that Ward was out, and the offering presumably unguarded. He might hate the man, but no hope of a running fight with him would deter him from his main object, the money.

To save Ward, she was willing, even anxious, to let Walter succeed.

Women sometimes meet large crises with small vanities. But Elinor had no vanity. Without so much as a glance at the mirror she went out into the garden to listen for Ward's step on the road. She knew his walk already; the forceful certain step of an energetic and purposeful man.

The illuminated dial on the steeple of the Baptist church showed something after ten when Ward finally came up the hill. The relief of seeing him unharmed sent Elinor down the terrace steps with both hands out. Before he could take them Ward was obliged to stoop and deposit on the ground at her feet a small box that he carried.

"The morning collection," he said smiling, and took her hands in his.

Her quick alarm showed in her face.

"But you are reckless! To go about with so much money——"

Ward was following her up the steps.

"I dare say it is safer with me than any place else in the world. Did any one ever hear of an assistant rector going about with a fortune in his hand?"

He followed her into the library and placed the box on the great table where old Hilary had been wont to divide the annual earnings of the band. Ward pointed to it with his humorous smile.

"Would any one suspect," he said, "that in that box there is a stone parish house, a new church organ, and a children's play ground?"

Then, glancing at her with his keen eyes, he was struck by her pallor.

"You to ask me if I am tired!" he cried. "Why, you, poor child, it is you that are worn out. Wouldn't it be better to have me come to-morrow and go over the things you—spoke about?"

"I think we had better talk about them now," said Elinor, desperately calm.

At a quarter before eleven that Sunday night, old Henriette, bent on her evening task of sending Elinor to bed, wandered into the library. She found Ward, his earnest face glowing, expounding the tenets of his faith from the edge of his chair; and Elinor lying back, with her face drawn, watching the clock on the mantel.

Old Henrietta, astounded, withdrew not to sleep, but with the wakeful alertness of old age, to wander up and down the garden paths until such time as Elinor's visitor might leave.

Ward suddenly realized that he was making small headway. When at last he caught Elinor's eyes on the clock, he flushed and rose.

"I've done it all very badly," he said. "I seem to wander all about and not get anywhere. You see it's all so real to me——"

Elinor had leaned back with closed eyes.

"It is all very terrible to me," she replied. "This God of vengeance——"

"This God of tenderness and mercy," Ward supplemented. "Don't you see what it all means? How terrible this life would be if this were all! Our little lives, full of jealousies and hatreds and crimes: I bringing that box over there on the table, up here with me to-night, because I dare not trust it to my fellow men; I who could not sleep last night for thinking of you, who are all that is good and sweet and tender, up here alone in this great house, with God knows what danger lurking about."

Elinor had reached her limit. The band of her self control snapped. She could not hold him much longer, and before he went he must know.

"When I sent for you," she said, "I had two reasons. I wanted to see you please!" As he took a step toward her. "And I wanted to save you from something that I knew of."

Something in her thinly drawn voice was familiar.

"I see," Ward said slowly. "It was you who telephoned me and then rang off."

"When you say that I am good and tender," Elinor went on, "you shame me. I am all that is bad and wicked. Everything. You were to have been robbed to-night. I brought you here under false pretenses."

Ward was as white as she. His figure straightened.

"Then all the time that I have been telling you——"

"I did not hear. I was watching the time."

Personal fear, Ward had none. He did not even follow Elinor's eyes as they glanced once more at the clock. Mrs. Bryant's venomous insinuations came back to him, all the village talk of the girl's strange rearing. Fearful thoughts flashed into his mind, to be dismissed, shaken off doggedly.

FOR BABY'S TENDER SKIN.

A child's skin is tender as well as beautiful and eczema may be caused by chafing of clothing, the use of poor soap, exposure to cold or sudden change of temperature. Probably no treatment for eczema has ever proven so successful as Dr. Chase's Ointment, and this applies particularly to baby eczema. This ointment is delightfully soothing, stops the itching and consequently prevents scratching. Gradually the sores are healed up, and the skin is left soft and velvety.

Endurance!

Aerial warfare is playing a most important role in this world war. If about our Aviators the strain would be lifted and quiet.

Those who have to endure intense and nerve racking duties need to be primed up and fortified for the occasion. There must be no clog in the smooth running machinery of the human body. Eyes must be clear, brain quick and body normal. In order to meet these necessities proper care must be given to appetites. Food must be consumed that is rich in Carbohydrates, Proteins and Fats. COCOA—when mixed with milk is the ideal food drink to meet these requirements. It is a safe and sensible way to nourish the human body, for all times when quickness, accuracy and endurance are essential and when indecision spells defeat. ULTIMATUM TO RUSS SOVIET

Great Britain Demands Full Reparation for Murder of Capt. Cromie.

THREATEN BOLSHEVIKI

Will Make Members of Moscow Govt. Outlaws Among Civilized Nations.

LONDON, Sept. 4.—In its protest against the sacking of the British Embassy at Petrograd and the killing of Captain Cromie, the British Attache, the British Government declares: "An outrageous attack has been made on the British Embassy at Petrograd; its contents have been sacked and destroyed; Captain Crome, who tried to defend it, was murdered and his body barbarously mutilated.

"We demand immediate reparation and the prompt punishment of anyone responsible for or concerned in this abominable outrage.

"Should the Russian Government fail to give complete satisfaction, or should any further acts of violence be committed against a British subject, his Majesty's Government will hold the members of Soviet Government individually responsible and will make every endeavor to secure that they shall be treated as outlaws by the governments of all civilized nations, and that no place of refuge shall be left to them.

Soviet's Decree Issued.

"You have already been informed through M. Litvinoff that his Majesty's Government was prepared to do everything possible to secure the immediate return of the official representatives of Great Britain and of the Russian Soviet Government to their respective countries. A guarantee was given by his Majesty's Government that as soon as the British officials were allowed to pass the Russo-Finish frontier, M. Litvinoff and all the members of his staff should have permission to proceed immediately to Russia.

"We have now learned that a decree was published on August 29, ordering the arrest of all British and French subjects between the ages of 18 and 40, and that British officials have been arrested on trumped-up charges of conspiring against the Soviet Government.

"His Majesty's Government has therefore found it necessary to place M. Litvinoff and the members of his staff under preventive arrest until such time as all British representatives are set at liberty and allowed to proceed to the Finnish frontier free from molestation."

Great Submarine Officer

Capt. Francis Cromie, D.S.O., whose murder at Petrograd has called forth from the British Government, was one of the first of British submarine officers. At the outbreak of the war he commanded the Hong Kong submarine flotilla. During 1915 he commanded the E-19 in the Baltic, and torpedoed the third-class German cruiser Undine, also sinking or destroying ten German steamers. In November, 1915, he assumed command of the Baltic flotilla, and in May, 1916, was awarded the Distinguished Service Order and a succession of Russian honors. During the Russian revolution he handled the situation with the greatest tact and earned the respect even of the extremists for fair dealing and the way in which he continued the work of the flotilla against the Germans. In April, 1918, he was responsible for the destruction and evacuation of our submarines in the Baltic. He was appointed to the Russian Embassy owing to his knowledge of Russia and the conditions prevailing in the country.

GALLI-CURCI

no longer he is able-bodied and has a profession, and there is no reason why he should look to me further for support.

"Gennaro, my brother-in-law, has capitalized my name long enough, and I do not intend to permit my name to be used to give false impressions to the public. Besides supporting him for the last two years, I gave him $1,500 for accompanying me while I studied my operatic roles; he has tried to give the public the impression that he has been my teacher, and, of course, that is preposterous.

Notice of the replevin was served on Sheriff David H. Knott, who sent Deputy Sheriff Roney to the Curci home to take possession of the property. Mme. Galli-Curci named as her belongings, which she valued at $17,000, an extensive wardrobe including many Parisian gowns; a Capo di Monte vase, polar bear rug and valuable tapestry panels.

One of the rooms was fitted up exclusively in mahogany, alleged to be owned by the singer, and another room furnished in redwood, also claimed by Mme. Galli-Curci. She provided a bond of $34,000 as indemnity against any recognized claims.

Although Signor Curci's papers have not yet been filled, his wife and her manager admit such proceedings are under way. The artists alleges Wagner and Samuels conspired to deprive him of his wife's affections by making false and fraudulent representations to her about his character. He asserts they advised her to leave him, declaring he impeded her professional career and endangered its success.

CANADA'S MOUNTAIN CURIOS.

(10) Hoodoos or natural pillars near Banff, in the Canadian Pacific Rockies.

CANADA'S MOUNTAIN CURIOS

CANADA'S mountains are full of nature's curios — freaks in stone, ice and snow.

The Maker of the universe has exhibited infinite variety in His architecture. No two peaks are alike in shape or symmetry; no two waterfalls pour from the heights in equal volume; no two rocks or pebbles are similarly fashioned.

There are no "repeats" in the wonder world of the out-of-doors, and there are therefore marvels and curios beyond number.

Here are some of them: First, the now well-known but always interesting Hoodoos of Canmore. On a mountain side north of the C. P. R. Station may be seen a group of curious rocks known as The Hoodoos, a series of red conglomerate rocks, worn into fantastic shapes by weather action. There they stand, defiant of the passing years and of the passing storms as well, evidences of the freakish handiwork of nature. Imagination can easily picture them as humans turned to stone, like the pinnacles on the Witch Mountain of Norway, and legends could well be woven around them as around the Norwegian peak.

Next: let us go to the Prospector's Pass— a lonely Alpine region, south of Banff and Lake Louise, where one will find a strange rock known as Eagle's Eyrie. Standing in all its solitary grandeur, it looks like a pillar carved by the art and hands of man, but it is again a production of nature, imposing in its size when seen at close quarters. It is sometimes an actual nesting place for the eagle, where its young may rest secure from enemies.

Another form of curio is to be found in natural bridges. A fine specimen is to be seen at Field, where the Kicking Horse River is spanned by one of these rock arches, destined to last through the centuries and ages despite the constant erosion of the rushing waters. Thousands visit this curio in the realm of nature and are well repaid for the interesting sight.

The Glaciers provide another series of natural curiosities, in ice arches, caves, bridges and deep-hearted but dangerous fissures. Step into a typical ice cave if you would experience a new sensation. There you will realize how green green is, how delicately blue other shades may be, and how purely white roof or base may also be. Under one's feet may be born, as at the Illecillewaet Glacier of the Selkirks, while overhead a chimney-like opening glimpse of the blue sky.

Or if one is crossing a snow field, or negotiating a mountain as an alpinist, keep your eyes open for the curious snow cornices that overhang the valleys. They are often most freakish in design.

Finally, there is a rich assortment of natural curiosities in the Nakimu Caves of the Selkirks, reached from Glacier Station, where the limestone walls, as lit up by flashlights, reveal myriad forms, imitative of flowers, faces, animals or curiosities in rock architecture.

OUR DAILY SHORT STORY

Van Vivier's Scoop

By F. M. GILMER

Existence, as Philip Van Vivier planned it, was to be a very pleasant affair, though it had little enough about it of that strenuous life so ardently advocated by Mr. Roosevelt. He had youth, and health, and wealth, and he pictured the future a gay kaleidoscopic mingling of golf, and polo ponies, and grand opera, and little suppers after the play.

Then, too, to crown it all, there was Madge. Madge, tall and slight, and svelte, with the tawny gold in her hair, and the eyes that changed with every changing thought—that were as blue as summer skies when she smiled, and grew black as midnight when she thrilled to any deep emotion. Philip could hardly remember a time when he had not loved her. They had grown up, boy and girl, together, with something singularly similar in their fate. Both were orphaned children, left to the untender care of unwilling relatives, and Philip never forgot the moment of their meeting. His uncle's place adjoined that of Madge's guardian, and he had been wandering about the ground a forlorn and lonely childish figure, when he first came upon the little maid. She gave one long look at his somber face, and mourning clothes, and then with the swift and intuitive sympathy that God gives to even the youngest child, she went up to him.

"Little boy," she lisped, for she was scarcely more than a baby, "little boy, is 'oo lonesome, and doesn't nobody love 'oo?"

"No," he answered with a sob from the depths of his hungry little heart.

"Don't cry, little boy," she comforted, slipping her hand in his. "I 'ill love 'oo and 'oo won't never be lonesome any more," and, indeed, it seemed to Philip he had never been lonesome again. There was always Madge.

But who may count securely on the future? Move the kaleidoscope ever so gently, and its figures change. One turn of the hand of fate and the bright picture one's dreams painted are shattered forever. There came a day when Philip had to do, not with visions of a golden future, but with a hard and merciless present. Suddenly as an unexpected thunderbolt came the failure of the trust company in which his fortune was invested, and he awoke one morning to find himself that most pitiable of all creatures on earth—the man who needs money, and knows no way of earning it. He had taken the blow standing, with a smile on his lips, like the thoroughbred he was, and just how deep the hurt went none knew.

"Pleasant prospects," was his sole comment, with a shrug of his shoulders to those who would have condoled with him on his loss, "a beer income, and a champagne taste. Do you happen to know the best way to adjust them?"

He might meet the situation with laughter and scoffing so far as others were concerned, but when it came to Madge it was another thing. "I can't ask her to marry a beggar," he said to himself, setting his teeth, and with a face as white as death, "and I'm not poltroon enough to settle down and live on her money," and there had been a terrible scene in which he had told her this, and released her from her promise to marry him.

"Oh, Philip, Philip," she cried, clinging to him, "what good is all my money to me if I can't make things easy for you? Surely there is more than enough for us both."

Then he tried to explain to her, blunderingly and haltingly, that something that is dearer to man than even love of woman—that something which he must have, or die of self-loathing—his own self-respect.

"I couldn't live without it, darling," he said at last, passionately, "if I gave in to fate without one struggle, and was content to let you support me, I should imagine your contempt for such a weakling in every tone of your dear voice. I should see it in every glance of your dear eyes. No, no, I must make my fight and win my place in the world of men, or I will die fighting on the battlefield. If I succeed I will come back to claim my own. If I fail, a better man wins. Don't you see how it must be that way?"

And in the end Madge "saw." The sympathy that always understood others was part of her charm, and Philip went away.

At college he had rather distinguished himself by some clever skits in the college journal, and so it seemed natural to him to turn to journalism as the most available way of settling the bread and butter problem. A friend obtained a place for him on the staff of the morning Asterisk, where he began at the bottom of the reportorial ladder, and learned among other bitter pieces of knowledge that the public hungers and thirsts for gory details of murder, and has but a lukewarm interest in the higher criticism, and that on a newspaper staff a university degree is regarded with far less respect than a nose for news.

Still, the glamour stripped from journalism, Philip kept doggedly on. He acquired a reputation for being faithful and accurate. He was a gourmand for work and the city editor began to speak hopefully of him, but advancement comes slowly in a newspaper office, and to Philip Madge seemed an immeasurable distance off, when suddenly he made his great scoop. It was the merest accident—successes mostly are, if we knew the truth of them. One evening he was walking along one of the fashionable residence streets when suddenly he was startled by a scream, and looking up he saw a woman with the wild eyes and cunning of a maniac sitting on the very outer coping of the walls of a tall house, where she waved her arms gleefully, and leaned dizzily forward to peer into the street below. In an instant all the mystery of the drawn blinds, and jealously guarded doors of the mansion, at which many had marveled, was revealed. Here was one of those family tragedies, at which the world guesses—some poor crazed creature, living out her life within padded walls, who had escaped from her keepers, and with that instinct of flight from a prison which survives all reason, was preparing to take a fatal leap into the street below. The street crowd that seems to spring from the very pavement whenever anything unusual happens, had already gathered. They could see the frantic gestures of the keeper vainly trying to call the woman, but at every movement, the crouching creature's figure on the perilous edge made a motion as if to cast herself down, and for very fear the attendant dare not approach her. The great front door of the house was flung suddenly open, and terrified servants rushed about vainly seeking assistance, but none knew what to do, and the crowd below could only wait breathlessly for the impending tragedy.

It had taken Philip but an instant to realize the scene, and with a sudden inspiration he dashed past the servant in the doorway, and up the stairway. The crazed woman was still young and pretty. A dainty silken robe, and a filmy lace scarf blew about her. Evidently she was a woman of fashion and society, so the thought flew through his mind as he dashed up the three flights of steps and through the open door in the roof through which she had evidently climbed. He knew well enough he might be going to his death, but he only smiled a little grimly, and moved on towards the pathetic figure swaying on the ledge of the wall. The woman looked up at the sound of an approaching step. She saw a handsome young man—a young man such as she vaguely remembered in that world that was not all horrible dreams and padded walls—coming toward her. When he reached her he made a courtly bow, and offered her his arm, and without one protest, mechanically, naturally, as if they had been on the ballroom floor, she arose and put her hand within it, and together they started toward the house, treading the narrow ledge, whose outer edge was death. A single push of the crazed woman's feeble hand and mutilation waited for them below, but there was not a tremble in the man's voice as he asked her:

"And what did you think of the new tenor this winter at the opera?"

In the street below the crowd stood silent, tense with excitement, until they saw Philip hand the woman, still with courtly grace, through the door in the roof, and then it broke into tumultuous cheering.

As for Philip, his one thought was to get to the office. His part in the adventure appealed to him not at all. It was what any fellow would have done, he thought, and he could leave that out, but he realized the value of the story. The secret of the darkened mansion. The closed blinds. The beautiful woman, with her wild, mad eyes—it was full of color, it was picturesque. Besides it was a scoop. No other reporter had been there, and a scoop is as dear to the newspaper heart as a first-born to a mother. There was still some of the excitement of the adventure tingling in his veins, and as he wrote he felt his description was vivid, and he turned it in to the city editor with the calm and unmixed satisfaction of knowing that it was good "copy."

There is, perhaps, no other joy in life equal to that of the young writer who reads his own productions in type, and Philip's first conscious act the next morning was to reach for the paper. He had expected his story to be given some prominent place; perhaps to be featured. To his dismay it was not even printed. He looked the paper over twice to have suspicion deepen into certainty. It had been left out. How long he might have stared at the paper in bewilderment he never knew, but that two letters caught his eyes, as they lay upon his table. One was from the city editor of the Asterisk, and he pounced upon it for an explanation.

"Dear Van Vivier," he read, "sorry, but your scoop was scooped. The distressed damsel you rescued is old La Roux's daughter, and La Roux, as you appear not to know, is the heaviest stockholder in the Asterisk. Naturally he wanted your story killed. Virtue is rewarded, however. He suggests you for night editor in place of Clarson who has resigned. Report for duty tonight."

The other letter was from Madge. It said:

"Dear Philip: I have heard of your rescue of poor Fannie La Roux. How could you be such a hero, and such a goose as to take such a risk? You need a guardian, sir, and I am going to marry you to take care of you on this day one month. You can't refuse a lady, you know. Yours, Madge."

Philip read the letter twice, and then he bowed his head on the table, and when he raised it his eyes were very dim and tender.

CHASE & SANBORN MONTREAL

A Humane German.

Gen. Count Max Montgelas is said to be a second "Count Lichnowsky." From the same retreat of Switzerland he has written in the Berliner Tageblatt an article protesting against military excesses of which he was an indignant witness at the beginning of the war. It would be instructive, as well as timely, if some one were to compile reliable statistics giving the number of prominent Germans in revolt against militarism who have already sought refuge under the friendly sheltering wing of the little republic.

The Farmer-ettes

Whether from city or country find themselves living under an unusual strain. The unusual work necessitates the use of different muscles and this development demands a good supply of pure, rich blood.

Because it goes directly to the formation of new blood, Dr. Chase's Nerve Food is of the greatest assistance in building up new cells and tissues and strengthening the muscles.

AGED FRENCH EMPRESS.

Remembering Days of 1870 Rejoices In Present Victories.

The aged Empress Eugenie, the last Empress of France, who has been living in England since the birth of the French republic, is watching with intense interest the successful drive of the Americans and French on the Marne.

The farther the Allies drive the Germans, the farther the Huns will run from the city of Compiegne, which not only has deep significance from a military standpoint, but for which the Empress has a passionate romantic attachment.

It was at Compiegne that Napoleon III. made Eugenie his offer of marriage.

Breaking from a hedge some flexible green branches, the Emperor twisted them into the form of a crown and placed it on her head. Then, in a tone loud enough for all to hear he said:

"Until you wear the crown of gold!"

Naturally the city has been sacred to the Empress ever since, and she would be deeply grieved if the Germans captured it. At one point in their June offensive the Germans were within five miles of it. Now all immediate danger of its capture is removed.

A story is told of the Empress, who is now nearly 90 years old, in connection with the beginning of the war. She stood in a window in Paris, thinking of the war of 1870, as the French army marched by on its way to the front. As she watched them she cried:

"This shall be my revenge!"

Eugenie has been caring for wounded soldiers in her English home.

Twice Heard.

A lady said to the late Sir Herbert Beerbohm Tree during his sojourn in her city:

"Sir Herbert, I once saw you in the part of Falstaff, and I enjoyed your work immensely—only you didn't know your lines. My seat was a front one and I assure you that I heard the prompter's voice quite as much as I heard yours."

Sir Herbert laughed.

"And don't you agree, madam," he said, "that all good poetry is well worth hearing twice?"

POLICE DISSATISFIED.

STRATFORD, Sept. 4.—Because of the action of the Police Commission yesterday in refusing the 15 per cent. increase asked for by the police constables, one of the men resigned this morning, and there is a possibility that more of them will do the same. The Commission said that the estimates did not allow for an increase. The men claim that their present wage is not sufficient for a married man with a family.

SOLDIERS AT COLLEGE

CANADIANS RECEIVE SCHOLARSHIPS IN OLD LAND.

Partially Disabled Men Are Attending British Universities Where They Are Taking Up Special Course of Study Which Will Enable Them to Occupy Good Situations When Peace Comes Again.

THANKS to the scheme of granting scholarships to soldiers and sailors of the overseas dominions, some fifteen partially disable Canadians are now enjoying the benefits of courses in the best British universities and technical schools. So far 37 such scholarships have been granted, and Canadians hold almost half. The scheme is under the supervision of the Rhodes Scholarship Trust, of which Dr. Parkyn, late principal of Upper Canada College, is head.

But the twenty-three Rhodes scholarships so far allotted to soldiers are quite apart from the regular Oxford bursaries, which during the past few years have been awarded so many Canadian and other university post-graduates. In addition to the Rhodes scholarships are the Kitchener Memorial scholarships, and still others provided by Sir Alfred Belt, etc. In fact, no limit has been set to the number. As occasion arises the trust proposes to call upon wealthy Britishers who have amassed large fortunes from overseas interests to subscribe scholarships for soldiers and sailors of these dominions. The scholarships usually include a cash grant in addition to payment of the fees at the institution in question.

All branches of education — literary and scientific — are comprised in the scheme, and the fact that applicants may have had only a most elementary education prior to enlistment is not necessarily a bar.

Soldiers eligible must in the first place be men who have served at the front and no longer fitted for general service. Then they must be recommended by their commanding officers as men fitted to accept and benefit by the scholarship. Finally, the candidates thus recommended go before a special committee, who decide. The men selected are then given a year's leave, without pay or allowances, though those drawing allowances have this continued. The camps and convalescent homes have been well circularized for applicants.

Unlike the regular pre-war courses, the Soldiers' and Sailors' scholarships are only for one year, and consequently successful completion cannot lead to a degree, but they are very valuable to university men and of great benefit to any man. In recognition of the necessary shortness of the courses the work will be arranged so that the instruction shall be as comprehensive as possible, and the certificates granted will really be in the way of diplomas.

Among those to whom scholarships have been granted are the following:

Sergt. J. A. Church, of Smith's Falls, who had spent four months on his senior matriculation, is going to the Imperial College of Science and Technology to study civil engineering. As long service at the front had made him a bit rusty in his work the Trust has sent him to take a preparatory course at Birkbeck School.

Sergt. P. S. Warren, of Toronto University, formerly a teacher, goes to the I. C. of S. and T. for mineralogy and geology.

Corpl. P. H. Galloway, who before enlistment was in his second year at political science in Toronto University, leaves the 3rd Canadian Reserve Battalion to study economics at Brasenose College, Oxford.

Gunner J. H. Groves, educated at the Toronto Public Schools and a B.A. of Toronto University, also goes to Brasenose College, Oxford, to study law.

Corpl. H. W. Crosbie, 5th C.M.R., of Chatham, who had passed his senior matriculation, goes to Edinburgh University to study forestry.

Corpl. L. S. Cutler, Manitoba Regimental Depot, of Coldstream, Ont., and educated at Woodstock Collegiate, and B.A. of McMaster University, a law student ere he turned soldier, will study economics at St. John's College, Oxford.

Pte. H. H. Blanchard, of Baddeck, N.S., B.A. of Dalhousie University and a student for the Presbyterian ministry and a teacher, is going to Edinburgh to take a course in theology and philosophy.

Sergt. O. R. Ensor, an old 3rd Battalion man from Toronto, goes to study commerce at Birmingham University.

Pte. G. B. Monk, of Ottawa, who fought in the 73rd Battalion, went to school in Ottawa, Almonte and Cornwall, and was bookkeeper in a wholesale grocery warehouse before he enlisted, is off to Edinburgh University to take up mineralogy, forestry and foreign languages.

Lieut. F. G. Dashwood, of the R.F.C., goes to Oxford to study economics and education.

Lt.-Col. Lascelles, the officer in charge of the above scheme, is loud in his praise of the Canadian khaki college inaugurated by Prof. Tory, and doing such excellent work both in the field and in England. Col. Lascelles, who is an Imperial, hopes to see this Canadian system of education adopted by the British army.

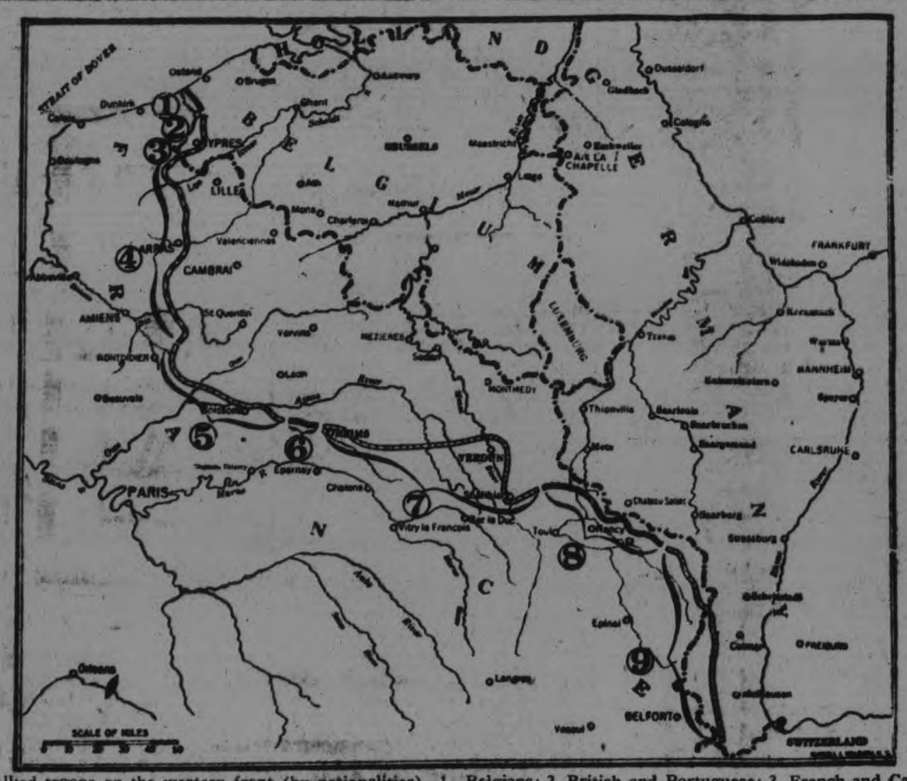
Cut Out For the Job.

"I wanted to enlist and fight for me country," said Tired Trotters, to the sharp-eyed woman at the door. "But I'm chicken-breasted an' de recruiting officer turned me down. Have youse got any light work dat a poor, afflicted man——"

"Yes, indeed," replied the farmer's wife. "One of my sitting hens has just abandoned her nestful of eggs."

"Loafer."

While Canada has been led, owing to the war, to enact legislation against loafers, it is of interest to note that it is to the Germans that she is indebted even for the name "loafer"—simply an abbreviation of "strassenlaufer," "runner of the streets."



Allied troops on the western front (by nationalities)—1, Belgians; 2, British and Portuguese; 3, French and Canadians; 4, British and Canadians; 5, French and Americans; 6, Americans; 7, French; 8, Americans; 9, French and Italians. —New York Times.

A NIGHT RAID ON PARIS.

American Girls Watch German Airships at Midnight.

It was nearly midnight when the sirens screamed suddenly from all quarters of the sky at once. It was a screech that ripped the air as if the scroll of the heavens was being rent; and instantly all the lights went out and we were in pitchy darkness, except as the surprised moon peered in between our curtains. There was a gasp of astonishment; then people who were in bed jumped out, fumbled about for more or less clothing, and rushed to windows or out into the street. From my third floor I could see Gaston on the pavement below, dancing up and down like a midge and shrieking with joy at the rattling crash of the air-guns, or the terrible detonations of exploding bombs. A group of American girls leaned appallingly far out of their window and craned their young necks to stare up at the stars of man's ingenuity moving about among the stars of God's serenity and law. They were darting — these stars — zigzagging, soaring up to grapple with one another against the face of the moon; and some of them were dropping death down on our heads. As "efficiency" duplicated the French signal lights on German machines, we did not know which were the stars of murder and which were the stars of defence—only God's stars were candid. And all the while the pretty young Americans (why do their father and mothers let them come over here?) watched the battle with exactly the same happy excitement that I have seen on their faces at a football game; they were all ready to turn down their pink thumbs for a German aviator, only — "which are the Germans?" one said distractedly.

A moving star suddenly seemed to stagger, then swooped, then fell straight — straight — straight down with horribly increasing velocity. We knew that in that flaming star were men keyed to furious living, panting, screaming orders to each other, sweating, tearing at levers, knowing they were plunging from abysmal heights to smash like eggs on some slate roof. As that agonizing star fell, the eager young faces were smiling fiercely, and I could hear panting ejaculations:

"Oh! Oh! Oh! Look! See him? See him? Oh, I hope he's a German!"

And so before their eyes two men dropped to death.—Margaret Deland in Harper's Magazine.

"Keeping Canada British."

Bishops and members of Parliament were present at the annual meeting held in London of the Maple Leaf Fellowship for Supplying British Teachers to Western Canada. Bishop Colchester said the work done was of enormous importance in keeping Canada British and Christian, but they must have more schools and teachers. Bishop Norwich suggested the best way of honoring the memory of dead Canadian heroes was by making provision for their children. Joynson Hicks, member of Parliament, urged the necessity in reconstruction after the war of directing emigration to the Dominions to the greatest possible extent. Teachers were especially necessary to educate aliens in our ideals.

Night Favors Earthquakes.

Earthquakes are declared by a seismologist to be more frequent in California during the night than during the daylight hours. This is all the more evident when it is recognized that in small communities slight disturbances occurring at night when most people are soundly asleep may pass entirely unrecorded. During 1916 the time of occurrence was determined in 63 earthquakes. Of these 27, or 43 per cent., occurred during the daylight hours, 6 a.m. to 6 p.m., and 36, or 57 per cent., during the remaining twelve hours. A study of 1,405 Californian earthquakes which occurred during 147 years, from 1769-1915 inclusive, showed exactly the same distribution. While this is apparently another singular coincidence it is worthy of mention.—East Suffolk Gazette.

Concert at Sea Bottom.

A sailor who was a prisoner on board a U-boat describes the life of the Hun pirates.

Apparently it was an old submarine, he says. It was 150 feet long. The inside was damp, water coming in all the time. This made life aboard uncomfortable, but in other ways the crew were well off.

For thirteen hours the U-boat remained anchored on the bed of the sea, 150 feet of water above her. The air was cool and good all the time, the sailor says, and they had an enjoyable concert, a gramophone assisting. During this long rest on the bed of the sea several wireless messages were received.

There was plenty of food — potatoes, bully beef, sausage and coffee. The crew, all young, except a mate of 35, numbered 23.—London Mail.

Indians In Khaki.

Eight thousand Canadian Indians out of a total population of 110,000 are at the front as voluntary soldiers. The number would be more than quadrupled, according to representative chiefs, but for the prevalence of tuberculosis in the west, a majority of the candidates for the army having been rejected by the medical boards, and the non-admission of the red men to franchise privileges.

MAY RETREAT BEYOND THE CHEMINS DES DAMES

Americans and French Are Still Going Forward Between the Vesle and the Aisne, Cleaning Up Machine Gun Nests as They Advance.

FEW PRISONERS TAKEN

(Special to The Examiner.)
(By Ferd Ferguson.)

WITH THE AMERICANS ON THE AISNE, Sept. 6.—Indications are that the German retreat possibly will go beyond the Chemin-Des-Dames in the Hindenburg line.

American troops went froward throughout the night, opposed on the plateau between the Vesle and the Aisne by hidden machine gun nests and by shell fire from the heights above the Aisne. There were sharp fights in clearing out nests of machine guns beyond Vaux, but our progress was practically uninterrupted. Several machine guns were captured, but the prisoners do not exceed twenty so far as known. Most of them, anxious to get out of the war, hid in the cellars when a retreat was ordered and surrendered as soon as the Americans approached.

In addition to advancing to the Aisne the Allies are moving in a northwesterly direction, furnishing the possibility of another movement to crowd the Boche off the plateau to the east, from which German observation posts overlook the higher ground between the Vesle and the Aisne. From this point of vantage Vaux, Basliez, Blanzy and other towns now behind the Allied lines are clearly visible to the enemy observers.

Heavy Shelling.

Basliex was being shelled today. I could see the Americans running to cover as clouds of smoke and dust rose from the exploding shells. Support troops were visible moving up to the main battle line, along the plateau's northern slopes which dip down to the Aisne. Along the ridge of the plateau shells broke intermittently, but the quietness of the Vesle valley was more marked than the noise from the fighting. Light traffic was to be seen on the roads north of the Vesle. South of the stream, however, men and waggons were moving up rapidly over roads which were screened by both French and German camouflage.

FINE RESULTS FROM ADVERTISING

An Examiner Advertiser Gets Many Replies From a Small Advertisement.

The following is an extract from a letter received to-day from an advertiser in the Examiner:

"I am writing to ask you please to discontinue my ad. in the Examiner re apartments at Juniper Island. I must tell you that I have had sixty-one letters in answer to this advertisement, which, I think, speaks for itself."

With a circulation of very close to 6,000 copies, results are bound to be obtained from publicity in the Examiner.

2,600,000 Bushels of Grain Over G.T.R. Here Last Week

The heavy grain traffic through Peterboro over the G. T. R. is indicated by the figures of last week when, 2,600,000 bushels of grain were hauled. American oats from the north central states comprised the bulk of the grain carried. It is being diverted from the United States lines because of their congestion with troop movements and the transportation of grain and other goods moving east. The Canadian boat and rail facilities were called in to relieve the pressure of the present business, and the G.T.R. is getting a big share of the surplus.

Fifteen thousand tons of coal were also hauled from Midland to the Belleville terminal for us by the G. T.R. at that terminal.

The C. P. R. has forbidden the use of hard coal, especially of domestic sizes, for the heating of stations throughout Canada.

IT IS THE "KNOW HOW" THAT COUNTS.

Besides the experience, skill, knowledge and equipment, we have the judgment—the "know how"—that qualifies us to fit your eyes properly with glasses. See Dr. Lacey, 410 George Street.

SAVING IS NATIONAL SERVICE

To save is a patriotic duty. At the present time Canada needs money for war purposes as she never did before. The war cannot be won without it, and it is from the savings of the people that the needed money must come, there being no other source in sight.

Considered from the standpoint of self-interest people should save, for the very demand for money experienced to-day puts a premium on savings.

Savings on things that are not necessaries releases money for war work, or what are considered the essential industries. The war can be won more quickly if people discontinue their old way of living. The average person can readily think of a number of ways in which his expenditure may be curtailed without hardship to himself; indeed with a reduced scale of spending he would be greatly benefited.

Save and thus render a distinct national service. In so doing you also serve yourself.

FRENCH GAINS AT MANY POINTS ARE CONTINUING

Important Junction Point of Ham is Practically Taken, While French and Americans Have Reached the Aisne on a Ten Mile Front.

CHAUNY IS REACHED

(Special to The Examiner.)
(By John De Gandt.)

PARIS, Sept. 6.—(10 a.m.)— From the north-west, south-west and from the south, the important junction point of Ham on the road to St. Quentin, is virtually taken according to battlefront advices (Ham is in the southern part of Picardy, twelve miles north of Noyon.)

General Humbert, in his movement from the west against the Chemin-Des-Dames and positions north of the Aisne, is enveloping Genlis Woods, and nearing the line of Crosat canal.

North of the Oise, French advance detachments are reported reaching Chauny. To the north-east of Soissons the Allies are nearing Sancy and Laffaux. The French and Americans have reached the Aisne on a front of more than ten miles.

La Fere in Flames.

LONDON, Sept. 6. —La Fere, the German supply base twenty miles north of Soissons, is reported in flames. (The Allies' nearest approach to La Fere is in the region of Chauny, 7 1-2 miles south-west of it.)

FRENCH TROOPS PUSH FORWARD ON WIDE FRONT

Are Gaining All Along the Line From the Somme and the Vesle and Many Villages Have Been Captured by the Poilus.

GAINS ARE IMPORTANT

Canadian Press:

PARIS, Sept. 6. — (Official). — French troops during the night continued to push forward on the entire front between the Somme and the Vesle.

South of Peronne the French troops made further crossings of the Somme in the region of Epancourt.

Further south, the Ham-Peronne Road was reached at several points. South of Ham the towns of Le Plessis-Patte and Berlancourt were captured, and still further south the French troops pushed beyond Guivry, Caillouel-Crepigny and Adoe.

In the region north of the Ailette the French reached the outskirts of Sincy and the plateau north of Landryourt, and south of the Ailette the advancing forces are along the Vauxaillon Ravine.

The American troops, advancing from the Vesle, have captured the town of Glemies, south-east of Revillon, and have advanced their lines as far as the outskirts of Villers-En-Prayeres on the Aisne.

Bush Likely To Face Tyler

Canadian Press:

CHICAGO, Ill., Sept. 6.—With the Red Sox one game in the lead as a result of their victory yesterday, the winners of the National and American League championships faced each other again to-day in the second game of the last world series to be played for the duration of the war. Tyler for the Cubs, and Bush for the Red Sox were picked by the fans to start in to-day's contest.

Franco-American Troops at Aisne

WITH THE AMERICAN ARMY IN FRANCE, Sept. 6.—The Franco-American troops reached the south bank of the Aisne last night between Conde and Vieil areas on an 8-mile front. They also occupied the towns of Dhuizel and Barbonal virtually without opposition.

REST FOR CANUCKS

Corps is Having a Breathing Spell —Patrols Report That the Enemy is Holding the Canal du Nord in Front of Canadians in Strong Force.

BRIDGES DESTROYED

(By J. F. B. Livesay, Canadian Press Correspondent.)

WITH THE CANADIANS IN FRANCE, Sept. 6.—Our patrols report the enemy is holding the Canal Du Nord in front of us in strong force. He has very strong machine gun posts in the woods of Queancy, on the north of the Sensee river valley and north of this valley he holds strong ground. He also holds the villages and woods fronting us on the Canal Du Nord, which is here, in some parts, fifty yards across.

The enemy has blown up locks and nearly every bridge.

The British troops have crossed the canal further south. Meantime the Canadian corps is having a well earned rest. Some of its units suffered heavily from machine gun fire.

Nothing in the desperate infantry battle of Monday was more remarkable than to see the enemy's troops streaming away eastward, while through these beaten masses came his picked corps of machine gunners, prepared to sell their lives dearly. The extent of the great victory when the Canadian corps stormed the famous Queant-Drocourt switch, hitherto regarded as impregnable, may be best judged by the fact that Canadians and British fighting in this sector, overwhelmed on that day no fewer than eleven enemy divisions, including picked troops and divisions brought in fresh from reserve. These elements have been all positively identified by prisoners taken from them.

HOLLAND TO PROTEST

Canadian Press:

THE HAGUE, Sept. 6.—The Dutch Minister at Berlin has been instructed to protest against the destruction by German submarines of vessels within what is designed as the barred zone, and against the sinking of seven Dutch fishing vessels on Aug. 24.

American Army Will be Bigger Than the German

Canadian Press:

PARIS, Sept. 6. — The American army in France next spring will alone exceed the whole fighting strength of the German army, but in the meantime German divisions released by the shortening of the line, if the retreat is effected successfully, and with half a million recuperated from the wounded, and 400,000 men of the 1920 class now completing training, will constitute a manoeuvring army with which General Ludendorff may be tempted to hazard another offensive stroke.

Greatest Revenue Bill Ever Before U.S. Congress

WASHINGTON, Sept. 6.— The House to-day began the consideration of the greatest revenue bill ever presented to the American Congress. Three months in the making and carrying a total of eight billion dollars, was offered by Chairman Kitchin, of the Ways and Means committee, as providing the speediest method of providing funds for the successful prosecution of the war.

British Gain In Flanders and Picardy

Neuve-Chapelle, in the Lys Sector, and Bussu and Other Villages East of Peronne in Hands of General Haig's Men.

IMPORTANT PROGRESS

Special to The Examiner:

LONDON, Sept. 6.—British troops to-day captured Neuve Chapelle, in the Flanders battlefield, and Bussu, east of Peronne.

Field Marshal Haig's forces crossed the Canal Du Nord on the whole front except from Havrincourt north to the Scarpe.

Between the Somme and the Oise French troops have captured Block-halais, three miles of Chauny. The French have secured a good hold on the northern bank of the Ailette and on the terrain between that river and the Oise.

Advancing east of the River Somme to the south of Peronne, the British have captured the villages of St. Christ, Brie, and Le Mesnils Bruntel, with prisoners.

On the Flanders front the British are establishing a portion of the old German front line east of Neuve Chapelle and in the British line in Fauxuissart. The British also have advanced north-west of Armentieres. North of Peronne British forces are in possession of Bussu, and are in the immediate vicinity of Templeux-La-Fosse, Nurlu, and Equancourt. South-east of Peronne the British have reached Athis and Mons-En-Chaussee. They have captured the village of Doingt.

WILL DISCUSS AGREEMENT FOR THE BRIDGE WORK

Board of Works Meeting To-night Will Consider the Terms of Mr. Barber's Engagement.

MAYOR COUNSELS CAUTION

Ald. Weir has called a meeting of the Board of Works to-night to discuss the terms of the agreement upon which Mr. Frank Barber will be engaged to prepare the plans and specifications and supervise the construction of the Hunter street bridge. Mr. Barber was chosen by the Council on Tuesday night and was ready to begin work the next morning. Mayor Duncan, however, wasn't impressed by this burst of speed, and plainly stated that before any operations were commenced there would have to be a careful deliberation on the agreement.

It is expected that the entire Council will be present to-night. Ald. Worth has returned home and Ald. Langford will likely answer the roll call. The entire Council constitutes the Board.

Tuesday night's decision not only gratified the Ashburnham ratepayers, but also a sizable deputation from the Carpenters' and other labour unions, who were prepared to oppose a deputation which, it was reported, would urge the Council to defer the building of the bridge until the times are more propitious. However, the expected deputation did not appear, but more than one citizen observed for the first time, the Council in action.

There is some probability that the question of selecting an engineer, already decided, will be re-opened. Some of the members take the position that this appointment should not have been made without the approval of the entire Council, and also that Mr. Barber should not have been chosen until all the applications had been considered.

Householders Put Earth in Garbage

A thoughtless practice on the part of many citizens of mixing incombustible material with garbage causes great inconvenience to the workmen at the incinerator. Earth swept from flower beds and lawns with dead plants has begun to arrive in such large quantities that it is increasingly difficult to keep the fires burning. Sanitary Inspector Stapleton requests householders to keep garbage separate. One result will be a diminished use of wood in maintaining the fires, and therefore the cost of operating the incinerator will remain normal.

FRANK JENNE Says:

To-morrow come into my shop and get fitted in the way you'll like in a suit you'll like. With the coming of autumn you are feeling the need for a new suit for fall and winter wear. Whether you select a suit from our stock, or whether you have one tailored to your special order, you are sure to be eminently satisfied with Semi-ready clothes. "Come to me."

FOCH'S LIGHTNING BLOWS CONTINUE TO FORCE RETREAT

The Main German Armies Are Falling Back—Prisoners, Guns and Material Are Being Left Behind, While Food is Scarce.

MUST ATTEMPT STAND

(By William Phillip Simms).

Special to the Examiner:

PARIS, Sept. 6.—From the Belgian border to Rheims the three principal groups of the German armies—Crown Prince Rupprecht's, General Von Bohem's and Crown Prince Wilhelm's—to-day continued to retreat, while all Germany was at the ebb tide of depression, wondering when and where it would stop.

Almost daily the great drama offers a fresh sensation, Foch's lightning-like blows forcing withdrawal after withdrawal, now in Champagne, now in Artois, now in Flanders, then in Artois and Champagne again, and sometimes in all these districts together.

Crown Prince Retreats.

Mangin's pressure northward of Soissons at last sent the Crown Prince scurrying back across the Aisne, leaving prisoners, guns and material in the hands of the advancing French and Americans. Cavalry, part American and part French, galloped into the German rear guards, cutting up straggling contingents, while French and American guns from the positions north of Soissons enfiladed the valley of the Aisne, making crossing bloody work for the retreating enemy columns. Food is lacking almost all along the enemy line, due first to the destruction of stores by the Germans themselves as they withdraw, second, to the capture of supplies by the Allies, and third, to the continual harrassing of American and French artillery along the roads in the Boche rear.

Meantime Humbert is pushing toward La Fere and St. Quentin, and the British are improving their positions before Cambrai and Douai. The Armentieres salient in Flanders has been practically wiped out, and the British are on the edge of Armentieres itself. Thus the Germans are practically against the old Hindenburg line everywhere, and the Allied troops are across it in places.

The hour has nearly arrived when Hindenburg and Ludendorff must at the very least attempt to make some sort of a stand, even if they essay nothing more ambitious than to prevent an absolute panic at the Somme.

CANNOT AGREE ON CHAIRMAN

Special to the Examiner:

TORONTO, Sept. 6. — Hartly H. Dewart, M.P.P., and Fred. Bancroft, representing the Algoma Steel Corporation and its employees respectively, in the dispute between the company and its men, having failed to agree upon the selection of a chairman of the arbitration board, the Minister of Labour was to-day asked to appoint a chairman.

A New Suggestion For Fuel Commission

Brought Out Through an Interview With a Coal Dealer.

The Examiner in an interview with a coal dealer on the subject of coal, in endeavouring to obtain some information relative to the matter, touched on the difficulties of getting a fuel commission to act.

The dealer made the statement that the coal men were handling the situation, he felt, as well as it could be taken care of under the circumstances and conditions as they exist at present, but that a commission of three men should be able to offer suggestions and if they were practicable they could be worked out. In any event the commission would know what was going on in the coal distribution and the information they would get might be of a different nature than what many people expect is the case.

The dealer then suggested a commission of three, from members of the Trades and Labour Council representing the majority of small users of coal in the city.

Evidently the coal men feel they are handling the situation to the best of their ability, but are desirous of the assistance and suggestions a commission can offer, by whom, no doubt, the responsibility of distribution would be more or less assumed.

EDITORIAL NOTES.

It looks as if one of these days before long, an official German report will contain the following: "According to plan we withdrew out troops across the Rhine, undisturbed by the enemy, who followed hesitatingly."

Admiral Beresford says the mercantile marine has really enabled us to carry on the war. That should be remembered when you are asked to contribute to the Navy League Fund.

THE RETURN OF THE "EDITORS."

No class of citizens as individuals should put the British Government to an expense of more than $100,000 in order that they might meet the leaders of war effort, inspect the British supply factories and visit the west front. But if a class of citizens is given such a trip because of the benefit they may confer upon many other people, there may be reason in such a grand expedition as that which was misnamed the Canadian editors' party.

If there were half a dozen actual writing newspapermen in the party there were not many more. Bona-fide editors were left at home, while those more fond of the term "journalist" than the actual work that such a title entails did the honours and accepted the kudos on behalf of Canadian newspaperdom. Very few of the members of the party, even if they are able to do so, will sit down and write their impressions of the journey. For them it was a strictly personal party, courtesies being extended by Lord Beaverbrook out of the coffers of the British taxpayers. But it is less the fault of those who went than the fault of those who selected the personnel of the party, and no doubt this was carried out on lines of personal preferment and political influence.

The city of Quebec had four members on the party. The west had one or two. Toronto, Hamilton and London had at least two newspapermen in the party, and the other membership was made up of members of class publications, and those who conduct printing houses. Just what will be the gross population reached by the stories of the visit is difficult to estimate. It will not be anything extraordinary, however. Possibly one in every thousand Canadians will hear something about it as a result of the visit of these Canadian "writers." — London Advertiser.

THE FINAL TEST.

(Toronto Globe.)

No! In the final test of endurance to which the war tends, the Allied nations may be relied upon to outlast the Germans. Standing upon the Meuse or the Rhine, where the defensive has great advantages, Germany may for a considerable period delay a military decision, but she will not be able to win for herself the right of sitting at a peace conference as an undefeated great power and arranging what part of the wreckage of the nations crushed by her shall be retained and what part restored. Victory will come by endurance, but it will be victory for the nations that fight for the reign of law in international relations. Righteousness must triumph over the naked fist.

Police Department Presented Clock to Departing Matron

Magistrate Dumble, Chief Thompson and Others Paid High Tributes to the Service Mrs. McElhiney Has Given the City as the Pioneer in This Position.

The routine of the police court room last night was happily varied when a fine mahogany clock was presented to Mrs. McElhiney, who has been actively connected with the Police Department in her capacity as police matron since she and the Commandant came to Peterborough.

Officials of the court and others with whom Mrs. McElhiney has been associated, met at the police court at 8 o'clock to bid Mrs. McElhiney farewell, to wish her every success in her future home, and also to felicitate Captain McElhiney, who has been appointed a chaplain in one of the large military hospitals in the Toronto district. Chief Thompson acted as chairman of the gathering, which included Magistrate D. W. Dumble, Mr. Harry Rush, J.P.; Mr. G. W. Hatton, Crown Attorney; Mr. G. N. Gordon, City Solicitor; Mr. George Powell, Inspector of the Children's Aid Society, the members of the police force and Captain and Mrs. McElhiney.

"Since coming to Peterborough you have won a place in the hearts of the people," stated Chief Thompson, who spoke in behalf of his department. "We feel that you have done your duty faithfully. You have added to the dignity of the department which I have the honour to represent," said the Chief, speaking more directly to Mrs. McElhiney. "We feel that we are at a very great loss because of your departure from the city in the future. There never was a time, day or night, that you were not willing to lend a hand to those who perchance had fallen by the wayside. We could not let you go without showing in some way our appreciation of the efficient manner in which you have performed your duties."

With a few appropriate words Mr. Hatton presented the clock.

"I hope that as often as it chimes that your memory may go back to Peterborough," he said.

"Things like this are hardly in my line," said the Commandant in reply. "It would be idleness for me to state that this clock is for me. It is in recognition of my wife's services. I quite recognize that no merit of mine could bring this about. Again gentlemen I thank you for this clock, not so much for myself, but for my dear wife."

Mr. Dumble said that it would be very difficult to fill Mrs. McElhiney's place as Police Matron. It was a doubtful experiment, at least we thought, but it was a great success. Her services will be hard to supply again. We wish them all success and hope they will come back to us."

Mr. Harry Rush also spoke briefly, touching on the sterling qualities of the Commandant and his wife, adding that he always counted them among his best friends.

Mr. G. N. Gordon, City Solicitor, touched on the public-spiritedness of Mr. and Mrs. McElhiney, the regard in which they are held and the sacrifice they have made.

Mr. George Powell said that the Commandant showed him the way, as it were, when he took up his present position about two years ago.

"If I have rendered any service in this city it has been only by the strength and Grace of my Father in Heaven," Mrs. McElhiney acknowledged. "I've tried sometimes to count the names of my friends in this city, but I can't. The members of the police force have always had a warm spot in my heart. Every gentleman in this room tonight has been a source of inspiration to me," concluded Mrs. McElhiney, after which she bade her friends of the police court precincts good-bye.

Parcels, son of Mr. Chas. Parcels, of Belmont, is numbered among those who have paid the supreme sacrifice, falling on the field of battle on Aug. 8th.

Norwood Boy Killed.

On Monday the 26th inst., an official despatch from the Militia Department at Ottawa conveyed to Mr. and Mrs. Arthur Townshend of this village the sad news that their son, Pte. George Townshend, had been killed in action on August 14th. Pte. Townshend went overseas with the battalion from this county in the summer of 1916. He had only been in France a short time when he was killed.

May Pool World's Raw Materials

Allied Nations Now Forming Huge Reserve for After the War.

(By Robert J. Bender.)
(United Press Staff Correspondent.)

WASHINGTON, Sept. 6. — Construction of a great raw materials reserve by the allied nations is now under way to pave the way for a just and lasting peace.

Kaiser Wilhelm recently declared that the great crisis in the west depended upon which side mustered most quickly and adequately its reserves—but he didn't figure on raw materials.

When the war is over, the side with the reserves—gold, food, coal, iron, steel, cotton, wool and clothing—will be the power to determine the peace and happiness of the world, officials here declare.

Plan International Board.

The United States government is now taking steps to acquire that reserve. Raw materials may be pooled after the war, as now, to insure against another outbreak of Hohenzollernism, if the great war fails to drive that blood monarch from the throne.

An international priorities board will determine what nations shall receive first benefits of these raw materials. It will take care that the weak and helpless country first is allowed to revive its strength, that it may not be suddenly overwhelmed while convalescent, by a nation whose military strength has survived the war and whose greed for expansion has not been tempered.

The foundation for this board could be the international organization already developing to direct distribution of pooled allied war supplies for fighting forces. The outcome of the war will determine whether Germany is a party to the board.

Finance Board Too.

There is a movement afoot to establish an international reserve board to maintain financial stability through the period of reaction that inevitably will follow the war. This organization would operate to maintain a balance of gold among nations after the war, even as the federal reserve board now maintains a balance of credit and currency in the United States.

Through these two great international instrumentalities as much as through an armed league of nations, trade treaties could be maintained openly, secret pacts could not well survive, and no nation could hoard war supplies and build up a predominating militarism without full knowledge and restraint of its sister nations. Many authorities believe peace would be rendered absolutely lasting through maintenance of this machinery.

Pte. A. Wallington Has Been Gassed

NIGHT FOREMAN TELLS OF TROUBLES

Suffered Constantly Five Years — "Tanlac Fixed Me Up All Right," He Says.

"One day I was feeling so bad that I was telling my troubles to an old friend out at the 'junction' and he praised Tanlac so highly to me that I was soon in the notion to try it and I am sure glad I did, for it has certainly fixed me up all right," said G. L. Platzer, of 377 Pacific Avenue, Toronto, the other day. Mr. Platzer is night foreman in the plant of Fairbanks, Morse & Company, and is one of the foremost machinists in Toronto.

"I suffered constantly from stomach trouble for the past five years," he continued, "and although I have taken all kinds of medicines I never found anything to do me any good till I tried Tanlac. My appetite was always poor and I had reached the point where nothing appealed to me and I had to force down what little I did eat. Then my food would sour on my stomach and gas would bloat me up till I could hardly breathe. I would belch up sour water and many a time would get so sick at the stomach that I could hardly keep from vomiting up what I had eaten. I was bilious all the time for I had a mean taste in my mouth, my tongue was badly coated, my side hurt like a knife was sticking in me and my head would ache and throb so much I could hardly work while it lasted.

"Before I had finished my first bottle of Tanlac I felt so much better that I kept it up and now have a fine appetite. I relish everything I eat and eat everything I want and am never troubled with sour stomach or gas like I was before. Those headaches are gone, my tongue has cleared off and I have been relieved of that biliousness. In fact since taking Tanlac I never have indigestion in any form and am feeling better in every way than I have in five years."

Tanlac is sold in Peterborough by W. B. Warne Drug Co., Ltd. In Havelock by A. C. Denike. In Lakefield by Tanner Drug Co., Ltd. In Fowler's Corners by W. A. Hunter. In Gelert by A. J. Scott. In Westwood by G. Pringle & Son.

Prisoner Says Peter Robinson Chap. I.O.D.E. Preserved His Life

The following letter was received from Corp. A. Dickson, who was taken prisoner in the first part of the war. He was subsequently released and is at present interned in Holland. Corp. Dickson was one of the five prisoners supported by the local branch of the Peter Robinson Chapter, I. O. D. E. This small chapter at present supports five prisoners of war, which cost them $90 a month.

I know I cannot express in writing the deep sense of gratitude which I feel towards yourself and the members of the Junior Chapter, I.O.D.E. for the thoughtfutl provision you made for me while a prisoner in Germany, but I must offer my sincere thanks for your kindness. Without exaggeration I am certain that if it had not been for the food received from our friends at home very few of the prisoners in Germany could have lived three years.

I am glad indeed to know that further negotiations are now in progress for the exchange of prisoners, and all of us who are so fortunate as to be in Holland are unanimous in the hope that something will transpire to relieve those of our comrades still in Germany, particularly those who have been there since 1914-15.

We are billeted in private houses here, which have been altered to accommodate us, all the colonial troops being in this group. The Canadian officers in patricular have been exceedingly good to their N.C.O.'s and men here, and are always anxious to assist us in any way.

We have our own sports club, and on Dominion Day a whole day's sport is already arranged for in the biggest grounds here.

Classes have been started for all the interned, including such subjects as electrical engineering, motor mechanics, short hand, book-keeping, army certificates, etc., so that a person need not be idle.

We have had grand reports from home about the Canadians at the front and understand that they took the highest number of points for "all round" fighting competition. It makes one feel proud to be a member of such a body, and we all join in wishing them success and a safe return overseas.

In concluding, permit me to emphasize the gratitude I feel for your kindness to me. Best wishes for the future to yourself and other members of the Junior Chapter, I.O.D.E.

Yours very sincerely,
A. DICKSON.

Annual Field Day of Sports at Indian River Drew Big Crowd---Is Reviving Athletics

Indian River, Sept. 5. (Special). — Again a splendid time was enjoyed by those who attended the Athletic Field Day at Indian River on Labor Day. While the crowd was not quite so large as last year many were present from far and near, Peterboro, Cold Springs, Keene, Westwood, Hastings, Norwood, Havelock, South Dummer and Warsaw all being represented.

Mr. Harold Copp of the Y. M. C. A. at Peterboro, took charge of the sporting events, and handled them most satisfactorily. The Norwood band was present and all enjoyed the various selections which they liberally interspersed among the events of the afternoon.

Two refreshment booths were kept busy and supper was served in a tent on the grounds.

A Peterboro Battery.

The baseball game between the Bethel and the Indian River teams, for a silver cup, was exciting and close, the score being 3-5 in favour of Indian River, who now retain the cup. Mr. Chas. Armstrong twirled for Bethel, Harry Reid being behind the bat, while Neary and Legrow pitched and caught for Indian River. The fielding of Roger McKinney for Bethel is worthy of special mention. Mr. Copp was referee.

A ladies' harnessing, hitching and driving contest created a great deal of interest, there being four enries, all of whom knew their work and did it quickly and well, the men present feeling that they had nothing on the fair sex at horsemanship of this class. Miss Allan of Douro got the red ribbon; Miss Elsie Knox of South Dummer, secured second place, and Miss Lizzie Wood, of Bethel, third. Miss Miller of Keene, the fourth contestant, deserves mention for her splendid driving. Mr. A. Finlay, of Norwood, was the judge.

A tug of war between teams from Westwood and Norwood, was won by the former.

A pillow fight kept the crowd laughing for a good half hour, many going up to the lists like heroes of old and being put hors de combat in a short time.

Bert Dodd won the Cup.

A silver cup for the best athlete was won by Mr. Bert Dodd fo Hastings, who took first in the 100 yards, 200 yards, and ¼ mile flat races, and also was able to hold his own in the different jumping events.

Evening Entertainment.

In the evening a large tent on the grounds provided what is pronounced to be one of the best entertainments ever held in Indian River, and was enjoyed by a full house. Master Hughson Johnson of Peterboro, who, though apparently but a mere child, fairly captivated his audience by his dramatic readings; while Miss Doris Rathbone's splendid contralto voice was much enjoyed. Miss Sanderson was her accompanist. Then, too, the management are indebted to Mr. Herbert Treneer of St. Andrew's church, Peterboro, for a vocal and instrumental solo, while the duets of Messrs. Batten and Payne of North Dummer, with a solo from each, made up a programme, every number of which was listened to with perfect attention.

During an interval in the programme the silver cups and prizes were presented by the Misses Rathbone and Sanderson.

Reviving Athletics.

This is the fourth year for this event to take place, and it has done much to revive athletic sports in East Peterboro, which prior to this had nearly died out.

Messrs. Grafton and Co. of Peterboro have kindly loaned a tent on each occasion, while the Y. M. C. A. supplied a vaulting pole and shot. The total proceeds were in the neighbourhood of $275.

Wild Rumours In Germany

Germany Army Goes Over to Anglo-French Forces and Heligoland is Destroyed.

AMSTERDAM, Sept. 5.—Rumours that Field Marshal Von Hindenburg has committed suicide, that the whole German army has gone over to the Anglo-French forces and that the British fleet has attacked and destroyed Heligoland have become so widespread in the Essen district that the Commandant of that town has issued a proclamation advising the people not to believe "extravagant rumours."

Hertling is Anxious.

Count Von Hertling, the Imperial German Chancellor, expressed anxiety over the outlook for the future in an address to a delegation of representatives of the Catholic Students' Union. According to a Berlin despatch the Chancellor spoke of the sacrifices and the demands of war, and declared significantly that in addition to the sacrifices of blood from which hardly any family had been entirely spared, "there are difficulties of food and clothing and manifold deprivations at the present time, and I am anxious concerning the outlook for the future."

War, the Chancellor declared, was and is the greatest possible experience for the nation. It manifests itself, he said, among Germany's enemies in the form of hatred "bordering an insanity," while among the Germans it displays its effects principally internally in strengthening the inclination to criticism against the Government and its measures. This criticism intensified party antagonisms, the Chancellor added, and he warned the students that "therein, gentlemen, there is undoubtedly danger."

Hindenburg Less Sure.

Field Marshal Von Hindenburg, in a birthday telegram to Chancellor Von Hertling, says:

"Germany is fighting a bitter battle. In ever renewed attacks our enemies are attempting to enforce a decisive break-through, in which they have up to the present failed. They will continue their useless attempts.

"A severe battle has still to be fought. The German people know what is at stake. They know that on the battlefields of France and Flanders, the German army is defending the sacred ground of the Fatherland. Recent announcements by enemy statesmen show purely and simply the will to annihilation and demonstrate to all of us the fate which Germany has to expect if she is not victorious in this battle.

"I have great confidence that the Fatherland stands united behind the fighting troops, in order to break the insolence of our enemies."

Count the day completely lost if you have not laughed.

Patience is the most essential ingredient of genius.

New Jerusalem Is Taking Shape

(By Henry Wood.)
(United Press Staff Correspondent.)

ROME, Aug. 11. (By Mail.)—Military officials just returned from Jerusalem declare remarkable progress is being made by military authorities installing law courts, governmental and municipal organizations, and even commercial and industrial bodies that will form the basis of the new national government that the allies have promised will be established in Palestine with Jerusalem, very likely, as the capital.

Steps now being taken are for the general purpose of replacing the military government with a civil one.

A complete system of civil courts and tribunals has been established. There will be a court of appeal at Jerusalem and also a court of assizes for the entire district.

For the time being there will be only two courts of 1st instance, one at Jerusalem and one at Jaffa, while special tribunals will be temporarily installed in districts like that of Gaza where courts of 1st instance have not yet been established.

The personnel of the new civil administration probably will include a certain number of English officials who are acquainted with the Jewish and Arabic languages as well as with legal customs and traditions of both people. The personnel of the tribunals will be selected entirely from native populations.

Justice will be administered in all cases in conformity with local laws and customs, except in military crimes.

In addition to steps thus taken for instituting a civil legal administration, considerable progress has been made towards developing commercial and industrial recourses of the future state of Palestine. Commercial information bureaus have been opened at Jerusalem and Jaffa, and arrangements are under way for giving trade exhibitions at which the products of the country, together with cataloges and transportation tariffs will be open to inspection of visitors.

He—That's a remarkably bright girl I was just talking to.

She—But isn't it rather hard to keep up with her?

He—That's just it. I can't tell you what a relief it was to meet you.—Exchange.

World Happenings

Canadian Press:

PARIS, Sept. 6. — Four great French armies in the field against the Germans are to-day practically in touch with their objectives. General DeBeny's army has encircled Ham. General Mangin is within ten miles of Laon, General Berthelet has reached the Aisne on a wide front, and General Humbert has driven the Germans from gun shot of Noyon.

More Progress.

LONDON, Sept. 6.—Progress by the British, French and American troops is reported in the latest despatch this afternoon. Several more towns have been taken with prisoners and guns, and large territory taken.

Gun Fire Dwindling.

WITH THE BRITISH ARMY IN FRANCE, Sept. 6.—Along the whole front, from its southern extremity to the Bapaume-Cambrai road, the fire of the enemy's big guns is dwindling. This indicates that the Germans are making strenuous efforts to get their artillery behind the Hindenburg lines; in many places north of the Sensee River the Germans are firing thousands of shells indiscriminately.

Berlin's Claims.

BERNE, via London, Sept. 6. — (Official). — Strong enemy attacks from the Neuve-Maincourt-Moislain line, north-east of Peronne, were repulsed. Yesterday, from Peronne and over the Somme, the enemy only hesitatingly followed the German rear guards. On the heights north-east of Fismes, the German War Office says strong attacks were repulsed.

Thanksgiving Day, October 14th.

OTTAWA, Sept. 6.—It is announced to-day that the Government has fixed Monday, October 14th, as Thanksgiving Day.

Conferring With Lansing.

WASHINGTON, Sept. 6. — Sir Joseph Pope, Sir Clifford Siton, and Hon. Arthur Meighen conferred with Secretary of State Lansing to-day regarding the power in the St. Lawrence River. It is believed a compromise was effected.

Pte. Harrison.

A telegram received from Ottawa states that Pte. Harold Harrison, No. 3055803, Canadian Infantry, was admitted to the 56th General Hospital, Etaples, on August 27th, wounded by a gas shell. The message was addressed to Mrs. Jos. Harrison, 559 Reid Street.

COLLEGIATE TO HELP THE SAILORS' FUND

Rev. A. W. MacKenzie, of the Grove School, Lakefield, addressed the pupils of the Collegiate Institute this afternoon in the interests of the Navy League, in the Assembly Hall. His Honour Judge Huycke also gave a short address. Miss Isabel Baird presided at the piano. Mr. MacKenzie's address, which was of a most interesting and inspiring nature, will no doubt serve as a means of enrolling a large pupil membership to the Navy League.

Merchants to Close Daily at 5.30 P.M. Except Saturdays

The Retail Merchants at a meeting held at the Empress Hotel yesterday afternoon, decided to close their stores at 5.30 p.m. except on Saturdays. The public is requested to remember this change. It will remain in effect until next July, and will not only be welcomed by the employees, but should also permit the saving of considerable fuel during the cold months. The various sections of the Retail Merchants will arrange at their discretion the hours of opening in the morning.

Ladies Must Not Hesitate to Make Entries

The Building Will be in Fine Shape for Fancy Work Exhibits

Heretofore the exhibits of fancy work at the Peterborough Industrial Exhibition have been curtailed to some extent, and those who did not send in their work were very much worried as to whether it would be damaged or not by the leaky roof. This year no such condition exists. The building is in first class shape and the Directors in charge of this section of the Fair give a hearty invitation to all women who have good specimens of fancy work to make exhibits.

57TH BAND OFFERS A CHANCE TO BEGINNERS

Boys and men of the city who are interested in music have a splendid opportunity to develop any musical inclination by attending the beginners' class in connection with the 57th Regimental Band, which will be organized next week. Those wishing to learn clarinet, cornet, or other band instrument should apply at the Armouries on Monday evening at 8 o'clock.

Mark Street Social Defied the Weather Wiped Off Debt

The social at Mark street church last night was a marked success in spite of the weather. Refreshments were served and a good programme was rendered in the church building. The object of the social was to collect a sum large enough to wipe off a debt on the new church lot. A large box was erected in the grounds and "fate" in large letters was printed on the box. Three hundred and fifty dollars was the amount asked. The people responded readily and $366 was obtained. Dr. E. E. Harvey was chairman of the evening and Rev. F. E. Malott, B.A., B.D., gave a splendid address on "Lessons From the War."

Starving to Death In Prison Camps

Merchant Sailor Discovered in Terrible Plight.

For more than a year there were 4,000 sailors of the Merchant Marine prisoners-of-war in Germany and no one knew that they were there. They were peaceful sailors following a peaceful occupation. They were taken prisoners and the knowledge of their capture kept from the Allied nations. Upon them has been heaped every indignity. As members of an unofficial service there has been no Government aid; they have not received the usual prisoners' pocket money to help eke out a miserable existence.

When their plight was discovered, they were starving to death. To-day the Navy League is sending them food and paying them the same grant given to sailors of the Navy. But for this they would have succumbed to the ill-treatment and privation. There are many Canadian sailors among them.

Their lot is almost as pitiable as that of the dependents and the families of those Merchant sailors who have died during the war. Will you help these dependents to get enough to eat and to clothe themselves? "Sailors' Week" is a Dominion-wide campaign to help Canadian seamen and their dependents, and is held from the 1st to the 7th of September. Remember the date and give generously. Ontario is asked to contribute $1,000,000. Ontario has never failed.

TO-DAY IN THE GREAT WAR.

Sept. 6, 1917: German fleet appears in gulf of Riga.

Sept. 6, 1916: Germans make heavy attacks on Somme front.

Sept. 6, 1915: Forty French airplanes bombed Saarbrucken.

Sept. 6, 1914: Sir John French, in report on first operations of the British in the war, admits loss of 15,000 men.

Von Hertling Said to Have Quit the Job

Special to The Examiner:

GENEVA, Switzerland, Sept. 6. — German Imperial Chancellor Hertling has handed his resignation to the Kaiser on a plea of ill health, according to reports from Munich via Zurich to-day. It is not known whether the resignation was accepted.

Lieut. C. W. McDermid Has Been Wounded

Mr. J. W. McDermid has received a cablegram informing him that his brother, Lieut. C. W. McDermid was wounded in the recent advances in France. Lieut. McDermid enlisted with the 227th battalion of Hamilton, but was transferred overseas to the 102nd. His home is in Collingwood. In a private message Lieut. McDermid cabled that he sustained a gunshot wound through the right thigh.

Preserve Without Sugar for Present Grocer Advises

At present the only outlook for preserves for the winter lies in preserving fruit without sugar and sweetening it after the New Year, when the situation eases up, Mr. Chas. Rishor said this morning. Just now there is practically no sugar in the city, and the only hope of relief lies in the beet-sugar crop which will be harvested in October. Mr. Rishor strongly advises sugarless canning. Sugar, he said, is not a preservative, and fruit may be very satisfactorily canned if cleanliness and proper sterilizing is observed.

Embargo Modified.

The embargo placed by the United States and Canada upon dried fruits has been modified slightly lately by the fact that a wholesale merchant may get a permit from the Government to secure it. The process, however, is long and uncertain.

VOICES SYMPATHY FOR MR. LEMIEUX.

LONDON, Sept. 5.—The Daily Express sympathizes with Hon. Rodolphe Lemieux in the loss of his son, saying that he was a gallant officer and had been recommended for the Military Cross.

U. S. MAN-POWER BILL TO CALL UP 13,000,000

"We Purpose a Decisive Victory of Arms," Declares President Wilson.

AFFECTS MEN 18 TO 45

Washington, Sept. 4. — The Man-Power Bill was officially signed by President Wilson on Saturday afternoon, and Thursday, September 12th was the date set by the president as the date for registration for the army draft of all men in the United States between the ages of 18 and 45, inclusive, who have not already registered, or who are not now of military or naval service.

In a proclamation issued immediately after he had signed the new Man-Power Bill authorizing extension of the 21-31 draft ages, the President called on the younger and older men to enrol on that day with local draft boards where they make their permaintain homes.

"We solemnly purpose a decisive victory of arms," said the President, "and deliberately to devote the larger part of the military man power of the nation to the accomplishment of that purpose. It is the call to duty, which every true man in the country will respond with pride, and with the consciousness in doing so he plays his part in vindication of a great cause at whose summons every true heart offers in supreme sacrifice."

All men within the new ages whether citizens of the United States or not, must register, unless they are diplomatic or consular representatives of foreign nations.

At least thirteen million men will place themselves subject to call for war service under the new registration, it is estimated, although only those without dependents in good health and otherwise qualified for the arduous duties of soldier life, are to be taken first.

"Stan" Kerneghan Fully Recovered

Mr. and Mrs. Kerneghan, 497 Aylmer street, has received the following letter from their son, Lance-Corporal S. C. Kerneghan, of the Mechanical Transport:

July 26th, 1918.

Dear Dad,—Your ever welcome letter all O.K., and say I sure was awfully pleased to have a letter from you, and when I get one I feel lonesome and long to be back there with you all again. I am glad to say that I am all O.K. again, but got a bad shaking up when I was hurt, it was a close shave, but I was lucky.

Dad, I have had many narrow escapes, and I know that back home you and dear mother have and do offer up prayers to God for my safety and I know they are answered.

We have been having some very lovely weather, but it has started to rain.

My lorry is in the shop and I am having a general overhaul and painted. I am glad as it was getting hard to keep going. I painted my engine to-night, and will be very busy for a while.

Well, dear mother, things look a whole lot more encouraging, and the boys are giving Fritz an awful run for his money at present, and he sure has some bunch of hard pokes coming to him, and the Yanks are there forty ways. The boys of the 2nd Canadian Division are the pride of the Canadians, and they have done wonderful work, and they are the Royal Canadians. Well Mater, I must close for now. Lots of love. STAN.

Ida Gardner's Recital

Assisted by Harold Lyman, Flutist, Will Entertain a Selected Audience.

Ida Gardner, the popular contralto, assisted by Harold Lyman, flutist, will be heard in an unique recital at the Conservatory of Music Hall, on the evening of September 9th.

Miss Gardner is one of the most accomplished contraltos at present on the concert stage. She has sung all over the United States and parts of Canada, and wherever she appears she has been signed for return engagements. She has a wonderful voice that ranges into a mezzo-soprano. It is of a delightful quality, and Miss Gardner uses it with rare skill.

This satisfying artist has just completed her European studies, and had been offered a most flattering contract by the Imperial Opera of Vienna; for the important roles of Amneris, Acuzena, Dalila, Carmen, Orphee, etc. The conditions prompted Miss Gardner's return to America, where she has continued her triumphant career.

Harold Lyman is an artist of considerable reputation, who has toured in this country for several seasons, making friends and admirers wherever he has been heard because of his serious attitude toward his art, as well as his unusual talent.

Admittance to the recital will be by card only.

Scrap Book Finds Its Way Back From France to The "Ex"

Lakefield, Sept. 6 (Special.) — Miss Hilliard of Lakefield, has in her possession a rather unique souvenir of the war. In 1915, when an appeal was made in "Saturday Night" to clubs and societies to make scrap books with home news, etc., for our fighting men, the A.Y.P.A., of Lakefield, undertook the work under the direction of Miss Hilliard. These books were sent regularly to the Lakefield men in the 21st Battalion in France, and were much appreci[illegible] In 1916 Miss Hilliard received a letter from a gentleman in England telling her that he had received a scrap book with her name in it from France. A cousin of his who was with a Canadian battalion, picked it up in a lonely dug-out, near St. Eloi, and sent it to England as a souvenir. Mr. J. S Cox of Cumberland, received it and finding Miss Hilliard's name and address in it he wrote to her and offered to return it to her if she wished. She was very pleased to receive it when it arrived, and it was exhibited in the Lakefield News office. This is rather ancient history, but it has a sequel which brings it right up to the minute. A few weeks ago Miss Hilliard received a letter from Mrs. Strathy of Toronto, asking if she had a sample copy of a "News from Home," so Miss Hilliard sent this copy and it is now on exhibition at Canada's great fair—the Toronto Exhibition.

Met at Viamede.

The Woman's Institute of Mount Julian met on Wednesday afternoon in the parlor at "Viamede." It is an old established custom to hold the September meeting at "Viamede," by kind invitation of Mrs. Graham. Fifteen ladies were present and a most interesting meeting was held, with Mrs. Lauder in the chair. Mrs. Oliver Church contributed an excellent reading to the programme. Mrs. Albert Reid invited the ladies to meet at her home for the October meeting. A pleasant social hour followed during which afternoon tea was served. A vote of thanks to Mrs. Graham, and the singing of the national anthem brought the afternoon to a close.

This little band of busy women are doing a splendid work and deserve a great deal of credit: Each year a most creditable amount of war work is accomplished and though the members of the institute are widely scattered they have held together for mutual benefit for a good many years.

Many Divisions Have Been Used

Special to the Examiner:

LONDON, Sept. 6.—Since August 8 the Germans have employed in the Western front fighting 103 divisions (1,236,000 men), it was estimated to-day. Of these, 29 were placed on the battle line, withdrawn, and sent into action again. In addition, five Austrian divisions were used. One of them was broken up.

THE WORLD OF SPORT

RUTH SHUTS CUBS OUT IN THE FIRST GAME OF THE SERIES

CHICAGO, Sept. 5.—One of the smallest crowds which ever turned out for a world's series opening saw the Boston Red Sox, of the American League, to-day defeat the Cubs of the National League, 1 to 0, in an errorless game.

The battle was a pitching duel between Jim Vaughn and "Babe" Ruth. These two Giants fought it out all the way, and although Ruth allowed six hits to his opponent's five, the "break" went to the invaders and they were consequently making confident claims to the world's championship to-night.

The effect of the war was everywhere apparent, especially in the temper of the crowd, which, largely local, saw the home team drop the first game without a protect. There was no cheering during the contest, nor was there anything like the usual umpire baiting.

To-day's attendance was 19,274. To-day the downpour of yesterday had ceased and the grounds were comparatively dry. The sun showed fitfully and there was a stiff, chill breeze from the north. No seats were occupied in the upper tier of the second floor of the grand stand, and the right section of the stand was practically empty. In the left section there were many vacant chairs. A number of boxes also were without occupants, and in the bleachers the three lower rows around the field were vacant.

The one-handed spear by Scott of Vaughn's hot grounder in the seventh inning provided the one spectacular feature of the contest. It was a beautiful play but at the time the Cubs were not threatening. The whole nine innings failed to produce a hit for extra bases, nor any real test of speed for the outfielders.

Whiteman the Star.

George Whiteman, Boston utility outfielder, starred in the outfield for Boston, and doubtless prevented the Cubs from scoring. He was also the only man of the invaders to make two hits, one of which figured in Boston's lone but victorious tally.

Vaughn's momentary weakness in the fourth inning cost him the game. Shean, the first man up for Boston, walked when the giant Cub twirler attempted to work the corners on Umpire O'Day. Strunk, who followed, flied to Vaughn on an attempted sacrifice and Whiteman delivered his second blow, sending Shean to second. Paskert's quick return prevented the Red Sox second baseman from taking third. McInnis' single to left scored Shean, while Whiteman moved up to second. Scott popped to Deal and Whiteman scrambled back to the keystone sack just in time to beat the Cub third baseman's peg to second. Vaughn mixed them to Thomas, who swung heavily at three wide ones. This ended the inning for Boston and the scoring also. Boston never threatened again.

Ruth's Pitching Good.

The premier brand of Ruth's pitching was the chief factor in the Cub defeat, although the superb support rendered by his team-mates assisted in repulsing the Cub attack. Had the Nationals been able to bunch their blows on the Boston pitcher the game would have been over in first when Mann singled after two were out and took third on Paskert's Texas leaguer to left field. Merkle was passed, filling the bases. With the game depending on his next offering Ruth served up a low, fast ball to Pick, at the same time waving his outfielders back toward the bleachers, and the Cub second baseman dropped a high fly to Whiteman, closing the inning. Whiteman captured the ball after a hard run and earned laurels thereby. To have missed it would have meant two runs for the locals.

Whiteman stepped in between the Cubs and victory again in the sixth. With one out Paskert singled to centre, taking third when Merkle bounced a grounder over Ruth's head and into centrefield. Pick grounded out to McInnis, unassisted, and Stuffy's quick throw from first held the Cub second baseman at third. A moment later Whiteman again stepped into the fore and raced across the field after Deal's long fly to deep left. He captured it after a hard run, and the game ended, for the Cubs never threatened again.

After the sixth Ruth pitched air-tight ball, and despite Manager Mitchell's strategies, the Cubs never had a look in. They went out in order save in the final inning when, after one was out, Mitchell sent his reserves into the front line. Merkle had sent a long fly to Whiteman, when Mitchell sent O'Farrell into bat for Pick. The Cub reserve catcher flied out ingloriously to Thomas. Deal caused a momentary revival of interest with a single over third, and McCabe was sent into run for him. Killifer put an end to the pastime by sending a long fly to right, which Hooper captured after a hard run.

Out-of-town delegations this year were smaller than ever before.

Crack Hockeyist Killed in France

HARRY MACKENZIE OF KENORA FAME, PAYS SUPREME SACRIFICE.

Small but Mighty.

Winnipeg, Sept. 4. — Harry Mackenzie, one of Canada's greatest hockey players, has been killed in action in France, according to the official notice just received by his parents in Kenora. Harry was serving as an officer with the 16th Battalion, and was previously wounded in the fighting at Lens last season.

Winnipeg hockey fans all know the famous little hockey star, as he has played in countless games here. When the Victorias first won the Allan Cup, he visited the city with the Kenora Kids and dazzled the railbirds by his wonderful ability. Even then he was called the pocket edition of Tommy Phillips. Harry kept coming back with Kenora teams year after year, and was always able to put up a strenuous fight for the Allan Cup against the Winnipeg holders.

His next appearance was with the Melville hockey team, which he helped out in no small measure in their league series with Regina Victorias, for the Allan Cup. After the cup had been captured by Melville Harry figured in the series against the Toronto Victorias and the Winnipeg Monarchs. Then he joined the army and played here for one season with the all-star military team in the series with the Monarchs and 61st.

Harry was also a fine oarsman, and made many appearances in Kenora crews at the big international regattas.

Yankees Grab the Pincers

Willy and Art Found Physically Fit—Report Next Week.

NEWARK, N.J., Sept. 5.—The arm of military power has reached forth and clutched Arthur and William Spencer of Toronto for service in the American army. The status of the two professional cyclists seems to be a puzzle. The brothers registered here as citizens of Canada, friendly allies. Today both were notified by their local draft boards to be ready for military service next week.

In examinations the Spencers were found to be physically perfect. By request of the brothers they will be sent away in the same contingent, probably being assigned to Camp Dix, one of the cantonments in New Jersey. The departure is scheduled for next week. Thus the Spencers will make their farewell appearance at the bicycle track next Sunday. As all citizens between the ages of 18 and 45 who are not in the national service or come under the 21 to 31 classification have been ordered to register next Thursday many of the other professional racing stars will shortly be called to the colours, notably Frank L. Kramer, who is 37 years old, who is not married and has no dependents.

If it be true, as reported in a despatch from Amsterdam, that von Hintze, the German foreign secretary, has sought to buck up the morale of the German people by urging them to emulate the fortitude of the people of France, there could be no more ironical development of the war. South Africa has conquered more German territory than all the Allies combined. German South-West and German East Africa are huge areas of rich coutry only lacking development.

But South Africa's contribution to the war is not limited by her achievements on her own borders. She raised 40,000 troops for these campaigns, but she sent 60,000 to other war theatres, including Europe. She suppressed one rebellion of her own citizens and she prevented another gaining headway. She has built miles upon miles of new railways and now controls the second largest railway system under one management in the world. She has become self-supporting and food shortage is unknown. Her exports to Great Britain of maize, wool and leather have grown enormously.

Camp life they say was far from monotonous as their work took from 6 and 8 in the morning until at times 11 o'clock at night. To vary this country dances were held at intervals in the town. The girls who were directly employed by the Canada Flax company, picked 4 acres each for which they wre paid $15 an acre.

Special Appeal for Renewed Effort by Red Cross Workers

The regular monthly executive meeting of the Peterboro Red Cross Society, was held in the Public Library on Wednesday afternoon, September 4th. The continued and ever-increasing need for supplies and workers, was strongly emphasized by the president and convenors of the different committees. Owing to the work room being closed during August there has been a slight falling off in the number of cases of supplies. The packing committee reported thirty-five cases shipped during July and August.

The Prisoners of War Department reported acknowledgments from the following men: Ptes. H. S. Rogers, O. Cripps, W. H. Larkman, H. Lawrence, C. Orford, A. Parrington, F. Peace, J. Jackson, N. Gilpin, A. David, E. Nuttal, W. Tatterthwaite, P. A. McRae; Corp. H. Rogers, Ptes. W. Footil, T. Casey, E. Crofts, C. M. Drummond, F. H. Evans, H. Godfrey, G. Hutchinson, H. Martin, E. Stanley, G. Butcher.

Special Appeal.

The following special appeal is made with the hope that all workers will respond loyally:

"Be not weary in well doing."

An hour with the socks, pyjamas and sheets.

Whilst our men in France are taking brilliant part in drive after drive against our enemies, let our Red Cross workers feel that they are privileged to be able to "cheer on," and so help in their splendid work in the work room.

What can we do to help win the war? Work for the Red Cross, save wheat, can and preserve food, conserve fuel, care for our health, so as to release doctors and nurses for our men at the front who need them more than we do.

Work is now being organized after our long vacation. Let us return to our work like giants refreshed, and as the need is greater, as the battles grow fiercer, let us renew our efforts (not only those of us who have worked) but those who for various reasons have held back latterly.

Women of Peterboro! Come forward and let us show our brave men we are not slackening, but "speeding up,"—even as they do—for what we believe is the biggest, and, let us hope, the latest effort to win a victory over our enemies, and a lasting peace for a war worn world.

Let each woman who has worked, bring with her a woman who will work, and make a good start at the Red Cross work room at the Public Library on Wednesday, September 11, from 2 to 5 o'clock.

CIVIL SERVICE JOBS

N. Y. Firm Busy at Ottawa Assisting in Classification

OTTAWA, Sept. 5.—The classification of nearly sixty thousand civil servants, under the act of last session, is being made by the Civil Service Commission, with the assistance of Arthur Young and Company of New York, specialists in public service and municipal organization. The different departments of the Government service are being examined, and the work of each man inquired into with a view of systematic classification.

The report of the experts is expected by the end of the year, and will be the subject of whatever legislation is necessary. Removal of the service from political patronage and placing the whole management under the commission has developed difficulties which will necessitate amendments at the next session of Parliament.

FREQUENT HEADACHES

People with thin blood are much more subject to headaches than full-blooded persons, and the form of anaemia that afflicts growing girls is almost always accompanied by headaches, together with disturbances of the digestive organs.

Whenever you have constant or recurring headaches and pallor of the face, they show that the blood is thin and your efforts should be directed toward building up your blood. A fair treatment with Dr. Williams' Pink Pills will do this effectively, and the rich, red blood made by these pills will remove the headache.

More disturbances to the health are caused by their blood than most people have any idea of. When your blood is impoverished, the nerves suffer from lack of nourishment and you may be troubled with insomnia, neuritis, neuralgia or sciatica. Muscles subject to strain are under-nourished and you may have muscular rheumatism or lumbago. If your blood is thin and you begin to show symptoms of any of these disorders, try building up the blood with Dr. Williams' Pink Pills and as the blood is restored to its normal condition every symptom of the trouble will disappear. There are more people who owe their present state of good health to Dr. Williams' Pink Pills than to any other medicine, and most of them do not hesitate to say so.

You can get Dr. Williams' Pink Pills through any dealer in medicine or by mail at 50 cents a box or six boxes for $2.50, from the Dr. Williams Medicine Co., Brockville, Ont.

Gen. Mangin Made Important Gains in Front of St. Goban Wood

Hinge of Enemy's Entire Defence System North of Soisson Now in Allied Grasp—Six Foe Divisions Are Recoiling—Ham is Virtually Taken.

ENEMY'S BAD ERROR

PARIS, Sept. 6.—The course of the fighting on the Western front continues to show day after day that Marshal Foch is practising his precept, "the whole art of war consists in attacking," with telling effect on the enemy.

As Henry Bidou points out in the Journal des Debats, the battle of the Marne is being reproduced with the positions reversed. Six German armies are recoiling, closely pressed by seven or eight Allied armies, as was the case with the Allied forces four years ago. The Allied armies form the arc of a circle enclosing the Germans and, just as in the Marne battle, the fight rages, now on the centre, and now on one or the other wing. Each move is made with such skill and decisiveness that its effect is felt in every part of the line.

At present General Mangin is having his innings, while the British have been resting on their laurels for a brief period and preparing for a further blow.

Brilliant Score.

The commander of the French right wing made a brilliant score yesterday, placing the entire hinge of the enemy's defence system north of Soissons in Allied grasp. The recapture of Folenbray, Coucy-le-Chateau and Coucy-le-Ville, all of which had been cleaned out and destroyed by the retreating enemy—brings the Allied troops to the foot of the St. Gobain Heights, on the retention of which the present German line in the west absolutely depends. The Allied forces have also reached the River Aisne from Conde to Vieil-Arcy, and occupy dominating positions north of Vesle, while General Humbert's army is pursuing its victorious way towards Ham and Chauny.

The town of Ham, indeed, may be considered as virtually taken, while the German citadel of Laon is again under the fire of French guns.

Enemy's One Error.

It is now plain that the direction of the enemy retreat is towards the line of Cambrai-St. Quentin. He is carrying it out with no mean skill, and only one mistake can be detected in his plan. That error lay in the persistency with which he clung to the Vesle. Probably Ludendorff wished to keep possession of the St. Thierry Hills, north-west of Rheims, and thus keep a continuous threat hanging over the city. The result of his delay, however, was to put him in a serious predicament to save the Seventh German Army, in the command of which Gen. Von Boehn had been replaced by Gen. Eberhardt. He was obliged, as soon as Gen. Mangin began to threaten him between the Aisne and the Ailette, to sacrifice division after division north of the Aisne, and Eberhardt's army is by no means extricated.

ESTIMATES SHOW E-REVENUE BILL WILL RAISE 8 BILLIONS

Possible Loss of Nearly a Billion Through Prohibiton Not Taken Into Account.

WASHINGTON, D. C.—Estimates of the amount which will be raised by some of the more important taxes in the new revenue bill have been made, and if they prove to be accurate the problem before the Ways and Means Committee of raising $8,000,000,000 through taxation has been solved. The estimates do not take into account the possible failure to realize revenue from beverages through enactment of the bone dry prohibition rider to the food production stimulation bill.

The estimates of the amounts which the tentative tax rates agreed upon will raise include the following:

Excess profits and war profits, $3,000,000,000.
Corporation incomes, $1,000,000,000.
Individual incomes, $1,800,000,000.
Excise taxes on luxuries, $517,000,000.
Taxes on transportation, $165,000,000.
Estate tax, $100,000,000.
Taxes on admissions, $100,000,000.
Tobacco consumption taxes, $330,000,000.
Taxes on beverages, $1,100,000,000.
Tax on automobiles and motor cycles, $70,000,000.
Capital stock tax, $70,000,000.
Business license tax, $10,000,000.
Stamp taxes, $32,000,000.

Definition of Capital.

The Ways and Means Committee has agreed upon a definition of capital which probably will not be materially amended. In effect, this definition provides that for the purpose of computing corporation income taxes and war and excess profits taxes, capital shall include substantially the following:

The actual cash paid in for shares of stock.

Cash value of angible property, not including cash paid in for stock at the time of such payment, but this value is not to exceed the par value of the original shares of stock issued therefor, unless the value of such tangible property at the time paid in is shown to the satisfaction of the Commissioner of Internal Revenue to have been clearly and substantially in excess of such par value, in which case such excess shall be treated as paid in surplus, but this surplus in any case shall not exceed twenty-five per cent.

Paid-in or earned surplus and undivided profits, not including, however, surplus and undivided profits earned during the taxable year and not including the increase in the value of any asset above the orignal cost until by sale such increase is actually realized.

Intangible property bona fide paid in for stock or shares before March 3, 1917, in an amount not exceeding (a) the actual cash value of such property at the time paid-in, (b) the par value of the stock or shares issued therefor, or (c) in the aggregate 20 per cent. of the par value of the total stock or shares of the corporation outstanding on March 3, 1917. Whichever of (a), (b), or (c) is lowest shall be applied.

Invested capital shall not be construed to include capital invested in "inadmissable assets" or borrowed capital.

Taxes on Beverages.

The taxes on beverages which have been written into the bill provide for a tax of $8 a gallon on whiskey withdrawn from bond for beverage purposes, and a tax of $4.40 a gallon on whiskey in bond. A tax of $3.30 a gallon on perfume imported into the country is provided. If the tax for withdrawing whiskey has already been paid, a floor tax of $2.20 a gallon is imposed, and this tax is made $4.80 a gallon if it is intended for beverage purposes. An additional tax of $30 is put on rectified spirits.

On wine the tax is graduated by the amount of alcoholic content. For each wine gallon the tax is: Less than 14 per cent. alcohol, 16 cents; 14 per cent. to 21 per cent., 40 cents; 21 per cent. to 24 per cent., $1. Over 24 per cent. distilled liquor rates apply.

Austrian Sailor Tells of Loss of the Cruiser Santo Stefano

Sunk by Italian Motor Boat Under the Command of Commander Rizzo—Audacious Attack Was a Complete Success.

(By Henry Wood.)
(United Press Staff Correspondent.)

ROME, Aug. 16. (By Mail.)—Hungarian papers have just reached Italy by way of Switzerland containing an interview with one of the survivors of the Austrian cruiser Santo Stefano, sunk by an Italian motorboat under the command of Commander Rizzo.

The interview contains graphic details of this new form of naval combat which has been developed exclusively by the Italians since the beginning of the war. The sea-going motorboats with which the Italian navy is now harassing the Austrian fleet are similar to the thousands of motorboats to be found at every sea and lake resort in America. In only one respect do they differ, and that is in the two torpedo tubes at the sides, from which deadly torpedoes glide out into the water.

Combats between these little boats and the huge Austrian warships resemble to a certain degree a submarine and warship encounter, except that the motorboat commanders, unable to save themselves by submerging, take a thousand times more chances, meeting the foe in open combat and counting on the smallness of their craft and their speed and cleverness of manoeuvring.

Sailor Tells Story.

This is the way the novel combat in which the Santo Stefano went down before the audacity of Commander Rizzo and his motorboat looked to the Hungarian sailor aboard the doomed Austrian cruiser:

"At 4 o'clock in the afternoon we received orders to prepare for sailing. We left Pola (the Austrian naval base) at 10 in the evening. Toward 3:30 in the morning we discovered that an Italian motorboat was only a short distance from us, and a moment afterwards there were two terrific detonations.

"The first torpedo penetrated into our munitions magazine, but did not explode. The second passed through the hole made by the first and penetrated into the engine room.

"Immediately all electric lights went out. Wireless apparatus ceased to work, and even the pumps were put out of commission, so that we were obliged to work the pumps by hand to keep the water down. In order to lighten the ship we threw overboard all our heavy munitions.

No Hope Is Seen.

"After two hours of terrific work we were forced to recognize that there was no hope. Toward 6 in the morning the bridge gave way and the captain, who had been standing on it, was plunged into the sea, but succeeded in regaining the ship by swimming.

"Our signals no longer worked, and finally the captain fired three revolver shots as a signal for the entire crew to stand by and line up on deck. Some fifty sailors who were working in the bottom of the ship failed to hear the signal and remained below. With them was Lieut. Bovis.

"After the usual ceremony the chaplain gave us final absolution, just at the moment that the battleship began to go down. We threw ourselves into the sea, and after three-quarters of an hour were picked up by torpedo boats that were escorting us. There were also picked up the bodies of several of the sailors who were drowned in the bottom of the ship, and these were interred later with military honours at Pola."

ST. THOMAS APPEALS FOR MORE POWER

ST. THOMAS, Sept. 55.—Representatives of the city will meet Sir Adam Beck and the Provincial Hydro-Electric Commission in Toronto in the near future in an effort to secure more power.

A deputation was previously appointed to go to Ottawa, but a wire from Sir Henry Drayton informed the committee that he had no jurisdiction in the matter. The deputation was instructed at a meeting of the Industrial Committee of the City Council to proceed to Ottawa if results are not obtained at Toronto.

SISTERS DIE WITHIN ONE HOUR AND A HALF

One, in Ninety-Ninth Year, Never Wore Glasses, But Read Paper Daily.

CHATHAM, Sept. 5.—Mrs. George McKelvey and Miss Mary Johnston, sisters, died within an hour and a half of each other at their home in Wallaceburg. The former was eighty years of age, and the latter within a few weeks of 99. They were members of one of the oldest families in the community, and were born not far from where they died. Treir last illness was very short, and was due to age. Miss Johnston never wore spectacles, and up to the day of her death always read the daily papers to keep posted on the war. Surviving relatives are two sisters, Mrs. R. S. Gurd of Sarnia, and Mrs. Alex. Fraser of Wallaceburg. The double funeral will be held on Friday.

WHITE GOLD USED.

Replaces Platinum In Jewellery Work Now.

Platinum in the form of jewellery has been forbidden to be sold in Canada, but the jewellers are still allowed to use it in repair work on rings, etc. A splendid substitute has been found in white gold which looks identically the same except when cut when it takes a bright sheen. As platinum retails at $120 a pound, the restriction will not add materially to many peoples' worries.

FEAR FOR GERMAN EMPRESS.

Complications Have Set in and All Royal Engagements Are Cancelled.

COPENHAGEN.—The German Empress is still very ill, says the Berlin Vossische Zeitung. Although some days ago her condition began to improve, new complications have supervened and she is still confined to her bed.

There is no immediate danger of a fatal termination to the illness, the newspaper declares, but a serious relapse is feared. All engagements of the royal family have been cancelled.

CATTLE MARKET

Receipts for the week of live stock at the Union Stock Yards consisted of 516 cars, 7,587 cattle, 944 calves, 3,423 hogs, 3,473 sheep and lambs, and 1,759 horses.

Throughout the week the market has shown a slight improvement in total number of sales.

Monday the summer records for live stock receipts were broken, but it was mostly common stock and a scarcity of really choice head.

Lambs and sheep were weak after last week's slumps, but Tuesday and Wednesday showed a firmer tone in the market prices for choice lambs now standing at $17.75.

Cattle were steady with little change from last week's figures. Calves were firm during first part of week, but Thursday saw a slightly easier tone with a drop of 25 cents to 50 cents per hundredweight.

Hogs remained unchanged at the past week's figures, $19.50 per cwt., fed and watered, with no indication of a change.

"The Girl Who Had No God"

By MARY ROBERTS RINEHART
Author of "The Man in Lower Ten," "The After House," Etc.

"I shall never believe anything that you do not tell me yourself. But it is only fair to me that now at last there be frankness between us."

"There are others," Elinor said with dry lips.

"Your father?"

"He is dead. I can not talk of him. This much I can tell you. The Parish House was burned deliberately; it was planned and carefully carried out."

"And you knew it?"

"I had forbidden it."

"You had forbidden it?"

He went to her and caught by the shoulders, forcing her to look up in his face.

"You? Then all this time that you have seen what you must have seen in my eyes, you have been——"

"At the head of a band of thieves," Elinor said slowly.

Ward released her and turning took a slow survey of the room.

"Then I suppose that this is a trap?" he said.

"It is not a trap." Her voice was dead "I opposed this—this plan from the start. That is the reason one of the men—of my friends—suspected that I—"

"Go on. What did he suspect?"

"That I—but that doesn't matter. He burned the Parish House and planned all this. To-night he meant to get the money from you, and I—was desperate. I could think of no other way."

Ward's faith in her was slow to die. He took a step towards her, his hands out, then dropped them at his sides.

"Then—the night the Parish House burned, when I came down in the dawn and found you sitting there,"—he clenched his hands—"all the time you knew! And I had thought—"

He went to the table and opening the box slipped the notes and money it contained into his pocket. Then he buttoned his coat about him. Elinor watched him stonily.

"You are going back down the hill?"

"I am going home." He did not even look at her.

"If you would only go some place else," she said pitifully. "To the club, or to Mrs. Bryant's. Please believe me. Whatever I am, and I have told you the worst, I am trying to think of you to-night, not of myself."

"I am going back to my house," said the assistant rector of Saint Jude's. He got as far as the door on to the terrace, and there he turned. It was as if he dared not look at her, as if he meant to carry away with him some tender memory of this white lipped guilty woman before him.

"If I seem hard," he said unsteadily, "it is because I am suffering. You are quite safe of course. I shall not go to the police. Had he cared less he would have been more merciful."

Old Henrietta watched his figure as he went down the garden steps and into the road.

"Strange things in this house!" she mumbled, shaking her head. "Preachers coming and going at all hours and Elinor in a church this morning. Strange things, Hilary Kingston, since you went away."

She shuffled along the terrace, and into the house, her thin black shawl drawn about her shoulders. In the library Elinor lay face down on the floor. Old Henriette bent over her.

"My lamb, my pet," she soothed her. "He's a fine man, but there are many others. And when one is young and lovely——"

Since Elinor made no response, but only moaned, old Henriette rose from her knees and shuffled out of the room, but cautiously, as she passed, she took from a table drawer old Hilary's revolver and carried it under her shawl.

She was very wise, was wrinkled Henriette, and she knew the Kingston blood.

Ward came down the road rapidly. There was a faint moon. One part of his mind had ceased to work; his higher faculties were dormant with misery, with the anesthesia that comes for a time after great grief or shock. Physically he was entirely alert. His keen eyes searched each clump of shrubbery before he reached it. Not that he feared attack for himself; his cup of life was bitter to his taste that night, but he carried a trust in his pockets and that he would deliver.

Huff was waiting at the foot of the Kingston place, crouched behind a wall. If the boy had been jealous before he was maddened now. Ward had been with Elinor. Huff, coming up the hill, had heard his short goodnight to Henriette in the garden, had heard him come down the hill. There were only two explanations. Either the man was in love with her gone up that night of his own volition, or Elinor had sent for him. One was as bad as the other.

Ward did not have a chance. As he came abreast of the wall the boy fired and he pitched forward on his face. With the re-echoing of the shot among the hills, Huff's madness died away. Murder was not his game; violent and sudden death perhaps but never before a shot from behind. Had the wealth of a city been in Ward's pockets, he could not have touched it.

He thrust his revolver into his pocket and breaking a way through the shrubbery commenced a swift but noiseless ascent of the hill.

The assistant rector of Saint Jude's lay on his face in the road, with the morning offering of his congregation safe in his pockets.

CHAPTER XI.

The Chief sent for Boroday early the next morning.

"You have turned the trick all right," he said, grimly smiling.

Boroday, as immaculate as ever, settled his tie.

"Yes?"

"Sit down!" said the chief. "Now, that you know you're going, I suppose you are not in any particular hurry."

Boroday ran his hand over his silky beard.

"I should like to get to a barber."

"There is no great hurry. Now," said the Chief, when Boroday was comfortably settled and smoking one of his eternal Russian cigarettes, "I wish you would tell me why you disposed of that pearl in the way you did. It wasn't quite up to our agreement, you know. It was to be given to me and I was to return it. Instead of that I had to make a wild goose chase out into the country."

"Ah!" said Boroday, "into the country!"

The Chief, who was accustomed to reading faces, watched Boroday closely, but if ever there was a tightening about the Russian's eyes, it was very faint.

"You know blamed well," said the Chief peevishly, "just where I had to go to get that thing. And you know blamed well also that on Sunday afternoon I always play poker. It was—well, inconsiderate, to say the least."

Boroday smiled.

"I am exceedingly sorry that you were put to any trouble about it," he said. "But as you may understand, I have not yet been my—friends, and of course——"

He shrugged his shoulders. The Chief was skeptical of his ignorance, nevertheless. He humoured what he chose to consider Boroday's whim. First he gave him the note which he had received by special delivery the day before. Quick as he was, the Russian could not quite conceal his astonishment.

"In the alms box!" said the Chief. "Somebody with a sense of humour had charge of this little affair. Bryant is senior warden, it seems; in this church. It was clever."

"Boroday passed the letter back to him.

"I shall tell my confreres. It is quite original."

The Chief was smoking a large cigar. Unlike the police chief of fiction and the drama, he did not speak around the cigar, but carefully removed it, not out of respect to his visitor but out of deference to a good cigar. Now he leaned toward Boroday.

"Either," he said slowly, "it was clever, or it was necessary."

But the Russian had himself well in hand. He only smiled.

"It has occurred to me," the Chief went on, "that that little town has been pretty busy lately. There was that matter of the country club, you know, and last Thursday night the parish house burned down.

KIDNEY DISEASE OVERCOME.

Mr. James Prouse, cattle dealer, Shebo, Sask., writes: "For about ten years I suffered from kidney disease; at times was bad with backache, and derangements of the digestive organs. During that time I was treated by four different doctors. One day I read in Dr. Chase's Almanac about the Kidney-Liver Pills and began to use them. Altogether I used six boxes. All I need say is that I feel well now and attribute this condition to the use of Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills."

AUSTRIA FAST NEARING HUNGER CATASTROPE

City Dwellers Crowd and Ruin Trains in Illicit Quest for Food.

ZURICH, Sept 5. — The Vienna workmen's paper, Arbeiter Zeitung, states that the victualling of the Middle Danube Empire is in no way improved. Requisition of agricultural products by the Government is carried out in a way so perfunctory and ineffectual that most of the Agrarian owners simply do not deliver their goods. They prefer to sell their warime products to private buyers at prices hitherto unheard of.

One result is that a new and strange traffic has devolped on urban and suburban railways. For instance, the people of Vienna and the great cities have taken to travelling to the country, carryin gbags, baskets, trunks, and whatnot, in order to bring home potatoes or other foods. The trains have been terribly overcrowded. Windows an udoors are broken, men climb on to the steps of carriages and fittings are torn from their fixtures with none to hinder.

The prospects of food troubles in the coming winter are such, says the Vienna Workers' Gazette, that a final catastrophe may be said to be in sight. The events of the famine days of January, 1917, will be surpassed.

Other news from cities of the dual monarchy is that groups of famished children run about the streets picking up bones and garbage, begging from passersby and wailing heart-rending tales of famine.

INDIA'S EFFORTS IN THE WAR.

Bombay Editor Says Country Is Solidly With Britain.

NEW YORK, Sept. 4.—Rustom Rustomjee, editor and proprietor of the Oriental Review in Bombay, delivered an address at the West Side Y.M.C.A., on "India and the War." Mr. Rustomjee said the people in this country, know of India only through reading Kipling's books, and that Kipling misrepresented the land.

"For the last decade or two," he said, "men who were either paid by the German Government, or who had distinctly anti-British interests, have been piling wrath upon the British Government of India. Three charges have been laid against the way Great Britain managed the country: First, Great Britain was draining the wealth of India by stupid blunders; second, she had destroyed the natural industries; third, Great Britain was doing nothing to teach the people to govern themselves.

"The best way to answer these charges is to point to the part India is playing in this war. Whole-heartedly India is with the British Government, except the few who have German reasons or individual ones for not being."

ngland Opening Schools For Its Factory Workers killed Labour Problem Presented By the War Is Solved by Intensive Training.

WASHINGTON, D. C.—One thing that the war has demonstrated with utter conclusiveness is that long apprenticeships for mechanical work can be dispensed with if the emergency is sufficiently urgent. The Department of Labour's training and dilution service recognizes this principle.

The apprenticeship system had taken a much stronger hold in England than it has ever obtained here, and when large numbers of Englishmen were called into the military service it was necessary to revise very radical impressions that had existed up to that time. The United States Department of Labour has been much interested in England's experiences along this line and has found them very helpful in solving American problems.

The discovery of an untapped reservoir in women's work and the adoption of improved automatic and safety appliances in machines provided satisfactorily for the work which was not of a complicated nature. There were many jobs, however, developed by the war in which experienced workers were needed.

The result was that intensive training was instituted by the great factories whereby men and women were instructed in the operation of complicated machinery and intricate processes. The way was shown by the initiative and generosity of a few individuals who appreciated the problem. The Government then established a training section for factory workers in the Ministry of Munitions, and some fifty colleges and schools were brought into the system. The courses led eventually to such advanced engineering work as lead burning, tool setting and gauge making, and were accompanied by theoretical discussions in exact measurement calculation.

NO CHANCE FOR THE GERMS.

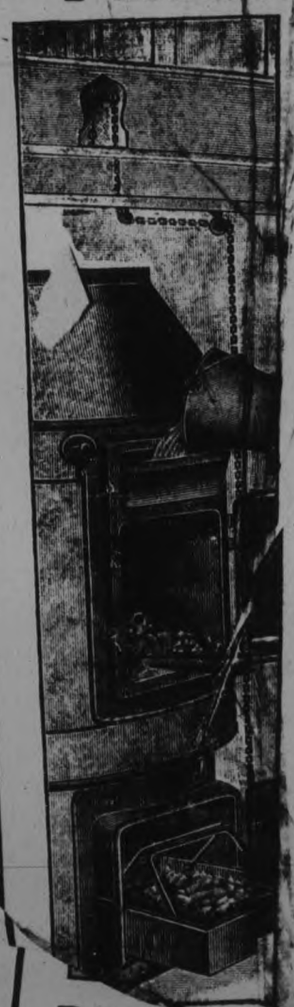
Disease germs cannot live in rich, red blood. It is people in low vitality that fall victims to germ diseases. By using Dr. Chase's Nerve Food you enrich the blood, increase vitality and prevent disease germs from finding lodgment in your body. There's wisdom in prevention. It's easier to keep well than to get well.

CARAGES CLOSE SUNDAYS.

KITCHENER, Sept. 5.—The garage men of this city announced today that, commencing next Sunday, all the repair shops and gasoline tanks would be closed. The purpose is to give the repair men a day of rest and to discourage joy riding during the remainder of the war period.

Furnace Management

Ease of the Sunshine



Feeding the furnace;
—shaking down the ashes,
—removing the ashes,
—keeping the health-giving water pan filled,
—fixing the drafts for the night,

—those are the five major operations in managing a furnace—and what a trial of the temper and destruction of your raiment any one of them may be.

If your furnace is the famous McClary Sunshine these operations will cause you little more trouble or effort than winding up the clock.

The feed door of the Sunshine is big—you don't hit the side and damage your shovel and temper and scatter coal and naughty words all over the basement.

You don't shake the Sunshine grates, you merely rock them a few times, —and the ashes drop from the perpendicular fire-box walls and grates and are guided into the big ash pan,

—and you lift the ash pan out with handles that are always cool.

—No shovelling of ashes—no ashdust on your clothes or in your hair or in the house.

And at night, without going down to the basement, you drop the damper and open the check with pulls that always work.

And the water pan is right above the fuel door—very accessible—in plain view, where you can't forget it.

Sunshine furnace management is not even exercise.

Engineering Service Free. McClary's own heating engineers are at your service when you buy a Sunshine Furnace, to give you free expert advice on your home-heating requirements. Write to the nearest McClary Branch and ask for particulars about this service. A booklet, "Comfort in the Home," makes clear all the things you want to know about furnaces, and it is sent free on request.

VIKINGS OF THE NORTH

NAME IS GIVEN TO FISHERMEN OF CANADA.

American Traveller Tells of the Brave Men and Women Who Are Making the Name of Canada's Fish Famous in All Parts of the World as a Delicious Article of Diet.

HALIFAX is the eastern emporium of Canadian fish. If you could follow the zigzag path of her water front in and out among the docks where the schooners come up from the outports, some only a few miles down the coast, others up Canso and Sydney way, some along the Perce-Gaspe and Madeleine shore in the gulf; others westerly from the haunts and tides of Fundy you would see there going on one of the greatest war works to be seen on this continent. You would see codfish in all stages flying through the air out of vessels' holds on to barrows and scales, and into packing houses, piling every room and spreading itself sky-high on the roofs with church towers and the citadel looking down on it and in the harbor the waiting carrier for "across" looking up to it in patience and faith.

You would see mackerel coming out of barrels and going into barrels, swimming in brine; with coppers tightening, with bits of rush, any leak, however small, and setting the hoops (the nimbus of the mackerel-barrel heads) in place, tightening them with the tap, tap, tap that multiplied along the pier sounds like a feu de joie "O we've got them Germans beaten—tap, tap, tap." Did you ever think what an army of men it takes to make fishing, as seen in Canada, what it is—a world power? Shipbuilders and lumberjacks, carpenters and riggers, sailmakers and caulkers, tackle-spinners and all the makers of dories, lines, hooks, tubs, corks, floats, sinkers, nets, and in fact, the thousand and one odds and ends which go to make up the paraphernalia of a fisherman's outfit? Not to speak of the actual crew—from skipper to cook, fearless, adventurous—afraid of nothing?

Well, these men, many of them, are among the Canadians manning the first-line trenches of the Allies, are the heroes of Ypres and Vimy Ridge and are holding the "air" against all comers. These fishermen are the present-day "Vikings of the north," and nature, not schools and colleges, gave them their training. Nothing beats fogs, gales, ice, snow, oil-bale calms, currents, loss of reckoning, inability to find your ship on the banks, through the fog that comes up while you are fishing in a dory alone and without food, for finding out all about a man. Out of the fish boats these Canadians stepped to the deck of the men-o'-war in the North Sea or into the ranks of the army, it mattered not to them which, but many stayed behind to fish and many young lads, not old enough for the army, came forward to fill the gaps in the fisherman ranks. So it is in Halifax one sees such a lot of old men and boys working with the fish, not to speak of the outports, which are behind the scenes so to speak, where the women work.

The fish wives of the outports are "the women's legion" of Canada!

If there are 50,000 men working in the fish on the Canadian Atlantic coast there must be at least 100,000 women, helping husbands and sons with cod and mackerel day in and day out, washing, salting, padding in brine, laying out to dry on spruce bough stages, turning it at noon, taking it in at night, handling it time and again each day in all sorts of weather for a week or a fortnight, beside tackling every day's catch as it drops to the beach from the laden dory. I had no idea what an endless lot of work fish means till I began to follow its course all around the Canadian coast, east and west. To see the women at work on the fish makes one realize what real work means, and how few of us understand it. Fish work is not only hard, much of it is unpleasant, if the women stopped to be finicky—which they never do. Their spirit is too big for that. Your Gaelife woman from the Helands of Cape Breton, with "the second sight," the modern Evangelines from St. Mary's Bay or St. Peter's, the habitant woman of Havre Aubert or Perce, the Channel Islander from La Baie de Chaleur, the Scotch Nova Scotian from Digby way, are too sure of themselves to turn up their noses at fish.

The tale of the salmon on the Pacific coast is equally human. Here it is a tale of the Japanese and their families. Exiles from home. It is not within the scope of this article to say whether "yellow" labor is the right thing or not, we only know that at this moment of stress in the world's history, the work is everything, and by the fortunes of war these Japs of the Pacific coast fish-trade are for the moment "allies" with the Canadian east in placing Canadian fish into the world's otherwise hungry mouth.

The Japs have established themselves on Lulu Island at a place called Stevenson, commanding the entrance to the Fraser river. The island is lowland and it has had to be dyked. Beside the canals the Japs have established their little homes, bare boarded places devoid of paint, yet with every little old tin or paid or box filled with earth and blooming with nastaurtiums and chrysanthemums about the doorways or by the little railed-off gang-plank crossing the canal. The Japanese women work in the fish as well as the men. The men in the boats with the salmon nets, the women in the canneries, their babies tied up in a shawl on their back. Canned fish is so easy to handle in transportation that the demand is already great and this year greater than ever, but for reasons unknown.

BLACK BUTTON BARRED

Symbol of Mourning Chosen by Soldiers is Not Permitted.

LONDON, Sept. 5.—A little device instituted by soldiers in the ranks to signify that they are mourning for a relative or friend has been officially "turned down." The appearance of the second button on a soldier's tunic or jacket with a black cloth covering as a sign of mourning has become quite a familiar sight in the London streets, but the fiat has gone forth that the wearing of the symbol is irregular and must cease.

Wife and Little Boy

SAVED BY DR. FOWLER'S
EXTRACT OF WILD STRAWBERRY

Both Had Dysentery.

Dysentery comes on very suddenly and is one of the worst and most dangerous of all bowel troubles. The pains in the bowels become intense, the discharges occur with great rapidity, and are very often accompanied by blood. Unless these discharges are checked the sufferer becomes weak and languid, and very often death ensues. There is only one remedy to use in all cases of dysentery or any other looseness of the bowels, and that is "Dr. Fowler's Extract of Wild Strawberry."

It will cure where all others fail. It has been on the market for 73 years.

Don't accept a cheap substitute and thus endanger your health.

Mr. W. J. Metcalfe, Tofield, Alta., writes: "I wish to state that we have used Dr. Fowler's Extract of Wild Strawberry with good results. I will say that it can't be beat. It saved my wife and little boy last summer, when they were very low with dysentery. We always have a bottle of it in the house, and would not be without it if it cost five dollars a bottle."

The genuine "Dr. Fowler's" is manufactured only by The T. Milburn Co., Limited, Toronto, Ont. Price 35c.

Wayside Schools In Korea.

One of the splendid things in Korea is the way churches have been built out of little wayside Sunday schools. Some 2,500 children have been gathered into these schools recently by one denomination, the Southern Presbyterian. "These schools are as simple as they can well be—a gathering of little unwashed, uncared-for children under the roadside tree, in a friendly house, or on a verandah. There is practically no organization at all, but these children are held together at first by curiosity, a potent factor in the East, and then by love.

Take the beginning of one such school. A missionary well supplied with brightly colored pictures or text cards (probably sent by some Sunday school in America) goes to some village and sits under some tree or by the side of the road. Very soon one child and another gathers in front of him to examine him and hear what he has to say. The missionary says a few words and perhaps sings a verse or two of "Jesus Loves Me" and gives each of the children a card and tells them to come again next Sunday and bring others.

Next Sunday he comes to the same place and the children are there to meet him.

A few will perhaps spell out with him a verse or a text. Some Sundays later the children will learn to look for his coming, and the class will take on regular proportions, and quite a number will join shyly in the singing.

It may be that a child or friendly neighbor will offer his home, his yard or a room, and from that time more or less regular work may be begun. Some "schools" we have seen have met Sunday after Sunday through a long bitter winter under a tree by the roadside, but the good done was not to be measured.

Since these schools started a few years ago thousands upon thousands have been reached. Just the other day a Korean said: "It is curious that when I used to go to such and such a village the children sang all sorts of heathen songs, but now I hear only 'Jesus Loves Me.'"—The Christian Herald.

Practical.

"Why don't you raise more flowers?"

"Well," replied Mr. Crosslots, "my wife has decided that it will look better for me to go down town with some edibles in my pocket instead of a posy in my button-hole."

SEES GERMANS CRUMBLING.

London Times Points Out the Importance of the Canadians Piercing Wotan Line.

London, Sept. 5. — The Times editorially says: "The Canadians have many glorious achievements to their credit but have never surpassed their great deed Monday, when they pierced that defensive system which even the most sanguine experts believed would take much time to subdue. We seem confronted with possibilities which would have seemed a month ago fantastical. It is permissable to speculate but not yet to count upon any of the developments suggested. What we know is that far more than the Wotan line was pierced on Monday. The reputation of German arms was vitally pierced. We can see their great army in the west crumbling before our eyes."

THE HOME HEALTH CLUB

DANCING AWAY GOLDEN HOURS

Our young people must be taught that "all is not gold that glitters" and that "fine dress does not make the man or woman." We must begin right if we expect to rear our children up to contentment and happiness. Teach them to be industrious and not idle away their life. There are so many young people to-day that are living only in the present, dancing away golden hours, when they should be thinking, studying, and working. Girls should be taught how to manage and keep house while with mother. As she grows older, let the mantle gradually fall from mother's shoulders on to hers, and when she is called to a home of her own she will not feel at a loss. She will know how and where to begin. We know there are mothers now toiling to keep grown girls from work and when they are able and would willingly do it, had they not been brought up with the idea instilled into their heads that young ladies must not harm their beauty by work. A girl can never have a better chance to show off her charms than by presiding over the home. A mother should teach her daughter that her place, when not at school, is at her mother's side, helping her provide comforts for the family, not in reading novels and riding bicycles. When our girls are brought up to be industrious, sensible women we will hear less complaint of having to work hard, and less complaint of their husbands. If a man is poor he is obliged to work hard to supply his family with substantial food and clothing, and if his wife is a true woman she will be his helpmate and the world will hear no complaint.

MOTHER'S INFLUENCE.

We were somewhat startled the other day to hear a learned lawyer of matured years and wide influence say: "Every child is five-sixths mother and one-sixth father."

"How is that?"

How can it be otherwise when you consider the closeness of the tie between the mother and the child? It is actually bone of her bone and flesh of her flesh. During the early formative period the child is most entirely under the influence and guidance of the mother. A wise observer of human development has said: "Give me a child during the first five years of his existence and I will make him what I please. It is in babyhood when the mind is soft and impressible, that it receives the indelible marks for good or evil. The father is away from home, busy with affairs, the bread winner earning by the sweat of his brow, protection for his little ones and means of educating them, while the mother is with them constantly, forming their minds, their dispositions and establishing their principles permanently. The power of the mother over the child is almost absolute. She may praise or punish as she will. In her home she is the dictator and may rule as a despot, exacting obedience from a rebellious horde or as an angel diffusing sweetness and light into every corner and cranny of her kingdom. Thus the power and influence of women, though quiet, secret, hidden, are the heart and homes of the land, is infinitely powerful and far-reaching.

GOOD ADVICE.

The following was written by a grandmother, who highly appreciates our Home Circle Department. Her advice is certainly good and we gladly give it space.—(Ed.)

As I am verging on the land of dotage and much of a child myself, if the children will follow me into my cool, roomy kitchen, we will have a social chat this lovely morning, and as boys have a talent for combining pleasure with business, they will excuse me if I air a few of my opinions while I string my beans for dinner and mould my butter for market. You know, boys, when sent to the spring for a pitcher of water, the reason you stay so long is you stop to poke the frog on the stone, yoke the lizards and chink the saucy squirrels, etc.

All children, from the tiny prattler to the blooming maiden and happy frolicsome young man, have a tender place in my heart. I have a great many friends among them. They are to me what the sun is to the flower, and what the flower is to the bee; and without them life would be as blank as a snow-capped mountain. I would love to take each one of you by the hand, and tell you how much I love you; but my pen will record the feeling of my heart.

Dear children, I hope you all realize what a treasure you have in the mother love that cares for you so tenderly. So many miss the deep, speechless love on which their lives have been nourished and hunger and thirst for it.

Father is tender in his solicitude, but there is not love like mother. If angels walk the earth and keep special eyes on little children, they must be sad when so many little ones call in vain for mamma.

Why don't you say "Let's try to get through with our work and go to the woods Saturday for a picnic?" You think you can't spare the time, eh? When your boys get disgusted and leave home to try city life, then perhaps you can see where you could have spent many a day with your family, or taken them into the city for a day.

We sometimes envy the wealthy the beautiful pictures that adorn their walls, and yet what is a sunset on a wall compared with a sunset hung in loops of fire in the heavens? Without money and without price we can all view the royal gallery of the noonday heavens, the King's gallery of the midnight sky.

The radiant face, the noble form, the lady-like courtesy, the helping hand, are jewels of rarer worth than diamonds.

HON. F. COCHRANE MAY QUIT

Is Assertion at Ottawa, Should He Not Head Railway Board.

OTTAWA, Sept. 5. — If the Hon. Frank Cochrane is not selected as head of the new board to manage the Canadian Government Railways there is a strong probability that he will quit the Government. Some people very close to the former Minister of Railways make this assertion. Mr. Cochrane gave up his portfolio in the October shuffle with the understanding that he would head the C.N.R. board, and this also was intimated at the time in an official memorandum.

ONTARIO STILL LEADS.

The Military Service Act Has Received Loyal Support.

As the Province of Ontario was enthusiastic for the Military Service Act, the citizens of the province have done their duty to the full under the act. It will be remembered that the act called for 100,000, and that these were allotted in proportion to the population without considering what the various provinces had done under the volunteer system. Ontario went right at the new task, and it was announced several weeks ago that the Ontario Military Districts, like some of the districts in the West, have already filled their allotments and are continuing to draft men. If the eastern districts had done as well, the full draft of 100,000 men would now be in uniform, but as the east has not done so, Ontario still continues to show her metal. According to the last figures supplied, Ontario has given 28,000 men under the Military Service Act as compared to 8,000 from the Province of Quebec. Great interest was recently aroused by a statement regarding this matter made by Lt.-Col. H. A. Machin, director of the Military Service Act branch of the Ministry of Justice and member of the Ontario Legislature for Kenora. Col. Machin went overseas as a colonel in command of the 94th Battalion, having refused a judgeship in order to do so, and his present position, which he says he does not expect to hold, is worth $6,000 a year.

Col. Machin said: "I have been sent to Montreal to devise a means whereby the Militia Department will be able to handle more recruits than they have been able to do. At the present time there are over 11,000 eligible for call in this district; they have not been called because the Militia Department has not been able to take them.

"In the meantime, only those who have been requested to be called by the G. O. C. of Montreal and Quebec districts have been taken. This has resulted in only 8,000 under the Military Service Act being called in the Province of Quebec. The fact that Ontario has called 28,000 against 8,000 in Quebec was given out by the Militia Department last week. Immediately the Government became concerned and I was plainly told by Messrs. Sifton and Mewburn that unless I produced the proper quota from Quebec I could look for another job. I reminded these gentlemen that recruits had been called in the Province of Quebec as fast as the Militia Department could take care of them."

The Sweet Young Thing.

A sergeant was taking a lady friend through a flying field and explaining in detail the work of an aviation camp. They had been in the machine shops, the blacksmith shops and hangars where hundreds of our boys were at work when he asked her if there was any question she wanted to ask. The sweet young thing replied:

"Yes. Where are all the soldiers?"

Got His Number.

A Kingston masher forced a flirtation on the street recently, but was assured by the fair one that she "really had to go now — you can phone me at 464." That was as far as he got, except to learn that her name was Susie. He telephoned according to suggestion and found he had police headquarters.

NEW COIFFURES AND HATS TO WEAR WITH THEM

THE PAJAMAS UP-TO-DATE.

New York, Sept. 1.

The other afternoon I went to a play in a new theatre. It is a beautiful theatre and the play itself was charming, one of those old world settings, far from the noise of to-day's fighting and rather a relief after all the war plays and pictures we are so much interested in. The costumes on the stage were, of course, of that fargone day, but those in the audience were just as interesting. They were of every description, from the simplest of sports suits to the more elaborate frocks of Georgette crepe and chiffon. One of the things that interested me most, however, were the coiffures. The old-time pompadour seems to be returning into favour. Not, of course, with that hard upward roll over an enormous "rat," that day is passed, we hope; but there were decided pompadours, losely waving back and ending in soft twists, and even puffs at the back of the head. Sometimes the hair was parted in the middle and then rolled up and back. Every now and then one saw a charming person with a suggestion of bangs. In fact, the coiffures, as the fashions this year, are very much "as you like them."

Hats and Things.

The hats are becoming larger every day. Sports hats, filmy brimmed lace or chiffon hats, and immense evening hats of Milan straw, with flat trimming only on the brim, perhaps in the shape of a bird of paradise, or an aigrette. The other extreme is equally popular, the tiny toque and draped turban are great favourites for street wear, and with semi-informal afternoon costumes. Organdie hats, by far the most alluring of the fads of the season, come in every size and shape, and colour. Some are severely plain, to be worn in the morning; others have flutings and flowers galore, and others are combined with satin and even velvet for the summer evening spent in dancing. The irregular brims are proving quite a feature of the new mode. Now is the time for the first velvet and fall hats to appear, but there are remarkably few of them on Fifth Avenue, due perhaps to the fact that we have had a very cold spring and summer, and every one wants a bit of summer first.

The Charm of the Pajamas.

There is hardly a play to be seen now on Broadway that does not in some act feature pajamas! Indeed, they are so charming that one is not surprised at this fact. They are made of all manner of materials, and when seriously considered for real wear, are very practical and comfortable. One fascinating design was of soft silk, creamy in tone, with large figures here and there in delicate lavender and blue. The bands around the sleeves, the lower edge of the jacket and the trousers were of deep French blue, and the effect was lovely in the extreme. The little coat slips on over the head, and the round neck edge is without any trimming whatsoever, following the mode of daytime styles. Sometimes the trousers are gathered into deep cuffs often ending in ruffles.

Potatoes that are shriveled can be baked if they are parboiled first.

Alchemy and Modern Science.

Modern science, which works from facts to theories, not from theories to facts, stands in strong contrast with the science of the ancient. Indeed, the contrast is so great, according to nature, that nowadays many of the theories of the alchemists seem almost unintelligible; and confusion is rendered the worse by their use of diverse and often confusing symbols and systems of nomenclature. But, despite the fantastic mould in which their ideas were cast, the alchemists do appear to have intuitively grasped certain fundamental facts, which, lost awhile are being rediscovered by the more certain, if less rapid, methods of modern science. The investigations of radio-activity and allied phenomena have demonstrated that the so-called elements are not immutable, but are one in essence, and are produced by an evolutionary process; so the alchemists, in a sense, were right, and the followers of Dalton wrong. Moreover, researches by Sir William Ramsay indicate the possibility of producing true transmutations of the elements, meaning thereby the conversion of one element into another at will, as distinguished from a spontaneous change of one element into another.

China Deports Germans.

It is announced that the Chinese Government has decided to deport all Germans. This decision affects between seven thousand and ten thousand persons; the deportees are to be interned in Australia until the end of the war, and transportation is to begin at the earliest possible moment.

The London Express' Tokio correspondent states that this is the severest blow ever dealt at German commerce. The bulk of the deportees are business men. Many of them are influential merchants who for years past, with the aid of subsidized steamship lines and state banks, have frequently deprived British merchants of contracts which should have been theirs on the merits of the case.

The present complete expulsion reduces the German organization in China to ruins, and, in the only possible way, put an end to the German propaganda, which since 1914, has never ceased to poison the Orient against the Allies.

Some Philosophy.

"We don't know what we're fighting for," complained a Prussian private.

"What's the difference?" rejoined another. "We wouldn't ever get it anyhow."

BASS HATCHING WAS A FAILURE.

The most complete failure of the spring hatching of bass at the Government hatchery at Mount Pleasant, near Dunnford, has been more or less of a mystery to the officials of the Fisher Department. Yesterday, however, Hon. Finlay Macdiarmid satisfied himself that natural conditions had been responsible. The Minister was called upon by Hon. Mr. Buller commissioner of State Fisheries for Pennsylvania, and Superintendent Hartman of the State Hatchery at Erie. In discussing hatchery methods with the visitors, Hon. Mr. Macdiarmid learned that the Erie hatch of bass had also been a complete failure for the first time in many years. The American experts blamed the failure upon the abnormally cold water last spring, a condition that was noticed at the Ontario hatchery.

Cincinnati man tells how to lift off any corn without hurting one bit

You reckless men and women who are pestered with corns and who have at least once a week invited an awful death from lockjaw or blood poison are now told by a Cincinnati authority to use a drug called freezone, which the moment a few drops are applied to any corn, the soreness is relieved and soon the entire corn, root, and all, lifts out with the fingers.

It is a sticky substance which dries the moment it is applied and is said to simply shrivel the corn without inflaming or even irritating the surrounding tissue or skin. It is claimed that a quarter of an ounce of freezone will cost very little at any of the drug stores, but is sufficient to rid one's feet of every hard or soft corn or callus.

You are further warned that cutting at a corn is a suicidal habit.

OUR DAILY SHORT STORY

Pretensions

By HELEN CLARK

(Copyright, 1918, by the McClure Newspaper Syndicate.)

"On your way home stop at Dobbs'—get some flowers—orchids—something with a heart throb in 'em—ten dollars or so—the kind of thing you'd pick yourself for the girl you were in love with."

The first time Bowden Pain received instructions from old Mr. Clark, president of the large concern for which he was cashier, he felt a little like saying: "Who do you think I am? Your valet?" But he found the task of selecting flowers at Dobbs' so diverting that the next time a similar order came to select the flowers that Mr. Clark wished to have sent to his wife as indication of his own personal thought and affection, he greeted the task with keen interest, and put so much heart into the selection that old Mr. Clark felt the beneficial results in his good wife's disposition for a week to come. At the end of the week he again requested Mr. Pain to order flowers "with a heart throb in 'em." And Pain outdid himself by ordering a basket of pink roses and blue larkspur that actually caused the dry-eyed Mrs. Clark to melt into tears. It was on that night that Bowden first saw Martha Jenks.

He was particularly disarmed, for following Mr. Clark's instructions, he had put himself in the mood of the young man in love with someone. He was exposed in a most vulnerable point. He was not in love, but he was in a lover's mood, and when Martha appeared and he heard that indefinable little swish and perceived the almost negligible scent of perfume that in his mind was associated with women of "real class" he promptly succumbed.

He heard her order six small bouquets of lilies of the valley suitable for favors at a luncheon the next day, and took particular pains to attend to her instructions as to where they should be sent.

"The Founders' Club," he heard her say, and besides being filled with admiration for the particular way in which she uttered these words, he was also aware of the fact that she was a member of an exclusive city society—for to be a member of the Founders' club one had not only to be a lineal descendant of one of the Colonial founders of the city, but one had to have considerable money to spend on club dues and otherwise to "keep up" with that organization.

Bowden Pain had one thing in his favor at the outset of the pursuit of his ideal. He was a member of "the" Pain family, and although had he taken the trouble he might have learned that the original Hezekiah Pain was twice pilloried for breaking the Sabbath, and enjoyed no higher distinction in the community than that of road mender, still he was descended from a founder, and was eligible to the club. Never in his wildest dreams, however, had he thought of seeking membership. First, because of the expense that would entail; and second, because the young men and women who belonged to the organization were many rungs higher on the social ladder than he pretended to be. But the idea of belonging first entered his head shortly after he heard the charming Martha mention the name of the club as the address to which the flowers could be sent. And after the coincidence of meeting her a second time at Dobbs' florist shop, he went home to figure out on paper about what the necessary expense of membership would be.

The itemizing ran something as follows:

"Initiation fee, $200. (Bowden believed this to be the sum. He would verify it the next day).

Annual dues	$60.00
Tuxedo suit (for men's night)	60.00
Swallowtail renovated	15.00
Evening clothes accessories	10.00
Black shoes	10.00
	$355.00

This was no sum to be thrown lightly away. In the veins of Bowden ran the true Yankee blood of the Pains, and even a part of his savings were not to be spent lightly on self-indulgence. He was saving, as he conveniently could, for the as yet indefinite home for an even less definite "family." But why save for a "family," Bowden reflected to himself, when the accomplishment of his ambitions along that line might possibly depend on the expenditure of part of the savings?

But even after the second vision of Martha at Dobbs' he might have let his dreams of belonging to the Founders' club subside had he not charmer at the bank. He was depositing his small weekly savings, and she—fair spender that she was—was rather nonchalantly withdrawing a neat little roll of bills.

Bowden saw no less than five ten-dollar bills, presumably her pin money for a week. The thought of financing a wife of such habits—for Bowden actually did think of her as a not impossible Mrs. Pain—was not the immediate problem. The immediate problem was financing membership in the Founders' club. The idea of marrying a woman who could thus casually draw a large bank roll from the teller's window had no special attraction for Bowden. His Yankee inheritance included the ambition to support his own wife on his own earnings. Still, he did not let that trifle disturb his peace of mind, but went about it in quite a calculating manner the next day to have his name proposed at the Founders' club by a friend who belonged. Needless to say, no one opposed his admission. He was perfectly eligible, and unattached, good-looking bachelors were at a premium. Then began the really hard part of the membership—that of securing an introduction to Martha. Bowden attended every evening function at the club, and as many afternoon ones as he could manage to, without actually giving up his business career. The three hundred and fifty-five dollars that he had estimated would cover his expenses for the first year of course fell far below the actuality. This did not include tickets to the various benefit entertainments held at the clubrooms, nor did it include meals and refreshments there, nor tips. And all the time that Bowden was spending his money there were no signs of Martha.

One day he dropped in the clubrooms on his way from his office—as a matter of fact to try to recover an umbrella he had left there at the last evening entertainment. It was dark in the entrance hall where the check boys sat, and it was not until he became accustomed to the subdued light that he recognized Martha sitting there. She was alone, and she was fingering the pages of a small note book. Bowden found it imperative for him to take a seat on the other side of the hall to look over some notes in his own pocket. From time to time he looked up at Martha. She was the same delightful girl and there was the same air of perfect grooming about her. He would never have noticed the blemish in the grooming, had it not been for her quick effort to cover up the wrists of both her hands at the same time. Then he saw that over each was fastened, and kept in place by a metal paper clip, a large sheet of copy paper, such as his own stenographer used to keep from getting office grime on a fresh blouse. Martha had removed her cuffs in haste, but Bowden caught the movement.

Then the check boy, who was at the telephone, spoiled Martha's little game of pretension. "Here's a message for Mrs. Snodgrass' secretary," he said, and Martha had to take it. In her confusion at doing so she let fall the little notebook that she had been fingering. Bowden seized it, and on the absurd pretext of wishing to see to whom it belonged, he read the name of Martha Tuffle. It was absurd that he did not restore it to her until she had left the clubhouse and he had followed her half a block down the street.

"I have seen you before," he said. And she did not deny that she had also noticed the coincidence of the frequent meeting. "And I thought you belonged to the Founders' club."

"I pretended I did," she said, "that first day. I wanted you to think I did, and now you'll dislike me because I've posed to be something I was not."

"And I have been pretending, too," he said. "I've been pretending that I could afford to belong to this club, when I couldn't. I wanted to know you and I wanted you to think that I had as much money as the other men who belong."

"Then we're both pretending," she said.

"But if we hadn't pretended," he said, "we would never have met." It seemed as they walked along in the spring dusk, that they had always known each other, and Bowden Pain was already feeling relief at the thought that his annual dues and other incidentals would not have to be paid for next year. He also looked with more specific interest at the objective of his savings. He took the girl beside him into his confidence. "And it is better—and more like the Pains—not to marry a woman with money. You knew from the first how it was to be?"

And Martha's low answer in the deepening dusk satisfied him.

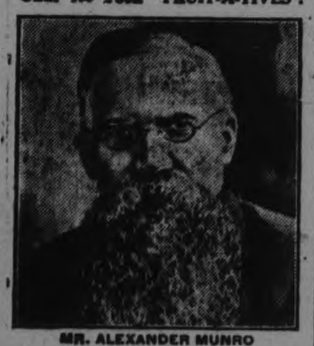
A CRIPPLE FOR THREE YEARS

Helpless In Bed With Rheumatism Until He Took "FRUIT-A-TIVES".



MR. ALEXANDER MUNRO

R.R. No. 1, Lorne, Ont.

"For over three years, I was confined to bed with Rheumatism. During that time, I had treatment from a number of doctors, and tried nearly everything I saw advertised to cure Rheumatism, without receiving any benefit.

Finally, I decided to try 'Fruit-a-tives". Before I had used half a box, I noticed an improvement; the pain was not so severe, and the swelling started to go down.

I continued taking this fruit medicine, improving all the time, and now I can walk about two miles and do light chores about the place".

ALEXANDER MUNRO.

Noninflammable Movies.

Neptune, being the god of the seven seas, very properly comes to the aid of the moving picture in banishing the menace of fire, but he does not offer water. Seaweed is the thing. From this an English experimenter has found that a product called "algin" can be extracted. It is used in the manufacture of noninflammable films and in the treatment of paper to make it waterproof, flameproof and germproof.—Boston Herald.

Monster Wind Motor.

A wind motor claimed to be the largest of its kind in the world has lately been brought into use at Harlingen, Friesland, for draining a tract of lowland redeemed from the sea by high embankments, with an area of 1,850 acres. This machine, which has steel sails and is mounted on a steel tower, has a diameter of fifty feet and is said to be capable of dealing with 64,000 to 70,000 cubic feet of water an hour.

Postals by Telephone.

Telephone postcards are now being seriously proposed. A message would be written on a special five cent telephone card and mailed like ordinary mail. The postoffice that receives the card would then call up on the telephone the person to whom the card was addressed and whose telephone number appeared in the address, and read the message.

Fearful Saints Need Not Fear

THE Canadian A.P.M. in London is Major G. S. Clifford, of Calgary. He has held this position ever since the First Division landed in England. In earlier years he served in the Imperial forces, and took part in the South African war.

Thanks to the A.P.M.'s runabout, we contrived in the course of the evening to visit seven variety houses, two railway stations, three hotels, and also to give a look-in at a couple of other places where the young officer with a little leisure and money—or a lot of both—is wont to spend a portion of his time when in London, says the correspondent of the Associated Press.

In one sense it was rather a dull evening, even if there were small incidents innocent enough in themselves, which aroused memories in my companion of experiences during the past four years which had shown how the young man devoid of understanding may bring himself to the correction of the stocks.

The A.P.M. was known everywhere. Much-belted janitors at the swingdoors — old soldiers nearly every one—saluted him punctiliously as he passed in and gave a "good evening" to the great man in evening dress standing easily in the lobby. At all the halls the procedure was pretty much the same. Pass right through. A stroll round the back of the stalls, with a friendly nod for some acquaintance (and occasionally a different sort of recognition for acquaintance of another class), a walk upstairs into the now almost deserted promenade, a shrewd look at the parties in the boxes, and a glance into the lounge and refreshment rooms. At one place a slight ebullition of animal spirits from some subalterns in the foyer caused the A.P.M. to turn on his way out. The offenders recognized him, and the demonstration evaporated. The A.P.M. gave me a slight grin. Innocent and guilty alike hold his uniform in healthy respect.

We spent a quarter of an hour in the approaches of a big railway station. "Red caps" were busy examining the passes of soldiers; perhaps the "Red caps" had guile enough to get even busier than usual while the A.P.M. was in the vicinity. He did not seem disposed, though, unduly to interfere with them or with anybody else. He was just out, seemingly, to assure himself that the men in khaki, with Sam Brownes or without, were conducting themselves as befitted their uniform. Our one "capture" of the evening was effected close to a famous hotel. He was some twenty years old, and was thrusting along cheerfully, hand in pocket and pipe in mouth. Probably he had only come out of the hotel for a few moments. It was the pocket and the pipe that offended. The A.P.M.'s own hand was laid gently upon his sleeve, a few words in an undertone followed, then a prompt bestowal of the pipe into a far less conspicuous position, and a salute from the one admonished — et voila tout.

Finally, and after nightfall, we brought up in the purlieus of a much-thronged centre. The A.P.M. knew very well all that he was looking for. It was here that he was led to tell me of some dark experiences which come to those whose charge it is to "pluck the spoil of the wicked out of his teeth." Doubtless there will always be the way open in London for the simple to pass on and be punished, but the "fearful saints" who distress themselves unduly over the temptation which London holds "in the twilight, in the evening, in the black and dark night" for the young soldier, commissioned and non-commissioned, would find cause for fresh courage were they able to make a similar round of London's haunts of an evening.

Once Ruled Most of World.

For more than six centuries Arab domination was supreme in western Asia, northern Africa from the Upper Nile to the Black sea, over most of Spain and, for a time, a large part of France, as well as much of the Mediterranean coast, and from the Persian gulf to the Pyrenees. As Sidney Low has said: "The Ommeyad, Abbasid and Fatimite Caliphs were lords of Egypt, Tripoli, Morocco and Spain, of Syria and Cilicia, or Iran and Khorassan. Had they composed their dynastic quarrels and kept their rebellious emirs in order they might have mastered Italy and France, as well as turned St. Peter's into a mosque and set up Moslem doctors to expound the koran at Oxford."

SHE WOULD NOT BE WITHOUT IT

Mrs. Clarke Says She Never Saw Anything That Equals Tanlac.

"I was actually on the verge of a nervous breakdown when I started on Tanlac, and it has done me so much good that I wouldn't be without this wonderful medicine for anything," said Mrs. Sarah Clarke, who is employed in the munition works of the Fairbanks-Morse Co., and lives at 2188½ St. Clair Avenue, Toronto, the other day.

"Two years ago," she continued, "when my health began to fail, I lost my appetite, and nothing I would eat tasted right, and I had to force down every mouthful. My food did not nourish me, and I was losing strength right along. Working on munitions, too, was very trying on my nerves, and when I got home at night I would feel so exhausted that I would almost collapse. I could not sleep at all well, and would get up in the mornings feeling almost as tired and fagged out as when I went to bed. Every day I worked was a day of misery to me, and I don't believe I could have stood it much longer if one of my neighbours hadn't advised me to try Tanlac.

"I have taken three bottles and have never had any medicine to build me up like Tanlac has. My improvement has been simply wonderful. My appetite is fine. I enjoy all my meals, that nervousness has left me entirely, and I am feeling like a different person. I never have that tired, worn-out feeling now. I have gained some in weight, and am a whole lot stronger and better in every way than I have been in a long time."

Tanlac is sold in Peterborough by W. B. Warne Drug Co., Ltd.; in Havelock by A. C. Denike; in Lakefield by Tanner Drug Co., Ltd.; in Fowler's Corners by W. A. Hunter; in Gelert by A. J. Scott; in Westwood by G. Pringle & Son.

Alaska, the Superlative.

Alaska scenery is not scenery—it's nature's coup d'etat.

Here glaciers as tall as the dome of St. Paul's gleam like meadows of glass.

And now and again, when a berg is born, great sheets of water seem to splash the very sky and angry waves toss the baby glacier about as if it were a cork in a basin of water.

Alaska's mountains out-Alp the Alps. A mountain under 12,000 feet is ignored as a mere foothill.

Alaska's trees out-giant California's mammoth specimens. Here a canoe capable of carrying sixty warriors has been made by the Indians from the trunks of a single poplar tree.

And Alaska's mosquitoes out-Jersey Jersey's fiercest. It is said that nothing short of a coat of tar and yard will discourage these man-eating animals. Ordinarily unguents prove to be nothing more than appetizing sauces. To kill a mosquito is mistaken judgment—so many relatives gather for the funeral. Huge, apparently self-reliant bears have been so badly stung about the eyes that they have become blind and unable to find food—murdered by these tiny pests.

Scheme For Threshers.

With the completion of seeding the Ontario Department of Agriculture is now considering ways and means of supplying labor for the threshing of the crops. In former years threshing gangs have been few, but Dr. Riddell, superintendent of the Trades and Labor Branch of the Government, hopes to have 5,000 men available for this work. A pamphlet will be sent out to all farmers' clubs and threshers in the province, containing organization suggestions, which are in effect that eight-men gangs be formed. In the past farmers had to assist one another at threshing, but under the new scheme the department asks that 25 farmers sign an agreement to have one thresher do their work this season. With this guarantee the thresher can forward his application to the Trades and Labor Branch for the number of men he requires.

Honored Their Pastor.

Rev. A. W. McComb, for the past three years rector of St. Luke's Church on the Six Nations' reserve, near Brantford, was presented with a purse of gold, and Mrs. McComb with a traveling bag in appreciation by the Indians of their efforts on the reserve. They were also adopted into the Mohawk tribe with the usual Indian ceremony. Rev. Mr. McComb will proceed overseas to join the Imperial forces as chaplain.

Will Try Spanking.

Magistrate Watt, of Guelph, has revived in practice the old-fashioned spanking as a corrective of juvenile delinquency. In several cases recently he has ignored fine or imprisonment and ordered that the youthful offenders be spanked. Bert Andrews, of Drayton, who had informally borrowed an automobile, was the last subject for the official spanker.

New York's Millions.

That New York is now a 10,000,000 state is indicated by figures that have just been prepared by William Liebermann, who was United States census supervisor for the district of which Brooklyn was a part. These figures show that the population of the state on April 15, 1900, was 7,269,894. On April 15, 1910, the population was 9,113,614. The daily increase therefore was 629. Assuming this daily increase, the population of the state passed 10,000,000 on Washington's birthday.—New York American.

The Bells of Flanders

A FLEMING, moved to sorrow by the seizure of the bells decreed by the occupation of Belgian territory, has an article in a great Dutch paper, the most characteristic passages of which are translated below:

"What a world of poetry it awakens suddenly in one's mind. It makes me think of the bells of Flanders, of all our belfries and our bell towers, which in times of peace sounded so divinely."

"We have some celebrated bells, such as Melchior, the bell of victory, in the tower of the market place of Bruges, which adds a deep note to the sound of the 48 bells of the chimes, one of the most sonorous in Europe. We still seem to hear Carolus, in the lace tower at Antwerp, joyously ringing on holidays or tolling lugubriously on solemn and sad occasions, like the day when we accompanied that unforgetable burgomaster, Jan van Rijswijk, to the grave. We were at the tower of St. Rombout of Malines, near to Salvator, and Rumoldus, and Carolus, and Maria, and Lubertus, and Magdalena wehn Jef Denijn so skilfully and musically managed his keys. We think of the belfry of Alost, which was the very first, according to tradition, for Coecke, the inventor of chimes, lived in this little city in the eleventh century.

"And how many of the villages of Flanders, unknown outside of their own country, possess a veritable treasure in bells. We still vividly recall our surprise when, on a visit to the bell tower of little Lisseweghe, we found ourselves suddenly in the presence of six great ancient bells. At the town hall of Damme, the ruined, near Bruges, is the oldest bell of Flanders.

" 'Trer Trate Mibei
" 'Teceunt Harlebeke,
" 'Anno Deo MCCCCXCVIII.'

"This is what we read on the bronze; and since 1598 this bell has been sounding from the little tower shot out from the ancient and now defunct city of Jacob van Maerlant.

"But where shall we stop if we once begin to speak of the bells of Flanders?

"The brutal ordinance of Von Falkenhausen has struck our people deep within their soul, for the bell is bound up with Flemish life. The bells are beloved in Flanders more than they are in other countries. Abroad, we have sometimes read a paragraph in a newspaper voicing complaints on the subject of the ringing of too many bells, which especially in the early morning disturbed the slumber of the citizens; but we have never come across recriminations of that character in a Flemish journal. Many a time we have listened to discussions by simple villagers on the sound of the bells as they sat listening to them on a peaceful summer evening. And they knew exactly which were the sacristans in the country who were skilful in ringing the bells and which were not. Sounding the bells was an art.

" 'See,' said a Fleming from the refugee camp at Uden, 'behind this barracks is my observatory. I lie there evenings, sometimes for a whole hour, listening to the noise of the cannon which comes over from our country, and then I see Flanders before me and I hear the joyous bim-bom-bam of our bells.'

"Yes, immediately he introduced the bells into his story, and I felt and understood his doing it, because it seemed so natural.

"When the bell tower of Mannekensvere fell to pieces under the violence of the war, the villagers carried off the fragments of the bell with them, in their flight, as if they were relics.

"And how often the bells crop up in the language of the people.

" 'That will take you to the last bell,' says the West Flanders woman when somebody makes life unbearable for her. 'The last bell is the one that sounds at the end and announces to the village that a soul has departed.

" 'Quick, into the house with you, boys; the dinner bell is ringing,' they say to boys who are fooling around and are in danger of making themselves late for dinner.

"This comes from the dinner bell (noenekloke), which, in many villages, even now rings at the noon hour.

"On Good Friday the bells are silent; they have gone, it is said, to Rome to get Easter eggs for the children; and so on Holy Saturday the children of the people come out to listen and watch, and stand at the foot of the bell towers waiting for the first sound of the bronze voices. For, after the day of mourning, the bells begin again on the eve of Easter. And at the first note the boys and girls run away to their homes to hunt for eggs.

"The bells ring to usher in a holiday, or for the procession and the pilgrimage. They ring in Christmas Eve, and Christmas Day, and Easter, Pentecost, or All Saints' Day; they mark the division of the old year from the new.

"And now, the powerful state which, by its war, has violated Belgium, takes away the bells. But, after all, why not? We may expect everything from those who, on the 4th of August, 1914, invaded our territory, and marked their route by fire, ruins, tears, and blood."

Selling Children.

In selling their children, the Japanese in the famine stricken districts have been following a custom that has not always been unknown in Europe. In the year 1017 King Canut found it necessary to issue an edict forbidding English parents to sell their children to the Irish as slaves, in accordance with their habit. In ancient Egypt the unwanted child had only to be exposed on the banks of the Nile to be adopted and protected by the state.—Chicago News.

PRACTICAL HEALTH HINT.

Coughing.

"Constant coughing," says a doctor, "is precisely like scratching a wound on the outside of the body. So long as it is done the wound will not heal. Let a person when tempted to cough draw a long breath and hold it until it warms and soothes every air cell and some benefit will soon be received from this process. The nitrogen which is thus refined acts as an anodyne to the mucous membrane, allaying the desire to cough and giving the throat and lungs a chance to heal. At the same time a suitable cough medicine will aid Nature in her effort to recuperate."

MOVING PICTURE PLAYS.

The Man Who Perfected Them and What the Future Promises.

C. Francis Jenkins of Washington, who was awarded the Elliott Cresson gold medal in 1895 for the successful method of projecting motion pictures on a large canvas, has been given new honors for his work in the "movie" line. The Franklin institute of Philadelphia has now awarded him the John Scott medal for his recent achievements in moving pictures.

Here is a man unknown to the millions for whom his original research has made possible the thousands of theaters in which photo plays are produced. Much of his early experimental apparatus has been acquired by the National museum, Washington, and is now shown in the graphic arts section.

Other scientific minds are bent to the further perfection of the movies, and a recent declaration by a technical writer would lead us to look forward to the day when the projected scene will not only appear real, with the apparent actuality of color depth and distance, but the actors will have body and what looks like substance. In fact, they will appear to be real. Add to such a consummation the perfected talking attachment, which we have been led to expect, and we will have convincing shadows elbowing the flesh and blood actors of the "legitimate" stage.—San Francisco Chronicle.

BLOWING HOT AND COLD.

A Machine That Makes Ice and Heat at the Same Time.

A machine that makes heat at one end and cold at the other, so that it can be used for heating a house and making ice at the same time—to blow hot and cold, like the man in Aesop's fables—has now been perfected and is coming into practical use abroad. All it needs to do its work is power of some kind. It will take electricity, for instance, for its power and turn the electricity into heat and cold.

It is really a refrigerating machine that turns out heat as a byproduct. Every icemaking machine makes a great deal of heat, which is wasted almost completely. In fact, the more completely the heat is wasted from an ordinary icemaking machine the more ice it will make.

The new double action machine takes out of the icemaking part every bit of heat it possibly can, and then this heat, in the form of hot water, is sent round the building as a hot water heating system. Every part of the machine juggles the heat and the cold round so that they may be used to the best advantage.

For instance, in the icemaking part a certain amount of cold is delivered to the freezing apparatus and a certain amount of cold is used up in the works for "precooling," and the machine delivers the most intense cold to the freezing apparatus and thriftily uses the milder degree of cold for precooling purposes.—Saturday Evening Post.

Monument to "the Hour."

In March, 1911, there was an international standardization of the hour and Paris was chosen as the "centre horaire mondial." Now the Eiffel tower at regular intervals sends out by means of its wireless installation powerful time signals that are carried through the ether into various parts of the world. Recently a proposal was made to the Paris academy of science to commemorate the above occurrence by a monument to "the hour." The proposal was received kindly and a special committee appointed to solve the problem of ways and means. The scheme is to place the monument at Villers-sur-Mer, where the Greenwich meridian cuts France.

WESTERN CROP DAMAGE REPORTS GREATLY MAGNIFIED

Want 10,000 Harvesters at Once.

Reports previously published regarding the damage by frost to the crops in Saskatchewan, were unduly pessimistic, frequent showers and favorable weather have changed the outlook and it is apparent that the great Province of Saskatchewan will have a normal crop. This is evidenced by the western demands for Farm Laborers, as not less than 10,000 are required immediately for harvesting.

Every young man and those more mature, in every community in Ontario, including our own, should get away, and should make this a great opportunity to serve the country in a practical way, and at the same time be of invaluable benefit to himself. It means an interesting, long distance journey at low fares, and a chance to see and study the immense new country served by the Canadian Northern —the People's Road.

Final excursions by CanadianNorthern trains leaving Toronto 10 p.m., on Aug. 28th, 30th, September 4th and 11th. Harvesters from outside points to use connecting trains to Toronto

SAVINGS BANK DEPOSITS.

How the Interest Even on Small Sums Swells the Accounts.

A savings bank in Evanston has advertised that it will place $1 to the credit of every baby born in that city, and it advises the parents of the children to deposit on each birthday of the child as many dollars as the youngster is years old, then to let the money remain in the bank, drawing interest, until the child reaches twenty-one.

If parents did that the total sum deposited to the credit of the child upon its twenty-first birthday, including $21 for that birthday, would be $231, or an average of $11 a year. But the bank account on that twenty first birthday would show a much larger sum—$284.59, in fact, computed at the savings bank rate of interest, 3 per cent. That is, the sum of $53.59 will have been paid in interest, compounded. The amount which would accrue at simple interest would be $46.20, or more than twice the amount deposited on the twenty-first year, while the actual interest received would be two and a half times the last deposit.

Besides, the interest on interest—that is, the excess produced by compounding—would amount to $7.39, or more than one-third of the final and largest deposit, and would be about 60 per cent of the average yearly deposit of $11. Thus is well shown how money breeds from itself, and there is little doubt that parents able to make such deposits would afford to their children a remarkable illustration of the value of thrift and its influence in life, besides giving each youngster a substantial sum with little hardship to the depositor.—Chicago Inter Ocean.

CANADIAN PRISONERS NUMBER 20,373

SWEEPING ADVANCES BY BRITISH AND FRENCH

General Haig's Men Make Important Gains in Flanders and on the Somme Battlefield, While French Troops South Are Advancing Everywhere—Allies Are Closing in on Cambrai, St. Quentin, La Fere and Laon—British Captured Harcourt, Soiel-Le-Grand and Metz-En-Coutul and French Are Three Miles East of Ham.

VICTORIOUS ADVANCE IS CONTINUED

(Canadian Press Despatch.)

LONDON (Official), September 7.—British troops advancing last night on the front to the southeast and northeast of Peronne captured the towns of Hancourt, Sorel-Le-Grand and Metz-En-Coutur.

Fighting their way towards the left flank of German positions along Canal Du Nord from Havrincourt northward the British penetrated the western part of Havrincourt Wood taking prisoners as they progressed.

In Flanders the British are pushing towards Messines, near the southern end of Messines Ridge, and advanced their lines last night a short distance in the direction of that town.

The text of the statement reads. Our troops made further progress yesterday evening and last night east and northeast of Peronne and have taken Hancourt, Sorel-Le-Grand and Metz-En-Coutur. North of the latter village we penetrated to the western portions of Havrincourt Wood. We have taken a number of prisoners.

North of the Labassee Canal patrols gained ground in the German positions about Canteleux and Vieluns. Further north we carried out a successful minor operation yesterday evening between Hill 63 and Wulverghem as a result of which we captured 50 prisoners and advanced our line a short distance in the direction of Messines.

THE FRENCH STATEMENT.

PARIS (Official), September 7.—On the front between the Somme and the Oise the French continued to press forward last night overcoming the resistance of the German rear-guards. Pushing east of Ham French troops have occupied the towns of Dury and Ollez, more than three miles beyond Ham. Tergnier, three miles west of LaFere has been captured by French troops.

North of the Ailette the French have made further advance, winning the lower forest of Coucy. North of the Vesle, where American troops have been advancing there is no cha nge in the situation.

Arrangements for the Evangelistic Campaign Progress

Meetings of the sub-committees and of the general executive committee which are in charge of the preparations for the months evangelistic campaign to be conducted in Peterborough by Rev. I. E. Honeywell, starting Sunday, September 29, were held last evening in the Reid Street Sunday School Hall, at which the preliminary arrangements were well advanced. Meetings of the sub-committees lasted until nearly 9 o'clock, after which the general executive met and received the reports of the sub-committees.

It was decided to hold this series of meetings in the Brock Street Rink, this being the largest building available for the purpose. The sub-committee in charge of this work is arranging for seating, heating and lighting accommodation, and will provide for the services of a large choir.

The musical committee, under the chairmanship of Mr. F. E. Kerr, reported that arrangements were being made for a union choir, and that volunteers will be asked for from among the choirs and members of the congregations of the various city churches. A leader of the song services will accompany Rev. Mr. Honeywell, and will largely direct the services while the campaign is in progress.

Chief Thompson reported on behalf of the ushering committee that arrangements will be made in good time to have this work looked after thoroughly. Rev. Mr. Doner, who is in charge of the work of the spiritual preparation committee, reported in reference to the cottage prayer meetings. These meetings are now well under way, and as it is realized that the success of the campaign will depend upon the earnest prayers of the Christian people of Peterborough, every effort will be made to emphasize the importance of these meetings and of individual and private prayer. People who are willing to open their homes for these meetings or to assist in the services are invited to report to their pastors or to Rev. Mr. Doner.

The executive committee approved of Rev. Mr. Honeywell bringing a party of three with him in order that meetings may be conducted in connection with a number of the factories and business places of the city. One of the party will be a woman trained in religious work of this kind, whose assistance, it is believed, will be of great value in connection with the campaign.

The executive decided to recommend to the governing bodies of the different churches that on the evening of the opening Sunday the various church services should be dispensed with in order that the largest possible number of people may attend the opening Sunday night service of the campaign.

Messrs. W. R. Breyfogle, Wm. Madill, and S. R. Armstrong were appointed an entertainment committee to look after the accommodation and entertainment of Rev. Mr. Honeywell and his party.

The meetings last evening were well attended, and an earnest desire was evident that the campaign will be productive of much good, through leading people, who, in times such as these, may be forgetful of spiritual matters to realize that it is as necessary now as it ever has been that people shall decide for or against Christ.

An Opportuuity That Should Not be Missed

A Decided Advantage That is Offered to Only 200 More Citizens

Nowadays it is made possible to hear a number of the highest class artists in the continent by a series of entertainments being arranged for under some auspices. The Conservatory of Music has undertaken to give to Peterborough during the concert season a series of entertainments of undoubted merit, and more subscribers will have the privilege of subscribing to the "Redpath Lyceum Series" of concerts and lectures, to which already 200 public-spirited and art-loving citizens have subscribed and only 200 more are needed to make possible for Peterborough to hear one of the greatest treats of its history.

After this the subscription list will be withdrawn as a block of seats will be reserved free of charge for the advanced pupils of the Conservatory.

The concerts will be held November 4th, December 9th, February 13th, March 19th, April 18th, and among the artists will be Judge Alden of Massachusetts, Low Beauchamp, Humorus Philosopher (Lectuer's), Antonia Sala, Court 'cellist to the King of Spain, and decorated by King Alfonso for his art and his company. The Fairchild Quartette, a famous family of artists, including a contralto, soprano, pianist, violinist and reader.

There will also be a light opera company composed of men and women who have successfully toured with such companies as the "Savage" and Aborn Co.

These artists will give (in costume) excerpts from various operas such as the "Mikado," "Madame Butterfly," and "Robin Hood." These are only a few of the attractions of this very fine series. No such delightful course has ever been held in Peterborough.

One book of tickets for course, $2 75.

Two books of tickets for course, $5.00.

Names of subscribers may be given to the teachers on the staff or by telephoning the Conservatory, 355.

LOCAL SOLDIER HIT ON FIRST DAY IN FIELD

Such Was the Experience of Pte. T. E. Chapman, Who Was Wounded in the Successful Advance of Canadians on Amiens Front Last Month.

IS NOW IN BLIGHTY

Mrs. Stanley, 164 Charlotte street, whose husband, Sergt. Albert Stanley, was yesterday reported wounded, has received the following most interesting letter from her brother, Pte. Tommy Chapman, who went overseas last spring and was wounded several weeks ago.

Coshan, Sunday, August 18.

I guess you have been notified by this time that I have been wounded, but don't worry because I am doing fine and dandy. I am in an Imperial hospital and we have a good time. Talk about eats—ham and eggs are nothing around here.

I was wounded last Friday night about 5:30 o'clock, and I have got hit in the right knee, so that I will be in hospital for a couple of months.

First Day In Field.

It happened to be my first day in the field when I got hit. The first thing that I was appointed to was to act as a scout—that is I had to go right ahead of the battalion—to look out for snipers or anything. It only lasted about an hour and then I was sent back to my company. We advanced fine on that day. It was all open fighting. There were no trenches or anything and believe me, after having two narrow escapes before, once having been covered with dirt I was lucky to get away with what I did.

After I was wounded the stretcher bearers dressed it temporarily and then I got a stick and started back to the dressing station where it was dressed properly. I had to walk about a mile. After it was dressed we waited for a van to carry us back further where we had to lie on a blanket out in the open all night because they could not get any ambulances that night. We did not get any sleep because there was artillery firing right there. The next morning we were moved to another dressing station, where we were inoculated. From there I went to an hospital where I was operated on and the piece of shell taken from my leg. I was there two days when I was marked for Blighty, and believe me, I was overjoyed.

Hun Aviator Foiled.

I forgot to tell you that on my way to the hospital there was a Hun aviator flew over us and tried to shell us, but he was brought down at last without doing any harm to us. After I was marked for England they fixed me up and I waited patiently for them to come and fetch me. At last they came and put me on a train, and after a four-hour journey I was transferred to an hospital ship. They treated us fine. We had a gramaphone going, and they gave us a box each containing a pipe, packet of tobacco, a box of matches and two boxes of cigarettes, and we appreciated them too.

We had another very narrow escape that night. We were fired at by two submarines, but they were not successful in hitting us. So here I am safe and sound and feeling like a duke in dear old Blighty.

I have the piece of shell that came out of my leg, and I have also got a German bullet, and three coins and some of his cigarettes, which I must say taste rotten."

RESISTANCE STIFFENING

Enemy is Fighting Hard to Hold the the Americans and French Between the Vesle and the Aisne Rivers.

GUN FIRE INCREASES

(Special to The Examiner.)

(By Fred S. Ferguson.)

WITH THE AMERICANS ON THE AISNE Sept. 7.—Heavy smoke lining the plateau between the Vesle and the Aisne, and increasing noise of guns to-day gave events of stiffening the German resistance. The enemy is fighting hard at certain spots, especially along the right of the line where the Americans have not yet reached the river.

Overcoming the Boche attempts to make a stand the Americans and French are pushing on toward the Aisne. A dozen villages are now in our hands, including Fismette, Bazoches, Bastieux, Vauxcere, Blanzy, Longueval, Revillon, Merval, Serval, Barbonval, Villers-En-Prayeres and Clennes. After the Americans took these towns they pushed on. In each case the enemy machine-gun squads attempted to stop our troops, but these were cleaned up by infantry with the artillery closely following to shell any troublesome strongholds the Germans might leave behind.

A Heavy Barrage.

A heavy American barrage was laid down east of Clennes Friday afternoon, and the Yankees attacked to speed up the German withdrawal. Apparently the enemy is getting his artillery established along the Hindenburg line, as the shelf fire has materially increased. Strong machine-gun nests also guard the line of the canal which cuts across the town between the Aisne and the Vesle along which the American advance elements are pushing the foe.

German observation balloons now have been pulled back four miles beyond the Aisne, and all artillery firing despite its increased intensity comes from a greater distance back.

Reports from the French and American right (towards Fismes) say that all Prussians have been cleared from south of the Vesle in that immediate region.

Observers' Good Work.

The aerial observation squadron was cited by the American corps commander for brilliant work in the present operations. The observers constantly risking their lives, flew over the German lines and carried back messages regarding the foe's movements. The observation planes were frequently attacked by German fighting planes.

The prisoners taken so far are all divisions which have been warring Pershing's troops for some time, including the fourth division of Prussian Guards.

Prisoners declared the combat strength of their companies had been reduced to fifty rifles and six machine guns. Replacements are being made from the younger elements in the new drafts.

Astride the height overlooking the plateau between the Vesle and the Aisne everything in sight gave evidence of increasing German resistance. Constant lines of smoke marked the path of shells breaking on the plateau sending up vast columns of black vapors from high explosives, while shrapnel above made strings of puffy white balls in the sky. Towns which a month ago were centres of military activities are now deserted by the fighters and the civilians are returning to them.

ENEMY IN TIGHT BOX

Both Ends of Hindenburg's Line Are Growing Weary and Ludendorff is in a Quandry to Meet the Situation.

MUST RETREAT AGAIN

(Special to the Examiner.)

Paris, September 7. — With the advance of the Americans and the French toward Lafere and the St. Gobain hills, Laon, and the positions north of the Aisne, in the very centre of the Geramn defence system, from the sea to Verdun, are imperilled.

Conservative military critics now mention the possibility of Hindenburg being pointed out of his famous line into a new one just inside the French frontier, before the winter begins. It is too early, however, to throw our hands in the air. Unless all signs fail, an immense amount of desperate fighting must come before Germany is beaten.

Nevertheless, to-day Ludendorff is in a tight box. Not only are Cambrai and Douai threatened by the British, who are at the very gates, but the Crown Prince is facing the possibility of retreating further than the positions along the Chemin-Des-Dames. Humbert and Mangin have fought their way into the St. Gobain hills, and unless soon stopped, they must inevitably cause a wide retirement at this place.

Likewise the French are pushing on eastward in the region of Vauxaillon and Pinon toward the western end of Chemin-Des-Dames, towards which the Crown Prince is hurrying, in the hope of finding security there.

A huge deception may await him for with the allied guns covering the positions it is obvious he must continue to retreat northward.

As a similar situation already prevails in the region of Cambrai and Douai, Ludendorff is face to face with a quandary.

Make Their Escape Out Of Russia

Special to The Examiner:

STOCKHOLM, Sept. 7.— Escaping from the Bolsheviki, 121 Americans and 72 Italians, including their legations ,have arrived in Sweden from Russia. The Finnish government refused the demand of the Bolsheviki that they be returned.

Premier Lenine is dead, the refugees asserted, all Bolsheviki denials to the contrary.

ARSENIC CAUSED DEATH OF WOODSTOCK WOMAN

CORP. HERBERT R. MOORE,

Son of Mrs. James Moore, 297 Pearl avenue. He was wounded in the recent Canadian sweep, receiving a gunshot wound in the thigh. Previously he was ill with trench fever.

Jury Concluded That Florence Edwards Did Not Commit Suicide —Had Money in Bank From Father's Estate.

WILL BE PROBED

WOODSTOCK, Ont., Sept. 6.—"I never did anything wrong in my life, and I am sure they can't find out anything that is wrong. There never was any person in this house. I never saw arsenic."

Careworn and troubled by rumours circulating here, Mrs. George Edwards, in her home overlooking the campus of Woodstock College, today, to a reporter, pleaded her total ignorance of the cause of the death of her 27-year-old daughter, Flo, who succumbed on July 23 to arsenic poisoning. To the jury, which deliberated upon the evidence until after two o'clock in the morning, it was clear that the girl died from arsenic. To their verdict they attached a record of their belief that she did not commit suicide. Crown Attorney Ball and Chief of Police Moore are convinced that Woodstock has a murder mystery to unravel.

EXPECT PROVINCIAL SLEUTH.

Mrs. Edwards deplores the suspicions of foul play. Her daughter, Bella, an elder sister of Flo, entertains like views. Mrs. Edwards feels that nothing can be gained by a further probe. Her daughter, on the other hand, stated that she purposes to take under advisement with her brother, who lives on the old family homestead in East Zorra, an appeal to the Provincial police to send some competent investigator. But, whether they act or not, Crown Attorney Ball will. The evidence taken at the inquest will be taken to Toronto for perusal by Provincial Chief Rogers. Expectations are that Provincial Inspector Miller will be here within a few days.

HAD MONEY IN BANK.

At the inquest pointed questions were asked concerning the dead girl's bank account. She received $700 from the estate of her father upon attaining her majority, but only $311 rested to her credit when her bank book was found.

Mrs. Edwards, a little lady of perhaps 65 years, said she never went out much, and Bella stayed at home with her. Flo frequently went out with friends.

"There never was any strife in the house," said Mrs. Edwards. She was distressed visibly at discussion of the possibility of her daughter having been the victim of a crime. "I'm innocent, anyway," she said. "Flo was my best friend." Suddenly rising she retired to the kitchen, leaving he reporter to find his way out alone.

UNCONSCIOUS BEFORE DEATH.

On the morning of Miss Edwards' death, her sister had gone to work as usual at about 8 o'clock. She re-

LEAKAGE IN THE ASSESSMENT ACT OF INCOME TAXES

Persons Who Do Not Own Property May Live Here Nearly Two Years Before Receiving Tax Bill—Assessors Want a Change.

HELD A CONVENTION

At the recent convention of the Ontario Municipal Association the assessors held for the first time an evening meeting by themselves at which many questions were introduced pertaining particularly to their duties and the conditions under which they work. This is a new departure, and it is believed that it will soon become an important feature of the annual meetings of the Association. Mr. W. J. Henry, Peterborough's assessor, was present and reported a decidedly profitable session.

One subject dealt with was the necessity of amending the assessment act to provide for the collection of income tax, from persons who do not own property, as soon as possible after the assessment roll has been completed. Peterborough has shared the loss that is general throughout the province resulting from the present system by which all taxes are paid in the year following the making of the assessment.

The assessor completes his roll, for example this summer, and it becomes the basis of next year's taxes. To property taxes are inevitable, but the transient citizen may remain nearly two years in this city before receiving his tax sheet for income, and he may anticipate it by leaving the city. The recommendation was made, to be submitted to the Legislature, that the assessment act be changed to obviate the present losses from this source by demanding the payment of the income tax of these residents soon after their assessment has been determined. It is understood that if at a later date the rate struck should be less a refund would be made, and, if higher, the person charged should pay the additional amount when the other taxes are paid.

Mr. Henry is authority for the statement that considerable money is lost to this city by the present assessment law.

THE WEATHER

Frost glistening on the grass and other evidences of Jack Frost's proximity, were to be seen this morning. The lowest the thermometer went last night was 39 degrees, and no damage was done; however if the sky had not been overcast there might be a different story to tell this morning.—W.P.

"SLACKER" TREATIES.

The announcement from Ottawa that "slacker" treaties between Canada and the French, Belgian and Italian governments such as is now in force with the United are being arranged, will be received with satisfaction throughout the country. It is said that negotiations are under way and that a satisfactory conclusion can be expected in the near future.

The signing of such treaties would solve the problem of the friendly alien in Canada. There have been many complaints that while Canadian and British-born residents of Canada were being drafted to fight for the allied cause, husky young aliens from countries who are allied with Great Britain, were immune from the draft because they were not British subjects. While under the law of his native country he would be regarded as a deserter and liable to be shot if he returned home, the allied alien was perfectly safe, not only as regards the laws of his own country, but under the provisions of the Military Service Act as well.

With a treaty similar to that in force between Great Britain, Canada and the United tSates, this anomalous condition of affairs would be done away with and these aliens would either have to serve in the army of their native land or they could be drafted into the Canadian Expeditionary Force.

MUST CURB EXTRAVAGANCE.

The address of Mr. W. J. Taylor, of the Canadian Press Association, at the Toronto Exhibition on the necessity of a development of a spirit of thrift and saving in Canada is not the only sign of a growing uneasiness among many people as to the serious nature of the present era of extravagance throughout the Dominion. The Methodist Board of Social Service and Evangelism, at its annual meeting in Toronto, has shown its appreciation of the situation by urging upon the Government the taxing of all luxuries to the utmost—a step that might have a considerable effect in checking the extravagance that exists.

Many people carried away by earnings they never dreamed of before the war are spending their income recklessly, with no thoughts of the future. If Canada is to carry on the war to the end, the wasteful habits that have become all too common must be done away with.

One phase of this reckless extravagance is touched upon by the Toronto Saturday Night, and the following does not lose in interest by reason of the fact that a local incident furnishes the basis for the article:

Whither are we going? If it costs a young working woman $725 per annum for her board and her dress, where is she and the rest of us drifting? These figures were submitted as evidence in arbitration proceedings concerning a dispute between the Canadian General Electric Company and its female employees, and, therefore, in a manner, becomes an official document. Aside from the sum of $312, which is set aside for room and board, at the rate of $6 per week, which is certainly reasonable enough in these days, the entire $725, with a few and notably small exceptions, goes for adornment of one sort or another. This young woman with the $725 yearly income from her endeavours, pays $6 per week for her board and $7 per week for her clothes, the remaining dollar of her $14 weekly stipend being represented by church expenses, car tickets, sick benefits, stationery, stamps and a daily paper. There is nothing for a holiday, nothing for candy, chewing gum, and all the airy nothings that are commonly attributed as necessary to the fair sex.

The fact that our mother dressed the whole kit of us, including herself and the old man, on a sum probably much less than that placed in this fair one's estimate has nothing to do with the case. That was then. This is now. Mother did not buy three pair of shoes at an average of $9 per pair, nor did she pay $10 for a sweater coat for sister or herself. Indeed, in her day I doubt if women wore sweaters, certainly not silk ones. The expenditure for hats for the year is set down at $38. How many "lids" this represents I am, of course, unable to say, but it looks like a lot, compared to man's expenditure of, say, $6 or $8 per annum. For outer adornment in the way of suits, skirts, waists, gloves, etc., the sum of $112 is set aside. This does not seem out of the way in comparison with $38 for hats and $27 for boots. But at the same time there are a heap of women who spend less and still look respectable, if not fashionable.

This problem of women's dress is one that only women can solve, and that by a resort to common sense. That working girls, or anybody else for that matter, should expend fifty per cent. of their incomes for adornment is, of course, indefensible, but how are they to be cured of their folly? So long as they allow the modiste to be their master, and not their servant, this extravagance will continue. So long as they are led away by the notion that garments must be of a new fashion, and possibly of a new material, every few months, these people will go on working for the benefit of the dressmaker, the dress designer, the millimers and shoemaker. Men have done better. Their clothes for the most part are standardized. The fedora bought three years ago looks just like the one purchased yesterday. Most men adopt a certain type of shoe and wear it year after year. To the passing fads in dress he pays no attention. He leaves that to the boy in his 'teens. He is content to have his clothes made on the same model year after year. The youth follows what men's fashions there are. The man seldom. The well dressed man, never.

EDITORIAL NOTES.

Remember the Lusitania.

The Navy League campaign goes over the top on Monday morning.

Mere giving cannot settle our debt to the Mercantile Marine, but it will help. Let your donation be a generous one.

Peterborough has not failed in any patriotic campaign, and never has there been one with any more worthy object than the Navy League canvass.

"We will continue to pursue the enemy implacably," says General Foch, and the German rear-guards are in a position to know that he means what he says.

SIR WILFRID'S TRIBUTE.

In enclosing a subscription to the Sailors' Week Campaign Fund, Sir Wilfrid Laurier has paid a tribute to the bravery of the men of the mercantile Marine that expresses in a few words our deep debt to these heroes. Says Sir Wilfrid:

"With all my heart I approve and commend the good work in which you are now engaged. This war has produced, and is daily producing, heroes of whom we are justly proud, on the battlefield.

"But, in my opinion, nothing in the way of heroism and sacrifice on the battlefield is superior, if indeed equal, to the heroism and sacrifice of those men of the mercantile marine, who, week after week, and day after day, have gone to sea unarmed and unprotected, almost a certain death, in order to do their share to win the war.

"Their efforts have never yet been sufficiently appreciated either by the State or the citizens. An attempt is at last made in their behalf, and great as your success may be, it will still fall short, I fear, of what it ought to be.

Peterborough's campaign for the Navy League begins on Monday The collectors should receive an enthusiastic and hearty welcome from the citizens. It is the first chance Peterborough has had to help the Navy and the opportunity should not be neglected. $15,000 is the city's objective —the city council has started the ball rolling with a $2,000 grant—and the mark should be reached and passed before the campaign comes to an end on Wednesday.

Our debt to the Navy and the Mercantile Marine is an enormous one—let us write at least some of it off next week.

Special to The Examiner:

AMSTERDAM, Sept. 7. — On the Belgian-Dutch front German members of the Landstrum Sappers Corps today are building a new line of defence. It is believed the German commanders propose to make this conform to the Meuse line in the event that a retreat to it is necessary before winter.

The Safeguarding of Peterboro's Milk Supply

The safeguarding of a municipal milk supply is as important, if not more so, than the safeguarding of the water supply.

A municipality would be more justified in enforcing the pasteurization of all milk than they would be in requiring the filtration or chlorination of their contaminated waters.

While we may feel sorry for those who are not able to keep pace with the advances of sanitary science, yet our sympathy cannot be permitted to warp our judgments in the efficient safeguarding of the public health.

There is only one method by which the dangers of the various communicable diseases can be eliminated from our milk supply—that is—

Scientific Pasteurization

A milk pasteurized at twelve cents a quart has the highest possible public value, because of its Safety, Decency and Price.

The Best Milk to Buy is Pasteurized Milk

Every bottle of milk sold or delivered by The Peterboro Milk Products Ltd.

Is not only PASTEURIZED, but CLARIFIED as well, safeguarding its patrons from all Raw Milk dangers. But many of our citizens do not appear to realize the value of such health protection. Remove the element of chance and let us start your Milk Supply, and don't procrastinate any onger.

PETERBORO SIXTY YEARS AGO

Altogether Peterboro possesses all the elements of an important manufacturing town. The immense water power supplied by the Otonabee River and the large timber districts in the rear of the town offer facilities for manufacturing such as are possessed by few communities in the province. With the railway facilities now possessed by the town, the easy method of ingress and egress; with the improvements that are going on in the interior country in the rear of us, the rapid settlement of that hitherto unsurveyed and almost unexplored country, and the improvements lately made in the navigation of the back waters—the prospects of the town are flattering in the extreme.

GHETTE SODA BOY RIDES CZAR'S AUTO

Rode High With the Tide of Revolution in Russia.

(By Joseph Shaplen—United Press Staff Correspondent).

NEW YORK, Sept. 7.—He was a Bolshevik commissary and his name was Goldstein.

Fate played a grim joke on Nicholas Romanoff when it deprived him of his job and substituted in his place innumerable little Czars named Goldstein or something like it. Apparently fate had in mind some of those Jewish pogroms of which Nick was such a devoted patron. Be it as it may, the aforementioned Goldstein was one of Lenine's chief lieutenants and a real power in Petrograd. His main job was to rule it high-handedly over the entire Petrograd press, and many a poor editor went to jail or suffered heavy fine at the word of this guardian of the Bolshevik censorship.

I learned about Goldstein when I first arrived in Petrograd. I was told he was a terrible individual and in addition to his job of watching all local editors also kept an eye on the despatches of foreign correspondents.

At last my chance came. I had the good fortune of gazing upon his face. It was sterness itself. He wore a warm Russian "tojourka," high boots and tall, fur soldier's hat. Danton, Robespierre, Marat — how insignificant they were in comparison with Goldstein. He came rushing down the steps of Smolny, portfolio in hand, at break-neck speed, toward an elaborately furnished automobile, flanked on both sides by heavy guns and red guards standing almost at attention. I came up closer. He looked at me. He offered me his hand. I recognized him at once. It was my old friend Goldstein, who used to draw soda at a soda fountain in New York's East Side.

"Step in," he said, pointing to the machine. "I am going to the Foreign Office and can drop you at your hotel."

On the road he told me all about himself.

"Kerensky and Chernoff are after me," he said proudly. "They vowed to get me first if they ever have the chance." I noticed that his East Side English was still good.

"By the way," he added, "this machine used to be the Czar's own." There was a smile of satisfaction on his face. Shades of Ivan the Terrible! Goldstein riding in the Czar's machine. I could hardly keep from laughing, and had quite a job to control the muscles of my face until we reached my hotel. Goldstein was still talking. He was finishing his fifth speech on the social revolution.

"And say," he asked, as I was bidding him good-bye, "how can a feller get back to America?"

"Hock the Czar's machine," I answered.

Oh, Woe! "Work or Fight" Order Hits Mr. Santa Claus

WASHINGTON, D. C., Sept 6. — Raising the ban originally placed on Christmas buying, the Council of National Defence has entered into an agreement with representatives of leading industries and retail concerns by which the giving of useful gifts will be permitted. Toys are not barred, but their manufacture will be restricted. Fancy articles are blacklisted.

The business interests concerned have agreed that the working force employed by them by reason of the holiday business will not be greater than the force employed normally.

They also agreed to assist the council in restricting purchases to useful articles. Customers will be urged to carry home their own packages and the business houses agree to announce the agreement entered into in their advertisements.

It was found that the manufacture of goods for the coming holiday season virtually had been completed, the transportation of goods largely accomplished and that much of the material used for Christmas purchases, especially toys, is the waste material derived from prior process of manufacture.

FORMATION OF RAILWAY BOARD NOT EASY TASK

OTTAWA, Ont. Sept. 6.—The appointment of the new Canadian Railway board of directors and the definition and allocation of its functions is a task upon which cabinet has been engaged almost continually since premier's return and one which apparently is fraught with considerable difficulty. Not only is the question of personnel of the board which the government desires shall be of the highest and most efficient standard a matter of difficulty to decide upon but the fixing of powers of organization and its return to parliament brings further problems.

The only link between the organization and goverment is to be one official of the government and that official, it is stated is not to be a member of cabinet. Now it is a matter of general knowledge that Hon. Frank Cochrane, former Minister of Railways and now without portfolio in the cabinet has and does inspire for position or for a position on the board. The general impression, however, appears to be that his chances are slim.

The consensus of opinion appears to be that Mr. D. B. Hanna, vice-President on the Canadian Northern Railway, will be chairman, but thereafter there is a difficutly. The fact that Grand Trunk problem has not yet been solved adds to that difficulty. Whether the board shall consist of railway men or business men is another question.

It would appear that Dept. of Railways and Canals which has hitherto had control of government railways bids fair on creation of new board to deteriorate into a very unimportant department indeed.

FOLLOWING UP RETREATING FOE

(Special to The Examiner.)
(By Fred S. Ferguson.)

WITH THE AMERICANS ON THE AISNE, Sept. 6. — (11 a.m.) — More than half a dozen villages on the Vesle and the Aisne are now in American hands. Our troops are still following up the German withdrawal.

The main American line to-day was approaching the Canal beyond Dhutzel, Longuval and Revillon, and thence moving up in a northeasterly direction. The Germans are reported holding positions on the Canal in considerable rear-guard strength, and sharp fighting is in progress at this place where the enemy is expected to exert a desperate effort to slow up the Allied pursuit. Continued progress of the French tenth army north of Soissons and penetrating of the Coucy Forest is likely to have a marked effect on the German plans to make a permanent stand north of the Aisne.

The American right which has not yet reached the river continues to meet opposition only from machine-gun squads aside from the usual shell fire.

HARD TO BELIEVE

AMSTERDAM, Sept. 5.—Apparently it has not been possible to hide from the German people the bitter disappointment among the German military authorities over the evacuation of Kemmel, one of the strategic strongholds south-west of Ypres. The Lokal Anzieger's military correspondent says the evacuation was effected "with a heavy heart," and adds that the sole comfort surrounding the withdrawal was that it was voluntary and that it served a tactical purpose affecting the whole army on the west front, "which does not hesitate at sacrificing a mere place when a purpose is to be attained."

More outspoken is Koester, military writer in the Berlin Vorwaerts, who is completely at a loss to understand why "the proud Kemmel bastion" was surrendered. This writer says the future alone will tell what purpose this manoeuvre served.

He concludes, however, from the fact that two American divisions had been seen on that part of the front that some enemy coup had been planned which now had been cleverly frustrated without casualties.

100 BARRELS OF EGGS DUMPED AS FERTILIZER

London Labour Men Are Up in Arms About Alleged Waste.

LONDON, Ont., Sept. 5.—Delegates from the Trades and Labour Council early to-day paid a surprise visit to a farm at the corner of Egerton street, city, and 1st Concession of Westminster Township, to investigate a story that 20,000 dozen eggs which had gone bad had been taken to this farm for use as fertilizer. On arrival, they declare, they found the story to be true, at least in part, although the aroma forbade them counting the eggs.

No less than 100 barrels of bad eggs had been dumped on the farm since harvest was over, and it is reported that there are many more ready to be taken. It was stated at the farm that the eggs all came from local cold storage plants, and labour men declare they have been held in order to keep up prices.

The delegation reported to Mayor C. R. Somerville, who sent out Dr. Downham, M.O.H., and J. W. McCallum, Food Inspector, to investigate. Immediate action is demanded if the officials' report confirms that of the labour men.

MUNITION WORKERS TO HAVE NEW VILLAGE

(By United Press.)

HOPEWELL, VA., Aug. 30.—Working people are too valuable to be housed uncomfortably these days, so the DuPont explosives interests are preparing to spend $3,000,000 on construction of a new village in Hopewell.

This is an explosive town, and has literally sprung up out of the war. The DuPonts have immense explosives plants here, and already have spent millions on houses, clubs, and welfare projects, on the theory that what ever makes for the comfort of the employes is for the welfare of the explosives enterprise.

The new model village is to be called Southwest B village. Other villages composing Hopewell are similarly identified by letters and points of the compass. Southwest B will contain 700 new houses, ready for occupancy this year. The DuPont company has taken over 150 acres of land for the project, and its landscape architects are laying out parks and streets.

There will be a village swimming pool, a community club, commissary, and girls' dormitories for the rapidly increasing army of girl workers in the munitions factories.

This fall's building program of the Du Ponts also includes a church, lodge hall, bandstand, Y.M.C.A. addition, and girls' dormitories for Davisville, the negro village within the gates of the great DuPont plant.

SAVE THE CHILDREN

Mothers who keep a box of Baby's Own Tablets in the house may feel that the lives of their little ones are reasonably safe during the hot weather. Stomach troubles, cholera infantum and diarrhoea carry off thousands of little ones every summer. In most cases because the mother does not have a safe medicine at hand to give promptly. Baby's Own Tablets cure these troubles, or if given occasionally to the well child will prevent their coming on. The Tablets are guaranteed by a government analyst to be absolutely harmless even to the newborn babe. They are especially good in summer because they regulate the bowels and keep the stomach sweet and pure. They are sold by medicine dealers or by mail at 25 cents a box from The Dr. Williams' Medicine Co., Brockville, Ont.

CREATE A LARGE CREDIT BY A SMALL DEPOSIT

When you take out a life insurance policy you are making the biggest bank deposit you ever made at on time. You have actually provided that entire sum—against the day that is coming to you some time—the one on which you will never get an extension of time. Reminding You That the Present Season is a Profitable Time to Renew Your Chairs and Draperies

Sunlight, blue sky, and Autumn—that shabby old sofa of yours cuts a sorry figure, doesn't it, at this time when old nature is so lavish with her loveliness? And the big worn out chair looks especially pathetic as you come in from the splendour of the out-doors. Possibly you thought you could wait till winter to get those new curtains, but in the brightness of these Fall mornings your soul revolts against the faded, soiled looking hangings—or some other form of artistic desolation.

Wherefore, you are reminded, Madame, that the present time offers many inducements for the renewal of upholstery, the making of curtains, portieres and all manner of refurnishings.

Your work will receive careful and unhurried attention and this department now abounds in chintzes, shadow cloths, tapestries, curtain hangings and other coverings offered at very moderate prices. Don't delay, pay a visit to our third floor, now!

New Home For Nurses of Nicholls Hospital Opened

Is Opposite to and Close to the Hospital and is Comfortably Furnished for the Nursing Staff—Has Immediate Effect of Increasing Accommodation for Patients.

A COMPLETE INSTITUTION

Traditionally a hospital is a silent institution where the nurses and staff who enter are dumb about what goes on inside their walls, becoming in fact a community to themselves. Nicholls Hospital is no exception to this rule and unknown to the general public many changes, all tending to help the suffering, go on daily. Towards this end lately an addition was made which directly affected the nurses in the purchase of a home for them.

A REAL HOME

Since the building of the hospital as the result of a bequest of the late Mrs. Nicholls, nurses had occupied rooms in the building proper. For many years, since the city grew and patients naturally became more numerous the nurses staff larger, the quarters became cramped and the girls had no real home. This spring however, at the happy suggestion of the Board the home formerly occupied by Mr. Francis Mason directly across from the hospital has been purchased and made into a permanent dwelling for the staff of 25 nurses. Here with three trim iron bed steads in each room the girls have every comfort possible in home life. Miss Sanderson, the superintendent during the absence of Miss Beamish, the regular superintendent, who is overseas has neglected no detail in making the quarters as comfortable as possible. Under her supervision a reception room has been fitted up in restful tones and with homey furniture. A gas plate by which the girls may cook little suppers for themselves has also been installed and an electric iron and board for the girls own use. The girls are enthusiastic in their appreciation of the home.

A Tennis Court.

While the home was bought rather late in the season to make the grounds as Miss Sanderson would have them next year, a tennis court will be added to the attractions of the home.

More Rooms Opened.

The hospital itself in which the nurses spend twelve hours a day has benefitted immeasurably by the opening of the home. Added to the regular capacity of from 80 to 100 patients five or six cheerful rooms have been opened and are at present under course of furnishing and finishing. Fortunately at present there is very little illnes in the city and while all the private wards are full there are few patients in the public wards, thus leaving no over crowding.

The Operating Room.

Miss Sanderson is justly proud of the Hospital and most gracious in taking visitors through. Particularly pleasing amongst the attractions are the sun rooms on the new wing lately opened. Here the patients have their choice of a splendid view of the town and river or on the right side the country. The operating room in which at times four operations are performed daily, is fitted up as well as the biggest hospital in America with all the latest appliances and is a great improvement over the former rooms used before the new wing opened. A first class sterilizing room has been installed in which every new idea is carired out .The X-ray room could compete with any hospital on the continent.

Isolation Tent.

For the accommodation of consumptives a tent has been fitted out on the north of the building. This happily is tenantless at present.

The Kitchen.

The Kitchen has an unhappy feature, temporarily there is no cook. Why the position is not snapped up is a mystery as the wages are the highest and the quarters for the help above reproach including a bright and attractive parlour. The laundry is a joy to the laundress and is done without the touch of human hand. From the time it is thrown down the chute in the immaculate walls it is touched only by the janitor who gathers it and empties it into the washing machine. Machines dry the linen and iron it. Surrounding the laundry is a vegetable garden which goes materially towards supplying the hospital.

In Case of Fire

That a fire could break out is practically an impossibility but should the impossible happen it would have little headway to gain as the hospital has its own hydrant personally inspected by the Chief, and its own hose rendering the spread of fire impossible.

A Credit to the City.

Altogether the hospital with its scrupulously clean walls and fittings and up-to-date appliances and capable nursing staff is a credit to Peterboro and a place in which a patient may well feel absolutely confident of first class care and subsequent recovery, if recovery is possible. With the completion of the new home the staff itself has little to wish for.

How a Boy May Become a Scout

Meeting Will be Held in Public Library on September 20.

To become a Scout a boy must be between the ages of 12 and 18. He must satisfy his Scoutmaster that he knows the Scout law, signs and salute; the composition of the Union Jack, the right way to fly it, and must be able to tie the following knots—reef, sheet-bend, clove hitch, bowline, fisherman's, sheep-shank. On passing these tests he becomes a tenderfoot scout and is entitled to wear the tenderfoot badge, which is granted by the local Association on the recommendation of the Scoutmaster.

The Scout's Promise.

To do my duty to God and the King.
To help other people at all times.
To obey the Scout law.

The Law is:

1. A Scout's honour is to be trusted.
2. A Scout is loyal to the King, and his officers, and to his parents, his country and his employers.
3. A Scout's duty is to be useful and to help others.
4. A Scout is a friend to all and a brother to every other Scout.
5. A Scout is courteous.
6. A Scout is a friend to animals.
7. A Scout obeys orders of his parents, Scoutmaster or patrol leader without question
8. A Scout smiles and whistles under all difficulties
9. A Scout is thrifty.
10. A Scout is clean in thought, word and deed.

The Scouts' motto is: "Be prepared," which means that a Scout must be prepared at any moment to do his duty and particularly prepared physically, morally and spiritually to face the battle of life.

Membership in the Boy Scouts' Association is open to bodies which accept as a basis the three-fold promise of the Scout, the system of instruction contained in the official handbook of the Boy Scouts' Association in Canada and the rules.

The Association is open to British subjects of every class and denomination.

Churches, Sunday schools, day schools and other boys' organizations may raise troops connected with such bodies.

For further information attend the meeting in the Public Library on Friday evening, Sept. 20th.

When the Men Come Home, What?

(Second Article.)

They will want homes, homes that will be decent and comfortable for what are commonly called "poor men."

There will be amongst them some mechanics, some labourers, some men who will have to be helped with work that is not too exacting for those who have suffered and are, from wounds and sickness and loss of limbs, entitled to our sympathies and material assistance. They should be given the preference over men who are sound, "wind and limb," but the worst possible thing that could be done for these men is to give them the idea that they may depend wholly on their pensions and the sympathies of their countrymen.

Their proud record in the war should keep these soldier citizens always proud—too proud to be idle—too proud to ask from others what they can do for themselves.

Now, as to homes. Houses are scarce and building materials are dear and labour is dear, so my advice to you is to get lots on good soil that will give you a bit of ground for a garden. It may have to be in the suburbs, but street railways will reach you as quickly as the traffic will justify expenditure. Sit down on the land, dig out a cellar 7 ft. deep for the kitchen part, put up the kitchen, with a second story for a couple of bedrooms, make it strong and warm, use tar paper between two thicknesses of dry rough lumber, bank it up with what came out of the cellar, and keep house 4 ft. above ground level. All this you can do with your own labour. A few days of a carpenter will be all you will want outside of your own willing hands. A good warm cellar will enable you to store vegetables, etc., for the winter and thus save paying out for these when they are dear. Now get to work. You may get enough sand and gravel in cellar to build concrete walls; the lumber to use in building cellar wall can be used for sheeting the roof. Places your kitchen where you can at some future day add to it the front part of a better house.

Now, be courageous and tackle this job, and you will be surprised at your success. Don't buy a lot of smaller area than 50 by 100 ft. Let a number of men club together and take up a number of lots, help each other, show industry and courage and, you will succeed and you will win the respect and confidence of the people.

SENEX

KEEPING BIENNIAL VEGETABLES FOR SEED

By the term "biennial" vegetables is meant one which takes two seasons to produce seed, writes the Dominion Horticulturist in a leaflet giving advice on the "Selection and Wintering of Biennial Vegetables for Seed," which can be had free from the Publications Branch, Department of Agriculture, Ottawa. The vegetables must be stored over the first winter and replanted for seed production the following spring. Some well-known vegetables of this class are beets, cabbage, carrots, celery, parsnips, salsify and turnips. Seed from these can easily be grown in Canada if the vegetables to be so used are kept in good condition over the winter. Unless a rigid selection is made, each year, of specimens which are true to type, it will not be long before a larger proportion of the crop will be not true to type; hence great care should be taken to select well-shaped, medium-sized roots, typical of the variety, of beets, carrots, parsnips, salsify, and turnips, firm-headed cabbage true to type, firm stalked and disease-resistant plant of celery, and firm, shapely onion bulbs. If this is done and varieties are kept far enough from others so that they will not cross the crop, Canadian grown seed should compare favourably with imported seed in regard to purity, as it does in other characteristics.

The methods of wintering vegetables for seed will vary in different parts of Canada, but in most places it will be necessary to give them some protection. When possible, it is best to store them in a frost-proof cellar. But, if necessary, the vegetables may be stored outside, both in small and in large quantities, except in the case of onions, which must be kept dry, and stored in a cool place, where there is little or no frost.

PONDER THESE FACTS OF MERCHANT SAILORS' WORK

Until very recently his wage was pitiably small, about £3 per month. It is now £12 per month.

He has poor food and worse quarters.

He buys his own clothing.

He has no insurance or pension.

He has no Patriotic Fund to help him or his dependents.

He has no paid leave or amusement.

He has no comforts sent him as are sent to the soldiers and the naval bluejacket.

He has no food boxes sent to him if a prisoner.

He works continuously, four hours on, four hours off, twenty-four hours a day, seven days a week.

He cannot tie up comfortably at night.

Four thousand of his pals are prisoners of war.

He gets no decorations and no triumphal home coming.

He wears no gold lace.

He has carried on his back from Canada to the front, $1,800,000,000 worth of munitions, more than enough to off set the entire national debt of this Dominion.

He has carried over literally billions of dollars worth of meat, wheat and other products from this country.

He has delivered safely without loss of a single life our Canadian army of approximately 500,000 men.

He has carried over eighty per cent. of the American troops.

He has transported over fifteen million fighting men from port to port, their food, their munitions and their horses.

Through him have been fed the inhabitants of the British Isles, of France, and largely of Italy and the other Allies.

He is performing a greater national service than the Navy or the Army, because neither could exist without him

Three hundred thousand of these men are now serving in this National service, volunteers all— no conscripts.

Fifteen thousand have been murdered by U-boats or by mine.

Over forty thousand of their dependents are left to struggle for themselves.

The various Sailors' Orphanages, Homes, Institutes and Benevolent Societies caring for the sailor have had their revenues almost entirely obliterated whilst the demands upon their resources are ever increasing.

Putting to shame Lansdownism and all who, during peace times have waxed fat, bloodless and so highly manicured and sandpapered into what they term the higher spheres of uplift that they would make an inclusive peace and thus leave to our children a heritage of further blood-shedding.

their Sailors' Union, endorsed by the Sailors' Union of France, have irrevocably refused to associate with Germans for seven years after the war—

1. By refusing to man any merchant ship destined to a German port.
2. By refusing to sail with a ship that has any Germans in its crew.
3. By refusing to man any ship carrying German goods.

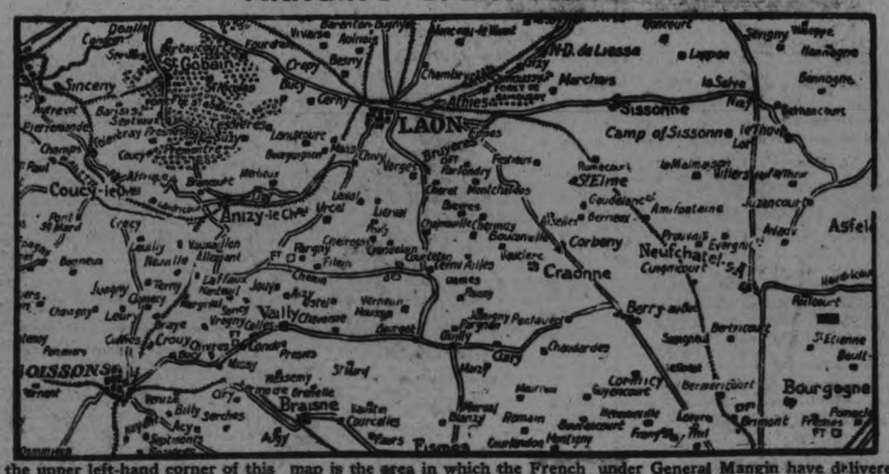
In short, they have irrevocably declared that after the war Germans shall be banished from the sea they have so foully disgraced by their murders.

FINE CHANCE.

(Chicago News.)

These are great days for the ultimate consumer. He is being protected against extortion on the one hand and against his own appetities on the other.

MANGIN'S GREAT BLOW



At the upper left-hand corner of this map is the area in which the French under General Mangin have delivered another slashing blow at the enemy. Coucy has been retaken and Fresnes (a little up to the right) occupied, thus giving the French a foothold in the forest of St. Gobain, which is only three miles from St. Gobain itself, possession of which would give the French command of the Laon Plateau and would make the fall of Laon city inevitable. United States forces are with this army.

SCHOOL'S STAR STUDENT

For the eleventh time since 1910, a Peterborough Collegiate Institute pupil has added credit to the record of the school by taking two of the most closely contested Scholarships in the province. In the mid-summer 1918 Honour Matriculation and Scholarship examinations, Miss Gretchen Gladman, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Geo. Lesson in Scientific Complexion Renewing

Everyone has a beautiful skin underneath the one exposed to view. Bear that in mind and it will be easier to understand the correct principle in acquiring a lovely complexion. Nature is constantly shedding the top skin in flaky particles like dandruff, only much smaller in size. In abnormal conditions, or in advancing age, these particles are not shed as rapidly as in robust youth. The longer they remain the more soiled or faded they become—that's the immediate cause of a "bad complexion."

It has been discovered that ordinary mercolized wax, to be had at any drug store, will absorb these worn out particles. The absorption, while hastening Nature's work, goes on gradually enough to cause no inconvenience. In a week or two the transformation is complete. The fresh, healthy-hued, youthful underskin is then wholly in evidence. You who are not satisfied with your complexions should get an ounce of mercolized wax and try this treatment. Use the wax nightly, like cold cream, washing it off mornings.

SATURDAY MORNING BULLETINS

MANY PRISONERS.

WITH THE CANADIAN FORCES, Sept. 7.—Twenty thousand, three hundred and seventy-three prisoners have been taken by the Canadians since the present offensive began.

HAM IS CAPTURED.

WITH THE FRENCH ARMY, Sept. 7.— The French have captured Ham and recaptured all their old positions along the whole front to the north of the Aisne river.

GAINING EVERYWHERE.

LONDON, Sept. 7.— All along the sixty mile front from Bapaume to the junction of the American and French lines near Rheims, the Allies are driving the enemy toward the Hindenburg line. The British are now nine miles from St. Quentin.

UNIQUE MUSICAL EVENT

At Conservatory Hall Monday—Something Unusual Promised

The J. M. Greene Music Co., Ltd., will present Ida Gardner, the charming contralto, and Harold Lyman, flutist, in a recital at the Conservatory of Music on September 9th.

Gifted with an unusual voice, delightful in quality and of remarkable range, Miss Gardner, by her lovely appearance, engaging personality and fine musicianship, is an artist of distinction.

After two years of study abroad, during which time she received a very attractive offer from the Imperial Opera of Vienna, war conditions necessitated Miss Gardner's return to America. In one brief season demonstrated her unusual voice before important organizations in Festival, Oratoria and Recital Programmes. She is established as one of New York's successful concert stars.

The fact that Miss Gardner is to be assisted by Mr. Harold Lyman lends added interest to the event.

Harold Lyman, flutist, is an artist who has made many friends among discriminating music lovers for his sincere musianship and unusual ability.

There are indications that something out of the ordinary will be heard at this recital, although the J. M. Greene Music Co., Ltd., refuses to divulge just what it is. The reporter has his suspicions. If they are correct those who attend are apt to have a very pleasant surprise.

Miss Elsie Ogilvie of the Toronto General Hospital, is spending her vacation at her home here.

Gunner Laverne Walton, of Kingston, is home on sick leave.

Miss Alice Johnston was in Havelock on Labor Day.

Discuss Chemical Engine.

As the council are to take up the question of purchasing a chemical fire engine at their meeting next Monday evening, there should be a good representation of the town's people to give their views on the matter.

An extra large number of entries is anticipated at the Lakefield Fall Fair on Tuesday and Wednesday, Sept. 17th and 18th.

Mr. and Mrs. E. Peacock are spending a few days in Toronto taking in the Exhibition.

Miss Angela Charlotou spent Labor day in the village, the guest of her mother.

Miss Rose Kidd has secured a school and is teaching at Cottesloe.

Why are Lights Out?

Why are our electric lights out for two nights in succession? If the mill race had to be cleaned out, why was it not done during the long days in the middle of summer. Now, with this wet, rainy weather and the streets muddy, it makes it dangerous to go about at night. Why are our peve and councillors allowing it? The churches could not hold their prayer meetings on Wednesday night and one or two societies on Thursday night had to cancel their meetings for the want of the light—and all this done without notice to anyone. Who is responsible for it?

BEER CUT OFF.

WASHINGTON, Sept. 7.—The manufacture of beer in the United States will be prohibited after December first as a war measure.

A DAUGHTER of the SUN

THE STORY OF A HAWAIIAN BUTTERFLY

The Kanaka, as the native of the Hawaiian Islands is called, is a most interesting person. His kindness, hospitality and child-like simplicity wins one with a smile. He is wholly different from the American Indian, does not possess the sullen disposition of the latter, never harbors malice, is unrevengeful kind, forgiving and free from treachery. Invariably he is a favorite with the traveler from the first. Though he is a failure at the head of business, lacking the power to direct and control, he makes a trusty and faithful clerk. There are few occupations in the islands in which the Kanaka is not found. But where he makes the most wonderful impression is as a sea man. His absolute fearlessness and skill make him a wonder as a sailor. They also swim like a fish and the capsizing of a boat or canoe is a matter of supreme indifference to them. They are expert deep sea fisherman and often go out of sight of land in their frail canoes and very seldom fail to return in safety. The native Kanaka lives on fish and "poi," made from the "taro" plant. But the fact that nature has been so kind to him has interferred with his being as hustling an individual as those wro have had to fight for food under more rigorous climates.

The play, "A Daughter of the Sun," a story of an Hawaiian Butterfly, deals with these people and the Hawaiian Islands. The atmosphere of the islands is maintained by a band of native Hawaiian musicians, who play and sing their native melodies throughout the action of the play. The cast is a large one and the scenic embellishment is very elaborate and wonderful.

"A Daughter of the Sun" comes to the Grand, Monday, September 16, for one performance only.

Arsenic Caused Death of Etc.

turned for lunch as usual at 11, and upon arriving home, was told that Flo had died perhaps half an hour before. Mrs. Edwards was alone in the house with Florence until ten minutes before she died. At that time she was joined by Mrs. MacPherson, a neighbour. Florence was then unconscious, Mrs. MacPherson told The Telegram.

But of one thing Mrs. MacPherson declared that she is certain, "Florence was the apple of her mother's eye," she said. "I have known them for seven years and Florence was always consulted about everything in that house. I happened in many times when I was not expected, and everything was always all right," she said.

DOCTOR WAS SUSPICIOUS.

The inquest was brought about as a result of the suspicions of Dr. McLay, who responded to a telephone message, and who arrived perhaps an hour after he judged the girl had died. The bedding had been straightened, he told the coroner's jury, the room had been cleared up, the hair of the corpse had been brushed and he thought the body had been washed.

ILL FOR A WEEK.

Crown Attorney Ball, in examining the doctor, concentrated for a time on the possible effects of arsenical poisoning. The girl had taken sick first on Tuesday, July 16. She arrived at Hoskin's tailor shop, where she was employed, on the following day. Her lips were swollen and she stated that she had vomited until she brought blood the night before. A day well, and the next ill, she continued until her death. The night before she died she was out with friends, but was taken sick in a theatre. The coroner and Dr. McLay explained to the jury that arsenic, which was found in the stomach by the Provincial Analyst, was a fine white powder, almost tasteless, but at most very slightly sweetish. It could be administered secretly in almost any form. The Crown Attorney was told that if an overdose were administered, a person would vomit and perhaps recover until another dose was administered.

SISTERS NOT "CHUMMY."

Returning to the subject of the bank book at the inquest, the Crown called George Hoskins, who, for seven years, had been the girl's employer. On the day following the funeral, he said, two ladies came to his store. They were Miss Edwards' sisters, he presumed. Though Miss Bella, also a tailoress, worked but a block away from the Hoskins store, he had never in seven years learned that Florence had a sister. They had, it was said, never gone to work together or home together.

The ladies explained to Mr. Hoskins that they had searched the house for the bank book. They asked would he look for it in the store.

"I was startled," he swore. "No one had had the heart to go near Flo's place so soon, but I said that if it was important I would see. It was there."

BANK BOOK WAS HIDDEN.

Gladys Lynch, a fellow employee with Florence, swore that some weeks ago Florence had told her that she was "broke," and that the folks had hid her bank book.

While taken ill, Florence telephoned Elizabeth Wilson and Florence Trout, with whom she had been out the night before, to ask if they had been sick after eating ice cream.

HAD ROOM TO HERSELF.

Crown Attorney Ball subjected Mrs. Edwards to a rigid and prolonged examination, at the conclusion of which she collapsed.

Florence had made a practice of sleeping with door closed, she said. Florence slept alone. Bella slept with her mother. During the night Mrs. Edwards stated that she had been awakened by sounds from Florence's room. She was evidently sick.

"Did you go into her room when you heard her?" asked Mr. Ball.

"No," replied Mrs. Edwards, "we did not go in."

On the fatal morning she learned more about it, but no doctor was called until after 9 o'clock. The doctor sought was out at the time. Still later another call was sent for Dr. McLay, who was not the family physician. When he arrived the girl was dead. "There was no excitement in the house," he swore. "There was more among the people outside."

But to Mrs. MacPherson, who was called just before the girl's death, it seemed that Mrs. Edwards had manifested the greatest grief. She was not hysterical, she said, but was sorrowing deeply.

TRAINMAN IS KILLED.

QUEBEC, Sept. 7.—Fireman Seneca was killed and a number of others were injured when the Canadians Government Railway train left the rails and fell off a bridge near St. Helen, Kamouraska, early to-day. The engine turned turtle in the ditch.

HENDRIX AND MAYS TO-DAY.

CHICAGO, Sept. 7. — The Boston Red Sox and Chicago faced each other again to-day, each having scored one victory. To-night the teams will entrain for Boston, where the remaining games of the championship series will be played.

Hendrix for the Cubs and Mays for the Red Sox are the likely pitchers. The splendid pitching of Tyler in yesterday's game, the sharp fielding of his team and their attack on Bullet Joe Bush's offerings when hits counted, made the Cubs the favourites on the baseball rialto to-day. The half holiday was expected to increase the attendance.

BRITISH ADVANCE.

LONDON, Sept. 7. — The British progress on practically the whole battle front from Havrincourt Wood to Lanchy continued this morning with rather greater rapidity than had been expected.

The British line, starting at Havrincourt Wood, of which the British occupy practically one-half, runs through Metzen, Couture and Fins, then by Tieramont, Longavesnes, Tincourt, Boucly, Hancourt and Tertry to Lanchy, where it joins the French lines.

FINLAND'S MAN POWER.

PARIS, Sept. 7.—A treaty of alliance has been concluded between Germany and Finland under which the entire man-power of Finland is put at Germany's disposal.

BRITISH CASUALTIES.

LONDON, Sept. 7.—Casualties among the British forces reported in the week ending to-day, totalled 20,640 officers and men, compared with an aggregate of 14,184 reported in the previous week, divided as follows: Killed or died of wounds, 4,006; wounded or missing, 16,634.

Five Cars of Grain Derailed Yesterday

A special east-bound grain train met with a mishap yesterday morning at 6.30 about half way between Hastings and Campbellford. It is not yet known what caused the wreck. Five cars of grain were damaged and the line was held up until the derrick from Belleville cleared it. Yesterday's Belleville train into Peterborough was over two hours late. All the grain had to be transhipped and the passengers of the passenger trains were transferred to another train. The line is now cleared and grain trains from the west are going through on the main line to the Atlantic seaboard daily.

OTTAWA BOY ONE OF PAIR LEFT OF 23 OF TANK CREW

Pte. Harold Goodwin Tells of Direct Hits Being Made on Tank and How He Was Nearly a Prisoner.

Pte. Harold Watson Goodwin, 4th Battalion, Canadian Machine Gun Battery, son of William Goodwin, 63 Hopewell avenue, in a letter to his parents tells of a thrilling adventure in a British tank, which resulted in his being wounded and almost taken prisoner. His letter follows:

"I am going to tell you of my adventure in the tank. Don't worry now, because I won't go over the top in one again. On the morning of August 8, twenty-three of us went over the bags in a tank we were packed in like sardines and the heat and smoke from the gasoline nearly drove us mad, but we reached our objective, a distance of ten miles without a mishap. Presently we were in amongst Fritzy's machine guns, knocking them out, when one of his anti-tank guns threw a shell at us and made a direct hit. The sergeant yelled: 'Every man for himself,' so we all bolted. After a great deal of exertion I managed to get the big steel door open at the back and just had my head and shoulders out when another shell crashed through the centre of the tank, wounding me and nearly blowing me out with it.

"I fell on the ground on my head and when I got on my feet I found his rifle. I thought we would all be taken prisoner, but Fritzy gave us a chance. He took a look around the tank to see if there were any more. The tank driver and myself took advantage of this and made a rush for a swamp about fifty yards away, which we reached in safety.

"Fritzy marched back to the lines with the remainder of our crew, with the exception of four, two of whom were killed in the explosion and two others who were burnt to death in the tank.

"When I got in the swamp I took my tunic off to bind my wound, but Fritzy turned a machine gun on me, so I crawled off, leaving tunic and all. From three in the afternoon until nine at night we lay there inside of his lines, not knowing when a Hun would stumble over us, and expecting a bullet to hit us every time we moved. At nine o'clock we crawled out of Fritzy's lines and ran for about two miles before we stopped. We then met our infantry and I can tell you we were the happy boys.

"Believe me, I was never so sure of being a dead man in all my life, but I trusted God and He brought me through. The driver and I then went to the dressing station, the only two left out of twenty-three. All I brought out of the line was three francs, which I had in my trousers pocket, and my respirator, so I am at a loss for a good many things."

LARGE SALE OF CARS DURING THIS WEEK

The Duffus Garage Reports Many Buyers of Both Gray Dort and Ford Cars

The Duffus Garage reports the sale of four Gray-Dort touring cars, five Ford touring, two roadsters and two Ford Couplets thus far during the present week. Mr. Duffus, proprietor of the Duffus Garage, states that undoubtedly there will be a shortage of cars, a fact that in addition to higher prices, not more than 25 per cent. of those requiring cars will be served, and hence the reason for taking advice and purchasing now. The Ford, ever economical and reliable, is coming in for a big sale, and the Gray-Dort, which is gaining a phenomenal reputation as a sturdy, powerful, comfortable, and reliable medium-priced car, built by the reputable firm of Gray & Sons, of Chatham, Ont., is finding its way into the homes of many people in Peterborough and vicinity.

HARDWARE MARKET HAS NEW ADVANCE

Horseshoes and Nails, Galvanized Sheets and Many Other Articles Higher.

Stiff advances have been made in sharpening stones of various kinds during the week. The lines embrace scythe stones, combination stones, oil slips, pocket stones, razor hones, knife sharpeners and tool grinders, the price changes ranging from about 10 to 25 per cent. higher.

Horse shoes of all kinds have advanced 50c per keg. Horse shoe nails is another item which has taken on a similar revision upward, the new prices being up 50c per box of 25 pounds. These two items illustrate tendencies in manufactured iron and steel products which are faced with question of diminishing supplies, and an increasingly heavy overhead expense, due to labour costs and curtailed production.

Galvanized Sheets Up.

Galvanized sheets have advanced another $1 per 100 pounds in some quarters, and black sheets are up 50c per 100 pounds. Conditions as regards supplies show no improvement, and stocks in the majority of jobbers' warehouses are badly broken up. Manufacturers of sheet metals are holding flat stocks to take care of emergency orders, as their supplies, if turned into regular channels, would be used up too quickly, with little opportunity for immediate replacement.

Sharp advances in raw cotton during the week will undoubtedly have a bearing on quotations of cotton twines of various kinds. A higher level of prices on wrapping twine, sash cord, mason's lines and chalk lines is looked for under existing market conditions. October 1 is probable date for change to be made, though developments in the meantime may bring this about sooner.

One decline has been made during the week. Manufacturers of tap soles have changed the sizes of men's somewhat in an endeavour to conserve leather, and effected a reduction in prices of about 5 per cent. No change in women's or boys' taps has been made.

Ready roofing has been changed to higher levels, advances ranging from 10c to 25c per square. Cistern pumps is another line to follow the upward trend of prices, and quotations are about 10 per cent. higher. Farriers' tools, including driving, turning and rounding hammers, pincers and cutting nippers, record a 10 per cent. advance.

Will Affect Price of Stoves.

An increase of 25 per cent. in wages of mounders will have a bearing on prices of stoves and ranges, though new prices have not yet been named. Orders for stoves are going forward freely, and when business on hand is taken care of, it is said stocks will be pretty well depleted.

Old Time Soldier Dies as He Wished

Sergeant Payne of the U. S. Army Fought Moros and Mexicans—Killed at Soissons.

(By Webb Miller.)

(United Press Staff Correspondent.)

PARIS, Aug. 19. (By Mail.)—There'll be many moist eyes among the "Old Army" men who are now wearing gold and silver leaves and silver stars on their shoulders when they hear that "Ol" Sergt. Jim Payne of the —th Infantry fell, riddled by machine gun bullets, on the first day of the Soissons fighting.

Sergt. Payne was one of the oldest and most experienced of the old-time non-coms, and had seen service in every land where American soldiers set foot for the past twenty years. He "soldiered" and fought Moros in the wilds of Mindanos under Capt. J. J. Pershing, and helped Pershing chase the Villistas into the interior of Mexico.

In many a headquarters, dugout and mess shack they will say "Poor ol' Jim, Glod bless him," when they hear that Payne is gone. Probably no other man in the army had as many close friends among the officers. For the last twenty years Payne has been training second lieutenants and seeing them gain their first lieutenancy, then captains' bars, majors' gold leaves and so on toward the major general's double stars.

A good many of the youths that Payne "mothered" are now generals in the new army. But no matter how high they went in rank, they always retained their love for the leathery-faced, grizzled old sergeant. Year after year Sergt. Jim has been taking "shave-tails" fresh from West Point, and nervous as cats about their first commands, under his arm and teaching them the fine points of handling men, as only an old first sergeant can do.

But Payne remained always a first sergeant. In the old days there wasn't much chance for a man to rise out of the ranks to a commission—especially if he "hadn't had much schoolin'," as Payne would tell his friends who urged him to try for a commission.

At the outbreak of war Payne was offered a captaincy, but refused it.

"I want to win my shoulder bars on the field with my boys," he told them. Last winter he served as first sergeant, but this spring asked to be reduced to a sergeant, so he could go out and lead a platoon. Only a few weeks before he was killed the recommendation went through for his promotion to a lieutenancy. Within a few days Sergt. Jim would have been wearing the coveted silver bar, won as he wanted to win it.

But he died as he wanted to die—"with the boys."

And there will be many misty eyes along the lines when they hear about "Ol' Jim."

CIVIL SERVICE JOBS

N. Y. Firm Busy at Ottawa Assisting in Classification

OTTAWA, Sept. 5.—The classification of nearly sixty thousand civil servants, under the act of last session, is being made by the Civil Service Commission, with the assistance of Arthur Young and Company of New York, specialists in public service and municipal organization. The different departments of the Government service are being examined, and the work of each man inquired into with a view of systematic classification.

The report of the experts is expected by the end of the year, and will be the subject of whatever legislation is necessary. Removal of the service from political patronage and placing the whole management under the commission has developed difficulties which will necessitate amendments at the next session of Parliament.

New prices rave been named on sprayers and seeders for spring delivery, quotations being higher than opening prices last year. Silver-plated ware, razor blades, saw sets, sash weights, and roofing nails are other lines to advance during the

Hunter St. Bridge Will be 56 Feet Wide Over All

Provision for Double Track Car Line and Vehicular Traffic—Board of Works Meeting Last Night.

The width of the new Hunter street bridge will be 56 feet, making provision for a six foot walk on either side and a roadway of 42 feet, which will allow ample room for two car lines and two driveways for vehicular traffic. These dimensions were suggested at last night's meeting of the Board of Works and while they are but tentative and subject to revision, they were practically decided upon.

With City Solicitor Gordon reading the clauses and explaining them, the Board scrutinized the proposed agreement under which Mr. Frank Barber of Toronto will be engaged as supervising engineer.

Mr. Gordon had inserted a clause that imposed upon the engineer the entire responsibility for its construction. The plans were to be so prepared that no contractor could render negligent or defective service or use defective material.

Mr. Barber objected that this clause threw upon him the entire weight of liability for defective work that might be done by the contractor. He had never heard of such a demand and was confident that it was unprecedented. He put complete trust in his plans, he stated, and suggested that the Council have them approved by the Ontario Railway and Municipal Board. His reputation as an engineer was at stake in his work, and besides he always gave first thought to the interests of his clients. Furthermore, he said, it was unprofessional to assume the financial obligation embodied in the Solicitor's clause. It was broader in its import than demanding of the City Solicitor that he win any case in court. Mr. Barber called upon the contracting aldermen to search their experience for any example in which the engineer or architect was thus bound for an entire work. They replied that the contractor was responsible for his work, but that the enzineer was responsible for plans, specifications, etc.

After considerable discussion the clause was modified to provide that the engineer must exercise all reasonable care and skill, make proper inspections, etc.

Sewer to School.

Mr. A. A. Fowler, representing the Board of Education, requested the construction of a sewer from the King Edward school to the trunk sewer on Park street. The Board of Works agreed to carry out the work, but the Board of Education will pay the cost of it. The workmen, who have completed the Prince street sewer, will be moved to the Park street line at once. This petition was made for the reason that the Board of Education could not secure the necessary labour. The school is at present dependent upon the Romaine street sewer and the "white elephant" pumping station.

Needs Sewer For Mount.

Rev. C. J. Phelan, speaking in behalf of the Sisters of St. Joseph, petitioned the Board for a sewer service to their home at Mount St. Joseph. He said he was aware that the Council did not make connections across the boundary, but he urged that the special conditions in this case be favourably considered. The community numbered between seventy and seventy-five Sisters, of whom twenty-five were teachers in the local schools. Their present cesspool has become unsatisfactory, and it was almost imperative that a sewer outlet be obtained if possible, as a safeguard to the health of the Sisters and of the pupils they teach.

Ald. Worth moved that the request be granted. The motion carried, but it was pointed out that the principal difficulty would be in securing labour. It was not easy to assemble the gang that has just completed Prince street, but it had already been decided to use this force next in building a connection to the King Edward school from the new Park street trunk sewer.

The proposed sewer to Mount St. Joseph now terminates at the corner of McDonnel and Cambridge streets; 600 feet intervenes to the boundary. When the new unit of the Bonner-Worth factory is completed, a partial extension will be needed, Ald. Worth stated in reply to Mayor Duncan's query. His Worship advised Father Phelan to obtain the recommendation of the Board of Health for this request as a means of strengthening the Council's hand. The details of tax, cost and other details will be considered later. In the meantime City Engineer Parsons will examine the subsoil of McDonnel street west to ascertain whether there is any shale there or not.

Dustless Sweeper Employed.

Mr. W. H. Buller and Mr. W. M. Lang, representing the Dominion Dustless Sweepers Limited, solicited the Board for the contract of sweeping the streets until winter sets in. The company's machine is now more improved and efficient than any similar machine in the world, Mr. Buller said. The streets will be kept absolutely clean, and a trip will be made over them on Saturday nights if possible.

City Engineer Parsons reported that the present cost of cleaning the streets was nearly $25 a day.

Ald. Edgar moved that the contract be let to the company at a rate of $30 a day.—Carried

ELM STREET GIRL WAS SAVAGELY BITTEN BY A NEIGHBOUR'S DOG.

While crossing a neighbour's yard to get a pail of water, Kathleen Carlo, a little 8 year old Italian girl, living on Elm street, was severely bitten about her ankles by a savage collie dog belonging to Mr. Maynard, Elm street, on Thursday evening. The little girl had not interfered with the dog in any way, it is said, and without provocation it dashed at her ankles, inflicting five severe wounds, in one place tearing away her flesh.

Dr. McNulty was called and attended to the wounds. P. C. Deannard was also called out and had the dog chained up as a precaution against rabies, and to discover whether the animal was affected.

TICKLE OF CLOSE SHAVE BETRAYS GERMAN SPY DRESSED AS WOMAN

Bernstorff's Aide Detected by Mrs. Arthur Clark When He Scratched His Chin Where the Razor Hurt.

SAVANNAH, Ga., —Proving that the age old stories about a woman's instinct are not just legendary and that some women, at least, do possess a sixth sense is the adventure of Mrs. Arthur Clark, who by this very power was the cause of the capture of one of the mast sought after spies in America after this country had declared war.

Mrs. Clark is a New York woman now living in Savannah, so as to be near her son, who has a position at one of the shipbuilding yards.

Shortly after the German Ambassador, Von Bernstorff, had left this country, Mrs. Clark had occasion to travel from Florida, where she had been spending the spring, to her home in New York.

Sitting across the aisle from Mrs. Clark in the Pullman car was a woman who attracted the New Yorkers' attention immediately in a very peculiar manner. She was rubbing her chin and cheek in the meditative manner that is commonly employed by a man after a close shave. Mrs. Clark watched and the longer she watched the more certain she became that her woman's instincts and her power of observation had not betrayed her.

Calling aside the conductor, she told him of her suspicion. "I am a married woman," she said, "and I have seen my husband hundreds of times after he had shaved, and he strokes his face in just that manner. I am perfectly certain that is no woman, but a man." The conductor contemplated the situation for a few moments and then, so as to be on the safe side telegraphed the Pullman agency in Philadelphia for instructions.

The Pullman people turned the matter over to Secret Service men and the totally unsuspecting "woman" was met at Philadelphia by two detectives, who informed her that they had instructions to take her off the train and search her.

Mrs. Clark was also requested to accompany the detectives and the suspicious traveller to the police station, where the searching took place It was there discovered that Mrs. Clark's sixth sense had served her well, and that the woman was no other than one of Von Bernstorff's attaches, a young German officer, for whom the Secret Service men had been on the lookout for several months, but who, it was thought, had escaped to Mexico.

Mrs. Clark is the proud possessor of a very complimentary letter, which she received from the Attorney General, thanking her for the big service which she rendered to her government.

Two Cars of Niagara Fruit Reach City

Fruit from the Niagara Peninsula is now arriving in the city in large quantities. Two carloads, consisting of plums, peaches and a few pears were received by the Canadian Express this morning for some of the local merchants. Most of the fruit was from St. Catharines and Lincoln county. Most of this morning's shipment was plums, which is said to be an abundant crop this year. Green gages, the large blue and red varieties, seemed to be the bulk of the shipment.

PREDICTS GERMAN REVOLT.

Swiss Hear That Continued Reverses May Cause Revolution.

PARIS.— A despatch from Berne, Switzerland, to Le Matin, quotes a prominent Swiss citizen, recently returned from Germany, as declaring that in the past six weeks a formidable disillusion has swept over Germany.

If the German military situation does not improve, the informant said, trouble that may surpass the acts of the Bolsheviki in Russia menaces the German Empire.

YOUNGEST SON OF JUDGE HUYCKE IS REPORTED MISSING

Lieut. Arthur Huycke, of the Royal Naval Air Force Missing Since September 3rd.

WAS ON SCOUT WORK

Judge Huycke received word this morning that his youngest son, Lieut. Arthur Huycke, is missing since September 3.

Lieut. Huycke went overseas in November last, and entered the Royal Naval Air Service. He has latterly been doing scout patrol work in the south of England, and the dangerous work upon which he was engaged was illustrated by a recent fall into the sea. Before going overseas he was with the artillery for a short time at Petawawa. He was a pupil at the Peterborough Collegiate Institute.

Lieut. Arthur Huycke is the fourth son of Judge and Mrs. Huycke to go overseas, and the third whose name has appeared in the casualty lists. Two other brothers, Lieut. Meredith and Lieut. Douglas Huycke, were wounded and invalided home, and the eldest son, Lieut. Wilfrid Huycke, is still carrying on in France.

Numerous friends and the citizens generally will unite in hoping that better news will be forthcoming in the near future.

Pte. James Black.

Mr. Alfred Black, 201 Rubidge St., has received official word from Ottawa that his son, Pte. James Black, formerly of the 93rd Battalion, has been admitted to No. 22 General Hospital, on August 22, suffering from a gun-shot wound in the right leg.

Pte. Black was among the first to enlist in the 93rd Battalion. On going overseas he was transferred in a draft to the 5th C.M.R.

A brother, Pte. Alfred Black, was killed in action.

FRENCH HAVE ADVANCED ON 20 MILE FRONT

Poilus Are on Big Stretch of Entirely New Ground

(Canadian Press Despatch.)

LONDON, Sept. 7.—(1 p.m.)—The French have advanced on a 20-mile front to an average depth of two miles and in some places to a depth of four miles. They occupied Tergnier without opposition. The French troops also reached the forest of Coucy, and are now on a big stretch of entirely new ground.

PARIS, Sept. 7.—The official statement says: Between the Somme and the Oise French troops continued to make progress during the entire night overcoming local resistance and forcing back the enemy rear-guards. Advancing on both sides of the Somme the French occupied Pithon, Sommette-Eaucourt, Dury and Ollezy. Further south the French are holding Gugny and have reached the western edge of Genlis Wood. North of the Oise French troops are in Tergnier. They have pushed east of this village to the railway and canal. North of the Ailette, the lower forest of Coucy is entirely in our possession, as well as Bartisis, which was captured in heavy fighting notwithstanding the stubborn resistance of the enemy. North of Quincy Bas the French have passed beyond the villages of Aulers and Bassoles-Aulers.

South of the Ailette Nanteuil-La-Fossey, Condefort and Conde-Sur-Aisne are ours. There is no change north of the Vesle.

Ford Farm Tractor Equipped With Power Pulley—Ex-Mayor Duffus Home From Toronto Exhibition

Ex-Mayor Duffus just back from the Toronto Exhibition states that in conversation with the Manufacturers of Tractors, he was informed that the Tractor demonstration which is to be held near Cobourg on the 17-18-19 and 20th of this month will be the biggest thing of its kind ever held in Canada.

A number of Ford Farm Tractors will be in operation at different kinds of farm work. At tre Toronto kinds of farm work. At the Toronto for very many favorable comments. Thousands of farmers and others were heard to say that it was the most practical and compact machine of its kind they had yet seen., handy and simple to operate, light-economical and most powerful.

In addition to doing all kinds of farm work and hauling, it is equipped, if desired, with a power pulley for all kinds of power work, such as cutting corn, thresring, grinding, sawing, etc.

The Duffus Garage, with branches at Norwood and Millbrook, has had two of these tractors already, one working on a farm in Cavan, and the other on exhibition in the new Duffus Garage, corner of Water and Charlotte streets, Peterboro. So simple and economical are they that a large sale is anticipated.

Signs of Panic in Hun-land

LONDON, Sept. 7.—Public interest to-day is quite equally divided between the unbroken advance of the Allied army and the apparent signs that the German people are in a state of nervous anxiety bordering on demoralization. More attention is being given here to future events than to the retreat of the German army. The belief that something like a panic has seized the German people is not based upon the news from neutral sources but upon the utterances of leaders in the German nation and the appeals of German newspapers to the public to keep its head.

The Emperor's bold vein of assurance, Chancellor Von Hertling's speech, General Yinsing's stringent order, and above all Field Marshal Von Hindenburg's proclamation, are cited as manifest efforts to check the decay of the German spirit which it is contended must exist to have called them forth. In short it is declared that the German people and perhaps also military chiefs, are greatly disturbed by recent events. The interest of military commentaries while not not ignoring the continued British progress centres chiefly on the important French successes on the southern end of the line of attack.

WHEN CORNERED, HUN A CRINGING COWARD

National Temperament of Germany Has Never Before Been Severely Tested.

The influence which, in the end, makes a nation great or small is its temperament. Either it can bear itself proudly—its spirit unconquered—in a period of adversity, or it cannot.

How will the German temperament disclose itself when the pinch comes? Never yet has it been seriously tested. In previous wars it has known only success in trade it has been flattered by constant prosperity and in the present war it has had the "map" to soothe it.

So, far, then, the inwardness of the German temperament is an unknown quantity. But I have come into contact with a good deal of it as a result of having to call upon, and put some pertinent questions to, an interesting variety of uninterned Huns in our midst, and this much I am prepared to say: Just as the Hun is the worst tyrant, bully, and ravisher in the world when he has the power to exercise his instinct, so is he the most cringing coward known to humanity when he is cornered.

My experience with our Huns has been that they always begin to weep when the inquiries become searching. At first it is rather embarrassing to see a big, fat, healthy German blubbering like a baby.

There was the rich German whom I visited at his luxurious house in the South of London to ask how he came to get petrol every month for his motor-car at a time of acute shortage when pressed for an answer tears of extraordinary size and number —like great raindrops—coursed down his cheeks. Somehow they created the impression that he could produce them to order. When he could cry no more he said that he "only got two gallons a month to give the car a run and keep it in order." With a sob, he added the justification: "It's a very beautiful car."

After a while you realize that this capacity to cry is part of the nature of the German. There was the Hun manufacturer who had contracts with the War Office early in the war and who, when I asked him a few points about his business, wept so copiously as to suggest that he would never be able to answer. And the German householder who, having given peremptory notice to a British family to clear out of a house, cried like a child on being asked about it.

The German women cry less than the men.

A woman I saw at Highbury represented her cult. "What right has anybody in England to say a word against our own dear Kaiser?" she demanded fiercely.

But when the Huns have been conquered we shall have to be careful of their capacity to weep. They will use use it for all they are worth to excite sympathy. R. E. H. in the London Mail.

Panic in Germany is Now Bordering on State of Demoralization eaders' Acts and Words Interpreted as Attempts to Stem Decay—Whole Division Mutinies on the Arras Front—Stories Are Declared Fully Corroborated.

20,000 DESERTERS IN BERLIN ALONE

LONDON, Sept. 9.—Public interest to-day is quite equally divided between the unbroken advance of the Allied armies and the apparent signs that the German people are in a state of nervous anxiety bordering on demoralization. More editorial space is being given here recently to future events than the retreat of the German army.

The belief that something like a panic has seized the German populace is not based upon stories from neutral sources, which have raised false hopes in the past, but upon the utterances of the leaders in the German nation and the appeals of German newspapers to the public to keep its head, while they themselves admit the seriousness of the military situation.

The Emperor's bold vein of assurance, Chancellor Von. Hertling's franchise speech, General Linsingen's stringent order, and, above all, Field Marshal Von Hindenburg's proclamation are cited as manifest efforts to check the decay of the German spirit, which, it is contended, must exist to have called them forth. In short, it is declared that the German people, and perhaps also the military chiefs, evidently are greatly disturbed by recent events.

Sensational Reports Corroborated.

General demoralization of the German population and widespread and growing disaffection in the German army, accompanied by mutiny and desertions, are described in a despatch to the Daily Telegraph from its Rotterdam correspondent, under date of Thursday. The correspondent says that information reaching him is so sensational as to inspire scepticism, but declares that he has received corroboration from authoritative sources which establishes the authenticity of the information beyond a doubt.

He asserts that the German army is filled with despondency and seething with mutinous spirit, and that alarming outbreaks have occurred in several units, principally Bavarian and Silesian. One incident on the Arras front terminated in a whole Bavarian division being disarmed and transported to Bavaria, where it was placed in a prison camp, and the mutiny of one of the Silesian regiments resulted in nearly a hundred of its men being executed.

Twenty Thousand Deserters in Berlin

A huge number of desertions are occurring, the correspondent says, and it is estimated that there are more than 20,000 deserters in Berlin alone. Large numbers are scattered throughout the country, and the authorities art having the greatest difficulty in trailing deserters owing to the connivance of the working classes. Nevertheless, hundreds have been arrested, and generally these have been sentenced to 15 years' imprisonment. A great number of imprisoned deserters, broken by solitary confinement, have been released and sent back to the ranks.

Disobedience and defiance of officers is common at the front, according to the correspondent's information, and a similar spirit is shown in the munition factories, where the workers deliberately are slowing up, with the result that the output has been seriously decreased.

"Foghorn" McDonald Discharged, Wore Uniform, Arrested

Declares He Signed on for Duration of War and Six Months After—Disputes Government's Right to Discharge Him—Summary Trial Fixed.

MONTREAL, Sept. 9.—Can the Canadian Military authorities, discharge a soldier during the duration of the war?

This is the point at issue, in the arrest of Major Neil (Foghorn) MacDonald for wearing the King's uniform after he had been notified of his discharge.

In the beginning of the war Neil MacDonald, well known from one end of Canada to the other, volunteered for war. He was not of the tender year's class that the service demanded, his age at that time being 54. But the age limit of 45 was no barrier for him. Solemnly and with malice aforethought only to the extent that the wanted first of all to serve his King and County, Neil MacDonald declared that he was just 39 years of age. The attestation paper was made out accordingly and duly signed, witnessed and filed.

That done Private Neil MacDonald donned the uniform. And Private MacDonald still intends to wear that uniform until the peace overture is played or the cold hand of death shall intervene.

Eventually the 54 year old private, found himself "over there" and in the midst of things that kill or make. From one stage of importance to another he advanced in rank, becoming in turn a sergeant cook, transport sergeant, lieutenant in charge of the battalion transport.

Then when the Forestry Corps was formed, he was transferred to that branch of the service, on account of his intimate knowledge of Canadian lumbering methods. This transfer caused his return from France to England, where he was in charge of a company of foresters in the Windsor Castle forests. His work was so well done there that he eventually was awarded major's rank. One day Major McDonald, who had been three full years overseas, was granted a two months' leave to Canada.

The story is now soon ended. During Major MacDonald's leave to Canada he was one day notified that he was discharged. That event happened very early in the present year, since which time he has received no pay. He is understood to have informed Ottawa times without number that he signed up for the duration of the war, and six months thereafter, or until his services were no longer required. Major MacDonald says that the war is not yet over, and until it is, his contract does not expire. About the six months after. Well, he says that is another story, if the Government don't want him then, he will don mufti without a murmur.

Faced Court To-day.

Following his arrest at the Corona Hotel last evening at the hands of Detectives Laberge and Lavoie, acting on the complaint of the Provost Marshal, Major MacDonald was arraigned before Judge Cusson this morning on a charge of wearing the uniform of an officer from March 23 last to the present date, while not on duty and without permission. The accused was represented by W. K. McKeown, K.C., who stated that his client would strongly contest the accusation, and asked for a summary trial, which was fixed by the judge for September 13.

The prosecution, which is in the hands at Louis Gosselin, K.C., acting for the Provost Marshal, contends that Major McDonald was struck off the atcual duty list on March 23, and was placed in the reserve. He ceased to have authority to wear his uniform under routine orders. Moreover, under order-in-council No. 17, he could not again don his uniform without permission of the officer commanding the military district. The maximum punishment upon conviction for the offence of which Major McDonald is accused, is a $100 fine or three months' imprisonment.

ARMY PUTS BAN ON LETTERS OF SOLDIERS' GODMOTHERS

BOSTON. — Soldiers' godmothers must give up corresponding with the men of the British and Canadian armies, according to an order received at the British and Canadian recruiting mission to-day.

The military authorities are said to have found that the practice has resulted in the obtaining of important military information by the enemy, and although all persons who write to soldiers are not under suspicion, it has been deemed wise to eliminate this practice, in which chances have to be taken.

Munitions Makers Have Great Chance

Big Overflow of American Orders Due for Canada.

OTTAWA, Sept. 6.—Canadian makers of munitions in recent months have secured American orders to the amount of nearly one hundred million dollars, and the prospects for the orders being doubled and trebled in the near future are said to be most promising.

The United States campaign of expasion of war effort, as has been pointed out, is on such an elaborate scale as to tax all of their own industries and cause a big overflow to Canada. There are consequently the greatest possibilities for Canadian manufacturers benefitting with orders to an extent much in excess of the past.

The discrepancy in prices paid for munitions in the United States and Canada in certain cases is explained by the fact that on the other side, manufacturers new to the business have, on the initial orders, been allowed a rate having regard to their capital outlay, as was the case at the inception of the shell business here. When the industry is fully established, the situation is different, and no allowance is made for the primary outlays on plant.

The appeal of the Munition Board for increased output has met with a splendid response by munition makers all over the country. The prescribed limit is being fully lived up to, and the prices allowed are regarded as wholly satisfactory.

PRUNES AND VICTORY.

The Butt and Bane of the Boarder on the Way to Berlin.

In the piping times of peace the prune was the butt of cheap wits and the bane of the boarder. Now when the acid test of utility and palatability is applied the despised prune steps into the preferred class—at least on the American Army bill of fare. It has won its way solely on its own merit. The counts in its favour are food value, tonic value and value as a confection. It nourishes, stimulates and delights.

The Surgeon General of the army himself testifies to the loyal and helpful support of the once belittled fruit. He has added his recommendation to the approving report of this subsistence division. This report tells us that out of the 1917 crop 20,000,000 pounds of prunes have been consumed by our fighting men. Based on size fifty-five, which is the trade designation of the average prune, the total number consumed would be 1,100,000,000. Placed side by side it is quite possible that this total of prunes wouldn't reach from the American trenches to Berlin, but each prune, no doubt, is doing its best to help the Yankee fighters cover the distance.

There would be a sort of poetical justice in the circumstance if the cheerful idiot and the other boarders whose table wit lingered longest about the patient prune could meet it over there in Flanders and in Picardy and find it honoured and extolled as the food of the fighting men.—Cleveland Plain Dealer.

The police raided a gambling den recently. The names and addresses of those caught on the premises were taken and in due course they summoned to appear in court.

"What is your trade?" the Judge asked one of them.

"A Locksmith," was the answer.

"What were you doing when the police entered?"

"Well, your honor," came the response "I was just making a bolt for the door."

"The Girl Who Had No God"

By MARY ROBERTS RINEHART
Author of "The Man in Lower Ten," "The After House," Etc.

"And now something else has happened and—" suddenly the chief beat his desk with his fist—"I am pretty sick of it."

Under perfect control as he was at critical moments, the Russian's hands had a way of twitching. So now he flicked the ash from his cigarette, and was politely interested.

"What happened last night?" he inquired.

"I think you know. If you don't I will tell you. Yesterday morning a tremendous collection was taken up at the church of Saint Jude's to build a new parish house in place of the one that burned down. The rector had been away; the assistant rector took charge of the money."

"I see."

"Of course you see. What I would like to know is why you fellows——"

Boroday spread out his hands in his foreign way.

"I fear you give me great credit. I do not deserve it."

"—Why you fellows," the Chief went on resolutely, "waited to do this job until the rector who is old and infirm, had gone away, and left a husky young assistant in his place? And that isn't all I want to know."

"In any way that I can assist you——"

"What the devil do you mean," yelled the Chief, "by shooting a man down and then going away and leaving the money in his pockets? It's—it's crude—it's wasteful!"

The Russian's fingers twitched in spite of him. The Chief saw it, and smiled under his heavy mustache.

"Do you mean that somebody shot this—er—assistant you speak of? That is rather sad. Was there—much money?"

"Seventy-eight thousand dollars," said the Chief, and put his cigar back in his mouth. "There is a story behind it, Boraday, and it's that story I am going to get. I'm warning you because you've played pretty square with me. I needed that pearl in my business."

Boroday rose.

"All right, Chief," he said. "I am sorry about young Ward. I hope he wasn't killed."

"He wasn't killed," replied the chief—"And I haven't said that his name was Ward. If you haven't had your breakfast yet, we might breakfast together. I overslept and haven't had time for anything."

Ward came back to consciousness in the great four-poster bedstead in which old Hilary Kingston had lain in state. He felt very little pain and no curiosity at all as to his surroundings, only an overwhelming lassitude and weariness of life. Something—something that mattered very much, had gone out of his existence. He could not remember what it was.

There was a uniformed nurse by the bed. He had a curious antipathy to asking for anything. He had made a promise of secrecy to some one—about what?

Towards evening he had managed to evolve out of his reviving consciousness some faint memory of what had happened to him. He remembered that he was walking down a hill and that he had fallen forward. For quite a half hour, late in the afternoon, he struggled to remember why he had gone down the hill.

Then he got it. He had been up to the hall to see Elinor. It was Elinor who had gone out of his life. Elinor! Elinor!

He slept very little during the night and as his fever rose he called the nurse "Elinor," and begged her frantically to tell him that something was not true.

"Of course it is not true,' said the nurse, who was accustomed to being called various things.

"You did not mean it at all?" He eyed her wistfully. The nurse was large and plain with a wide flat face. "You with the eyes of a saint," said poor Ward, "to try to tell me that you are wicked. I see that it is impossible. I think that I can sleep now."

The nurse put her hand, which was large and ill shaped but very light and tender, on his head. And so he went to sleep.

When he was quite settled, the nurse went out into the hall where Elinor was sitting on a straight chair. She had sat there almost all the time since Ward was carried up the night before.

"He is sound asleep," she said smilingly. "He thinks I am someone named "Elinor," and he calls me that. As my own name is Sarah, it's rather pleasant."

Ward had been shot on Sunday night. By the following Wednesday he was out of danger.

On that same Wednesday the rector of Saint Jude's brought himself and his rheumatism back to the parish, and saved his daughter's reason.

For three days Elinor had hardly slept or eaten. Never once had she been in Ward's room, but always day and night she was just outside. When on that Wednesday evening the doctor had said Ward would live, she went down once more into her garden.

Many times during those three days had Elinor tried to pray to Ward's God and found herself voiceless and inarticulate. But now out of the depth of her great relief, came welling the first prayer of her life. She stood waist-deep among her phlox and larkspur.

"I thank Thee," she said; "I thank Thee."

Nothing had been heard of Huff. The assault on the assistant rector of Saint Jude had been of a line with the other mysterious happenings around the village. The little town was hag-ridden with fear. Extra constables had been sworn in, and from the hall, during her long night vigils, Elinor had seen many lighted windows where before there had been but one.

The problem of her future began to obess her. It was plainly impossible to stay on here—not that she feared exposure; she was quite past fear—but the thought of going on with her life was intolerable. To meet Ward, to see again the scorn and the loathing in his eyes, more than all, to continue to deserve them those were the things that to Elinor seemed worse than death itself.

All the philosophy that old Hilary had taught her failed her now. The revolt of the individual against laws made for the masses—what had it brought her except isolation and grief. Of what use was revolt? All must go through the mills of the gods. She knew that now. There were no exceptions. And something else she had learned: that if one is to live through great crises one must have a higher power to turn to for help. She had felt it vaguely at the time of her father's death. Sitting outside of Ward's door she had known it. Every breath had been a prayer to something, she knew not what, to save him.

"I thank Thee," she said again.

The phlox and the larkspur quivered about her as if under the touch of a gentle hand.

Boroday had been free for three days, but beyond a telephone message announcing his release she had heard nothing of him. Over the wire he had advised extreme caution. She judged from that that things were not going well.

She knew that Huff's reckless crime would demand a scapegoat. There were bound to be arrests. All this Elinor knew quite well. It was in such an atmosphere that she had drawn her earliest breaths—the play of cunning against cunning, wit against wit.

She did not send for Boroday. She dared not. But because the intimacy between her and the middle-aged Russian had always been very close, he seemed to feel her need, and so on that Wednesday night, an hour or so after midnight, he came.

Old Henriette came down and tapped softly at Elinor's door.

"Boroday," she whispered. "He has rung from the arbor."

That was one of Hilary's devices; a hidden wire from the arbor to the house. It prevented collisions. Unless otherwise summoned, no member of his band ever came directly to the house.

Elinor went out and found him there. He bent over her hand and kissed it as was his wont, and then realizing that she was crying, he held out his arms and she went into them. Very tender was the Russian with her that night, very fatherly. He put her into one of the arbour seats, and sat down beside her.

"Now tell me," he commanded, everything from the start. It was Walter, I know. But why?"

When she did not speak the Russian nodded.

"Jealousy, of course, but what madness!"

There in the arbor, with her hand between two of his, Elinor sobbed out the story of the pearl and her attempt to return it. Huff's threat against Ward, Ward's evening visit and the scene between them; and last of all the shot that had nearly ended everything in this world for Ward and for her. Boroday listened quietly; better than old Hilary ever could, he understood. He had been reared on an ancient faith.

"He is recovering?"

"Yes."

"And he cares for you, of course?"

"No. I think, perhaps, before he knew——"

You want a healthy summer tan. But sometimes you get it too quickly and then there is a few days of suffering.

The application of Dr. Chase's Ointment takes out the stinging and burning and leaves the skin delightfully soft and smooth.

Because it is equally effective in relieving stings of insects and ivy poisoning as well as chafing and skin irritations it is invaluable in the summer camp.

PARIS AND BERLIN.

Both Know What It Is to See Foreign Armies Within Their Gates.

Paris has had severe experiences in the way of surrenders to invading armies. On March 31, 1814, the allied armies that had hemmed in Napoleon entered the French capital and occupied it with a force of 230,000 troops. After Napoleon's escape from Elba and his defeat at Waterloo the armies of the allies again entered Paris July 7, 1815. Thus the great city had to surrender to its enemies twice within sixteen months. Fifty-five years later—Jan. 28, 1871—the city surrendered again, this time to the victors in the Franco-German war, after a brisk bombardment.

Berlin has seen foreign troops enter its gates no fewer than three times in the last 200 years. The first time—curiously enough, the conquerors were Austrian troops under General Haddick, who entered Berlin in 1757, when Frederick the Great was engaged in fighting the French on the Rhine. During their stay the Austrians imposed a fine of £30,000 on the city, as well as commandeering a huge quantity of provisions and equipment for their troops.

It was only just over three years after when both the Russian and Austrian troops, then allies of one another, entered Berlin. This time the city was fined £300,000.

The time that will be best remembered, however, was the entry of Napoleon into Berlin after the victory of Jena. Napoleon inflicted a very heavy fine on the Germans and forced them to feed his troops.—London Tit-Bits.

Saved His Dog.

Lord Rosebery is a great lover of animals, and on one occasion he actually went so far as to risk his life for a favorite dog. His lordship was on board a steamer when suddenly his dog fell overboard. Much distressed Lord Rosebery asked the captain to stop the ship—a request which was refused.

"If it were a man overboard," said the captain, "why, then, of course"—

"Oh," said Lord Rosebery, "that can be easily managed," and, to the captain's astonishment, he leapt overboard after the dog himself.

Naturally, the steamer was promptly stopped, a boat was lowered with all speed, and both dog and master were rescued, none the worse for their experience.—London Tit-Bits.

Death by Freezing.

It has never been clearly understood why severe cold causes death, but a variety of reasons have been assumed—the accumulation of carbonic acid paralysis of the vasomotor centers loss of heat, accumulation of blood in the heart owing to stagnant circulation, anemia of the brain and destruction of the red blood corpuscle.—Philadelphia Press.

Important Detail.

Bacon—I see your brother is in business again.

Egbert—Yes.

"Is it a gainful occupation?"

"I guess so, but it's hard to tell whether he'll gain money or experience."—Yonkers Statesman.

WHOOPING COUGH.

Mr. Arthur Hainge, Ashton Farm, Perley, Sask., writes: "Two years ago whooping cough was very bad in this part of the country; our eight months old boy caught it and had a very severe attack. A neighbor advised the use of Dr. Chase's Syrup of Linseed and Turpentine and we gave it and nothing else with splendid results. When the older brother took the whooping cough we used this medicine promptly and prevented serious trouble, as the cough passed off in two or three days".

OUR DAILY SHORT STORY

The Helper

By MYRTLE BARRINGER

"A bird with a broken wing," observed John Roscoe, banker. "That about expresses it."

It did, indeed, for although the allusion covered a human being, the same Warren Boyd, was one of those fine sterling natures that made one seek for sentiment and delicacy in describing him. He was passing down the street engrossed in sad and serious thoughts, and his bearing was that of a man carrying a heavy burden.

"I like and respect the fellow," the magnate continued, "but he is too deep in for me to help. It's a pity, though, some strong financing power could not come to his aid. His project is sane, worthy, and its execution would be a credit to the town."

Capable, intelligent, not yet thirty, Warren Boyd felt like a knight errant unhorsed at the first round in the tournament of effort and ambition. His powers of vision were strong, his ideals high and all his sympathies along the line of concrete good to humanity. He had owned a full square of ground in Lowden, and had aimed to make it a nucleus for an institution where homeless or abandoned children, wherever found, should find a refuge amidst country air, and vernal surroundings.

Boyd donated the land. He proposed building a forty thousand-dollar structure, comfortable and modern in all of its appointments. He relied on outside donations to operate this asylum, and the promise of these from social settlement and religious centers was encouraging. Finally he found a benevolently inclined man of means who agreed to advance the money needed, accepting as security a bond issue covering site and improvements.

The money was paid into the local bank as needed. The walls of the building began to rise. Then came a terrible blow to the sanguine Boyd. He was dazed when the banker informed him that his philanthropic backer had failed, with less than half the money promised provided.

"Boyd's folly," people called this wreck of a true man's hopes. Boyd sought aid vainly. He left the village one day, almost aimlessly following a secluded road. He had got so that he shunned company, and as he saw a little ahead a man and woman standing under a tree he turned aside. Boyd recognized the lady. She was Mrs. Helen Wayne, who had come to the town a few months agone and had settled down to a secluded life at The Poplars, as if some mystery surrounded her life.

Finally Boyd discerned that the two had separated, the lady pursuing her way in the direction of her home. Boyd resumed his stroll. As he neared the spot where the two had stood he paused to pick up a little package. It was held together by an elastic band and appeared to comprise letters or documents. On the outside was written the name: "Helen Wayne."

"Of course the lady dropped it," reasoned Boyd, and hurried after Mrs. Wayne.

"Madam," he detained her, "I found this packet where you were standing down the road." His courtesy, his fine statuesque face, his respectful manner enlisted the attention of the lady. She smiled her thanks. Then, half opening the packet, a muffled scream escaped her lips.

"Pardon me—I thank you. You have—you have saved me!"

Boyd noted her confusion and agitation in open amazement. Mrs. Wayne fairly reeled as she made her way homeward.

The next day a telephone message summoned Boyd to the bank. Mr. Roscoe greeted him with genial smile and handshake.

"I have great news for you," he announced. "A person, not wishing to be known for the present, called upon me this morning and offered to take up the forty thousand-dollar bonds we hold in escrow, pay back Blake the money he has advanced and finance you for the full completion of your building."

"Oh, it cannot be true!" gasped the bewildered Boyd.

But it was true, and hope, confidence, glowing happiness seemed to fill his being, renewed. Once more, his heart in his work, Warren Boyd started forth a man among men. And then one day the banker told him the name of his mysterious almoner—Mrs. Helen Wayne.

Boyd was not the man to repress his emotion. Once again at her lonely, but lovely home, he infused her with his own fervent idealism as he poured forth his thanks.

The nobility of his nature inspired her to tell him her life history. An unworthy husband had died, leaving her a fortune. Their marriage had been a hasty one and there had appeared a blackmailer, who threatened to dispute the validity of her marriage. He had the proofs of the same that Mrs. Wayne could not secure. It was he who had dropped the packet, and its restoration to his victim had enabled her to defy him.

In the holy hush of a beautiful twilight, one month later, Warren Boyd told his love to this peerless woman.

"You could offer no honor dearer to my weary, famished soul than to ask me to share your noble life work," she said, "and together we will impart the sunlight of care and love to the shadowed lives of the little ones."

THE JOY OF MOTHERHOOD

Came to this Woman after Taking Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound to Restore Her Health

Ellensburg, Wash.—"After I was married I was not well for a long time and a good deal of the time was not able to go about. Our greatest desire was to have a child in our home and one day my husband came back from town with a bottle of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound and wanted me to try it. It brought relief from my troubles. I improved in health so I could do my housework; we now have a little one, all of which I owe to Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound."—Mrs. O. S. JOHNSON, R. No. 3, Ellensburg, Wash.

There are women everywhere who long for children in their homes yet are denied this happiness on account of some functional disorder which in most cases would readily yield to Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound.

Such women should not give up hope until they have given this wonderful medicine a trial, and for special advice write Lydia E. Pinkham Medicine Co., Lynn, Mass. The result of 40 years experience is at your service.

American Literature.

Edwin Bjorkman, seizing upon the fact that there is a literary man in the White House, has written "An Open Letter to President Wilson on Behalf of American Literature," in which, without implying that the president is at the present time unoccupied, he strongly urges him to foster the literature of America. He compares what we do for literature with the encouragement offered by a small country like Norway through national institutes, prizes, etc.

ECZEMA ON BABY'S EAR

Mrs. F. Clarke, Belmont, Man., writes: "My baby had eczema on her ear. The sore was very bad and nothing seemed to do her very much good. Hearing of the remarkable cure Dr. Chase's Ointment was making, we sent for some, and after the third application the sore began to heal I am glad to say that it is quite well now Ointment. We cannot recommend it is and we give the credit to Dr. Chase's preparation too highly."

BANISHED THE SPIRITS.

Brides May Now Safely Cross Japan's Bridge of Ill Omen.

Japan's bridge of ill omen has been exorcised of its evil spirit, and no longer is it known as the Bridge of Strange Disappearance. Hitherto no bride would cross it, for it was the firm belief that if she did so she would surely be divorced. Recently the Shinto priests came in procession to do battle with the forces of darkness. Duly robed and equipped with patent charms, they formed themselves into two parties. One recited prayers while the other passed to and fro over the bridge, striking with long staffs at the spirits which they alone were empowered to see. This done the bridge was pronounced "open" and safe for the most timid bride.

The incident to which the bridge owes its ill omened reputation dates from the thirteenth century. In the neighborhood, says tradition, lived one Nakano, a wealthy but unpatriotic man, whose constant fear was that his goods would be seized to swell the national war chest. So he buried his treasure in boxes by the river, slew the servant who had assisted him and cast the body into its dark waters. His sin was visited upon the daughter, who, thrice married, was thrice left a widow. Distracted, the unhappy girl fled from her father's house, but in crossing the bridge she disappeared and was never seen again.—Argonaut.

Chicago's Harps.

Up to a few years ago London and Paris were the great harp making centers. Now London has lagged far behind Paris, while Chicago is making and selling about three times as many harps as Paris. Orchestras in the royal theaters in nearly all the capitals of Europe are equipped with harps made on the west side of Chicago.

CARNATION MILK comes to you in sealed air-tight cans—safe from contamination, sweet fresh, pure.

It is milk—nothing more.

But it is richer than ordinary milk. For it has all the cream, all the milk solids of the original whole milk.

It is evaporated to the consistency of cream. Then sealed air-tight and sterilized.

No preservatives are added.

And no sweetening.

So Carnation Milk may be used for cooking, for soups, for creaming vegetables. It is even better than ordinary milk for such purposes—and more economical (no waste). Because of its richness, less butter is needed to get the rich flavor you desire.

Add an equal quantity of water to Carnation Milk and you "bring back" the original milk—the safe milk for children to drink—purer than most milk you could give them.

If your recipe calls for skimmed milk, dilute Carnation Milk with more water.

Undiluted Carnation Milk may be used as cream in coffee or tea—and with cereals and fruit.

Your Grocer is the Carnation Milkman

He has Carnation Milk now. Ask him to send you three or four cans (new tall size, 16 oz.). Try it—for every milk use. Compare it with ordinary milk. Learn the convenience of using milk you can keep on the pantry shelf and use as you need it. Learn the satisfaction of serving rich milk that is uniformly sweet, pure and safe to drink.

Quite Natural.

There is a certain lawyer whose quick wit is said never to desert him, either in the courtroom or elsewhere. Not long ago a client entered his office and, throwing back his coat, exclaimed irritably:

"Why, sir, your office is as warm as an oven!"

"Why shouldn't it be?" asked the lawyer smilingly. "It is here that I make my bread."—London Tit-Bits.

Displaced.

SEVEN SOLDIERS ACCUSED OF MAIMING RIGHT HANDS

ROCKFORD, Ill. — Seven selective soldiers are held at Camp Grant on charges of malingering in an attempt to escape military duty, it was announced to-day, these out of a total of more than 100,000 men trained and equipped at the cantonment for the battle line. Names of the prisoners are withheld.

The seven offenders, each having a maimed right hand received under suspicious circumstances during the last month, are under heavy guard and are being treated as the lowest order of military prisoners.

No Girl Need Have A Blotched Face

Whether it be in capturing the heart of man or making her way through the world by the toil of her hands, a charming and pretty face gives any girl a big advantage. Poor complexion and rough sallow skin are caused by blood disorders. The cure is simple. Just use Dr. Hamilton's Pills, a reliable family remedy that has for years been the foremost blood remedy in America. That soft glow will return to the cheeks, the eyes will brighten, appetite will improve, and strength and endurance will come because sound health has been established. Get a 25c box of Dr. Hamilton's Pills to-day. Sold everywhere.

Discipline.

A doctor at the front writes to the "Tonics and Sedatives" column of the American Medical Association as follows: "The discipline in base hospitals in France precludes social relations between nurses and enlisted men. This is occasionally carried to extremes, as evidenced by the following incident: A certain nurse was found ringing the doorbell of the officers' quarters early one morning. When asked what she wanted, she replied that the villa in which she and the other nurses were quartered was on fire. After the fire had been extinguished, she was asked why she didn't give the alarm at once, instead of running the long distance to the officers' quarters. Her reply was: 'We aren't allowed to speak to enlisted men'."

A Drug Needed.

War conditions have cut off our supply of digitalis, and we are obliged to turn to our resources for the drug. Tinctures made from the wild species — foxglove — common in Washington and Oregon — compare favorably with those made from the imported article.

PRACTICAL HEALTH HINT.

Treatment of Bruises.

Bruises are not only very painful at times, but are disfiguring as well when on an exposed part of the body. They require quick action if they would be banished the hour they arrive. Once bruises begin to swell and take on a varied assemblage of colors it is almost impossible to do anything with them but let them run their course. Immediately after the hurt is the time to prevent them. In the first place, they should be given heat at once—that, just as intense as can be borne. For ten or twelve minutes lay hot cloths on the bruised flesh, replacing each cloth with a fresh one as soon as the heat in it lessens. Then dry the skin and bind loosely with a thin strip of absorbent cotton. Put together a mixture of, one part alcohol and three parts water. Moisten the cotton with this and as fast as it dries moisten it again. The rapid evaporation takes away the inflammation and is also delightfully cooling. Nor is any other antiseptic needed, as the alcohol kills any germs that may be present. After a half hour's treatment stop for an hour or so. Then if there is any sign of swelling or redness repeat, but usually one treatment is enough.

Jews In Austria.

The notices in the papers with regard to the violent anti-Semitism of a former member of the Austrian Reichsrat, and of the Vienna City Council, recall the violent scenes which used to be created in both public bodies as a result of this movement of racial hatred. Vienna indeed has passed through stormy days, the flames of hate having been fanned even by the recent Burgermeisters. But to these anti-Semitic demonstrations in the city of his journalistic and literary activities the world owes the great work of Dr. Herzl, "The Jewish State," which directly led to the Zionist movement for the restoration of the Jews to Palestine.

"A man dat shows spiteful envy," said Uncle Eben, "would mos' likely be a robber if he had a little more courage."

POSTIES VOTE TO JOIN WITH CLERK'S BODY

Changes in Constitution Made at Convention of Letter Carriers of Canada.

HAMILTON, Sept. 6.—At to-day's session of the convention of the Federated Letter Carriers of Canada, considerable discussion was aroused by the reading of a communication from the civil service employees, asking the support of the meeting in the case of Judge Morrison, who claimed exemption from income tax on the ground of being a Government employee. Various speakers thought they should not try to evade the question, but pay like other working people. No action was taken.

The executive report was discussed at length and finally adopted. Concerning the affiliation with the other branches of the service, R. H. Cox, of Toronto, stated that many of these would have nothing to do with organized labour. It was a matter for organization and not for one small section to try and force others in.

Western delegates explained the situation re amalgamation there, the question affecting a large number of men.

J. J. Reeves, of Toronto, stated the east was not nearly as ready for amalgamation as the west, as the eastern clerks to join the organization would have to give up their own association.

President McDonald scored the action of the clerks, who, he claimed, had gone behind the backs of the carriers and attempted to cut their throats. It should not be necessary for the carriers to beg the clerks to come in.

Pierre Minard, of Montreal, was also opposed to going to the clerks. A similar feeling was said to exist in Toronto.

A. McMordie suggested that the west should proceed to amalgamate at once, if ready. A campaign of education would have to be conducted in the east.

The vote to adopt the executive report re affiliation carried on a 34 to 17 division.

Clause Eliminated.

A number of amendments to the constitution were adopted. The clause defining the legality of Government employees striking and the question of sustenance allowance being allowed for members off duty was eliminated.

The matter of granting Alex. McMordie, the federated secretary-treasurer, an increase in salary was referred to the finance committee.

An amendment to establish a monthly publication in the interest of members was not adopted.

The convention approved the amendment that temporary carriers be placed on the same basis as permanent men, on annual increments and holidays. Hereafter any resolutions to the Government from branches, affecting the association, must go through the Federated Executive.

The Government, among other things, will be asked to abolish the present cap cover, mackintosh, leggins and provide sou'-wester hats, longer capes than at present, and higher and closer-fitting collars, waterproof overalls, all of which would give better protection to the mail and be more comfortable.

Want Boots and Overalls.

On request of the porters of Toronto an annual issue of boots and overalls was added to the request.

The executive was asked to press the demand for a Saturday half holiday for even months of the year, December excepted. Demands will also be made regarding suitable summer equipment. And union-made goods will be insisted upon.

The Government will be asked to replace men on active service to the grade they would have attained had they remained on duty at home.

LOWER PRICES WITH PEACE

We expect to see the prices of all products used largely in the manufacture of munitions decline sharply and drastically when peace arrives via Berlin. We expect to see the prices of nearly all other products—food, fuel, clothing, building material, etc.—decline very materially. That there will be a great demand for these products when peace comes, we do not doubt; it will not, however, be so urgent as the war's demands. It can wait a few days or weeks for lower prices. Besides, the freeing of thousands of workers and millions of men from war work will quickly increase the supply of peace products and lower their prices. Lower prices for steel, copper, chemicals, etc., will also lower the cost of producing food, fuel and clothing material. Within three months from the time the war stops we expect to see a decline of at least 20 per cent. in the cost of living. Wages, too, will decline sharply, even before our army is demobilized. The millions of workers now making munitions and war supplies will quickly begin to make peace products. Capital, too, will, we believe, quickly get plentiful and cheap to those whose credit is good. All of these changes will tend to lower the cost of living.—Advertising Age.

UNANIMOUS SPIRIT AT FRONT ONE OF CALM CONFIDENCE

BRITISH ARMY HEADQUARTERS, Sept. 5.—Reviewing the week's progress, the unanimous spirit at the front is one of calm confidence. Everything has gone excellently well. The great machinery of our initiative has continued to work perfectly and smoothly. The way in which transport facilities creep forward in the wake of our advancing line is a marvel of organization. To-day broad-gauge trains are carrying troops and stores into places which a week ago were in enemy occupation.

THE KINDEST WAY.

The kindest way is always best,
Oh keep this thought in mind,
When tempted harsher ways to test,
Just think: now is this kind?

The kindest way is always right,
God help us right to seek,
Lest we a brother's hope might blight
By the harsh word we speak.

nd gentleness will make thee great,
This greatness all may gain,
To give without a thought of hate
Or word that causeth pain.

A kindly word, a touch of God,
Committed to our care,
A blessed ministry of love,
That we with angels share.

Enfold those treasures leaf by leaf,
And drop them on your way,
Thos rosy petals heal the grief,
And in the heart will stay.

Those kindly words, Oh pass them on
And wreathe them round with love;
They are the gems that make our crown
In the bright world above.

God will inspire each good desire,
And he will make them live,
When time shall quench her earthly fire
Still they shall fragrance give.

J. H. Taylor.

Wretch!

The bride was overwhelmingly pleased with the progress she was making in cooking, and hubby was always so encouraging and so kind in making excuses if by any chance she did make a mistake when guests were present. This same opinion of her forbearing husband might have continued indefinitely had she not inadvertently made use of a bit of slang. Noticing that Harry was a trifle downcast when the dinner was about half over, she exclaimed gayly: "Cheer up, Harry! The worst is yet to come!"

Her husband glanced up quickly and, with a despairing look, inquired: "What! Have you made a pie?"—Argonaut.

Discriminating.

Some time ago a traveling man, waiting in a retail store in Richmond to speak to the buyer, said to an elderly colored woman:

"Aunty, what is the population of Richmond?"

"What's dat, boss?"

"I said about how many people live in Richmond?"

"Oh, dat's what you all wants to know. Well, boss, I don't 'zac'ly know, but I 'spects about 125,000, countin' de whites."—Everybody's.

Expert Themselves.

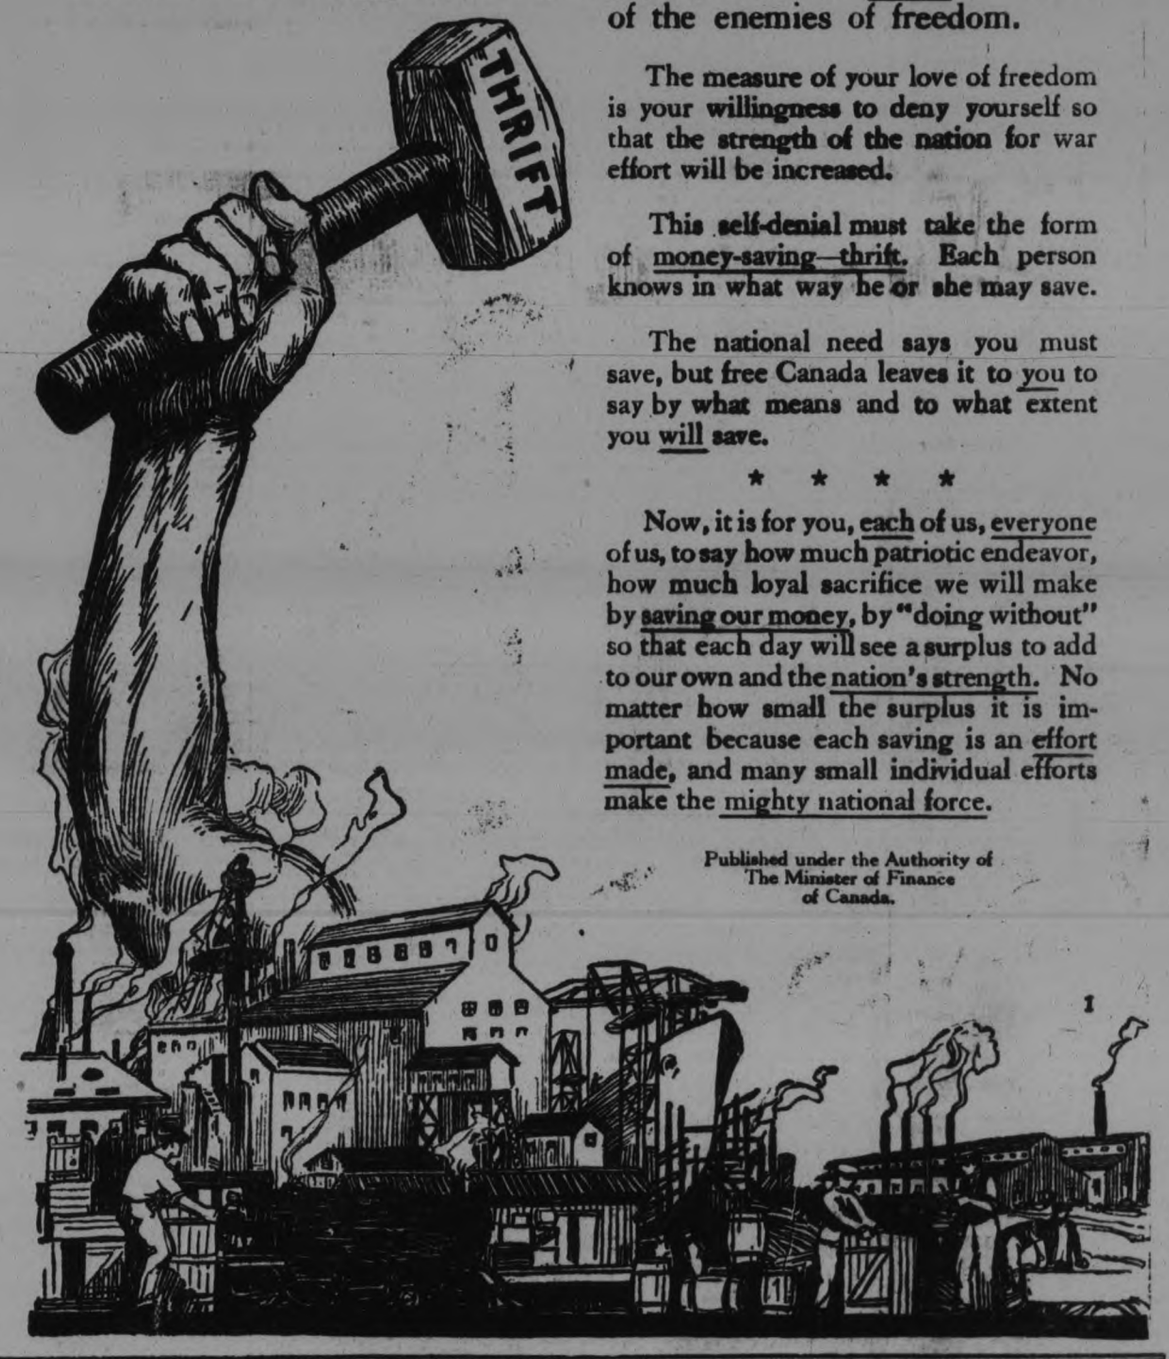
Build up the Mighty National Force

FOR fifty years the Teuton peoples have been trained, disciplined, whipped, into servile cogs of an implacable military machine, by which is maintained the Prussian doctrine of might, and the Kaiser's autocracy. The Teutons deny themselves, they make sacrifices, because they are trained or forced to do so, but they do it.

The peoples of the Allied nations must make great sacrifices and tremendous efforts in order to defeat the enemies of freedom, but because they are free peoples it is left largely to the individual to say what or how much self-denial each will practice.

So if freedom is to prevail individuals must make voluntary sacrifices which in the aggregate will be greater than the forced sacrifices of the enemies of freedom.



The measure of your love of freedom is your willingness to deny yourself so that the strength of the nation for war effort will be increased.

This self-denial must take the form of money-saving—thrift. Each person knows in what way he or she may save.

The national need says you must save, but free Canada leaves it to you to say by what means and to what extent you will save.

* * * *

Now, it is for you, each of us, everyone of us, to say how much patriotic endeavor, how much loyal sacrifice we will make by saving our money, by "doing without" so that each day will see a surplus to add to our own and the nation's strength. No matter how small the surplus it is important because each saving is an effort made, and many small individual efforts make the mighty national force.

FOCH.

Grave-eyed he looks at us from printed page,
His face, lean, worn and lined, intent, grim, sage,
Most soldierly yet with the thinker's brow—
Soldier of France, and our great leader now!

Not with the Prussian War-Lord's bristling mien,
No air of pomp or of prestige; serene
Unchanging confidence is his whose might Springs from the sacred sense of being right!

No flow of windy words, no pageantry
Of arrogance and pride; the dignity
Of one whose plans spell victory, yet know
A code of honour to a perjured foe!

The son of a Republic, born to be
Its saving, selfless "man of Destiny",
Strong in retreat, yet stronger in advance,
The brain, the hope, the driving Will of France!

Grave-eyed and sad he looks, as one whose part
To wear the scars of battle o'er his heart.
The wounds of France are his—her grief sublime
And her untarnished glory for All Time!

ASK HALF MILLION FOR WAR WORK.

Canadian Knights of Columbus will Conduct Campaign During Week of September 15th.

The Canadian Knights of Columbus are to make a Canada-wide appeal for finncial assistance for their overseas work on behalf of Canadian soldiers. For some time past they have been conducting this work on a comprehensive scale in connection with erecting and equipping army huts and chapels for the boys in England and France.

Last year, under the direction of Mr. J. L. Murray, State Deputy for Ontario, $60,000 was colected for this work in this province alone. The work has gone on with increasing vigor ever since, and has grown to such an extent that a Dominion wide appeal has become imperative. The week of September 15th has been announced as the time for the Knights' drive for $500,000 for its war relief work, and they are looking for a whole-hearted response from Canadian citizens. Their organizing forces are working at top speed and everything is expected to be in readiness for the launching of their campaign on the 15th of next month.

U. S. TROOPS ON ALL FRONTS PASS 1,600,000 MARK.

WASHINGTON, Sept. 4.—General March announced to-day that the total embarkation of American soldiers for all fronts, including the Siberian expedition, had passed the 1,600,000 mark on August 31.

In answer to a question, General March said it was estimated that more than 250,000 had landed in France during August. The record for monthly shipment, he added, was 285,000.

French Only Four Miles From St. Quentin and Are Still Advancing

Allies Now Hold the Crozat Canal and Cavalry Patrols Are Close to La Fere—Enemy Moving Artillery.

OFFICIAL REPORTS

LONDON (Official), Sept. 9.—Last night was quiet along the British front, except for artillery activity and minor raiding operations. Southeast of Lens in the region of Arleux-En-Gohelle a German raiding party was repulsed. The text of the statement reads:

THE STATEMENT.

A hostile raiding party was successfully repulsed last night north of Arleux-En-Gohelle. With exception of artillery activity in different localities on both sides, particularly in the neighbourhood of the Arras-Cambrai Road, and in the LaBassee Canal and Ypres sectors, there is nothing to report.

LONDON (Official), Sept. 9.—The British this morning were attacking Douzeaucourt southeast of Havrincourt wood. They are on the western and northern edges of Epehy within 2½ miles of the Hindenburg line opposite Le Catelet, and their patrols are reported to have passed through the village.

FRENCH OFFICIAL.

PARIS (Official), Sept. 9.—North of the Somme, French troops have made further advances in the direction of Clastres and have occupied Lomot Farm. French troops have crossed the Crozt Canal opposite Lys, three miles southwest of Cendeuil. Two strong German counter attacks were repulsed by the French in the Laffaux region northeast of Soissons. The French took eighty prisoners belonging to five different regiments.

PRESSING FORWARD.

WITH THE BRITISH ARMIES IN FRANCE, Sept. 9.—By the Associated Press.—Field Marshal Haig's forces this morning advanced in the area west and northwest of St. Quentin, and are now five miles from the Hindenburg line. They are still pressing forward. The British made a formidable thrust this morning north of the Arras-Cambrai Road in Flanders. It is stated that the Germans have removed their artillery east of the Lys River.

Pushing ahead to-day on the front between Peronne and St. Quentin, British patrols have occupied the towns of Vermand and Vendelles, north of St. Quentin.

DEFEND ST. QUENTIN.

LONDON, Sept. 9.—The Germans are making every preparation to defend St. Quentin and Laon against the advancing Allies, despatches from the front indicated to-day. French troops are reaching striking distance of St. Quentin. They are reported close to LaFere, a strong point in the Hindenburg defense system. A German concentration of heavy guns has been observed north of Craonne (on a line between Rheims and Laon, just above the Chemin Des Dames)—in their night reports the British and French War Offices noted steady progress, and stronger enemy resistance in some places.

The French are now only four miles from St. Quentin and cavalry patrols are close to LeFere, it was learned this afternoon.

The French now hold the Crozat Canal on practically its whole length.

DRIVER O. H. WILSON

Who was wounded in the hand on August 10 th. He is a son of Mr. and Mrs. Robert Wilson, 279 Thomas street. A letter received on Saturday states that Driver Wilson is making rapid progress towards recovery. He was a member of the 52nd Battery.

French Are Advancing

The Occupation of La Fere is Looked for at Early Date.

ALLIED OBJECTIVE

(United Press.)

PARIS, Sept. 9.—French forces have reached positions close to La Fere, and the occupation of the city is probable, according to battle front advices.

La Fere is one of the principal Allied objectives. It is behind the Hindenburg line, twelve miles south of St. Quentin. The town is one of the strongest points in the Hindenburg defence system and is of the highest strategic importance.

Westenhaver, charged with violation of the Espionage Act. Debs was secretly indicted by the grand jury here on June 29 on ten counts for remarks alleged to have been made in an address before the State Convention of the Ohio party at Canton, June 16th last. If convicted Debs faces a sentence of twenty years' imprisonment and a fine of $10,000 on each count.

RUSH AMERICAN TROOPS TO FRONT

British Minister of War Urges the Necessity of Continuing to Rush Troops and Supplies to the Front.

SPEEDY VICTORY

(United Press.)

London, Sept. 9 — Urging the necessity of continuing to rush American troops to France, Lord Milner, the British Minister of War, in reply to an enquiry, wrote the following letter to the United Press correspondent:

"You tell me that in certain circles in the United States the view is current that our recent successes on the western front have made the necessity less urgent of hurrying over American troops to France, and that America's splendid war effort can now proceed at a more leisurely pace.

CAN WIN THE WAR.

"I quite understand how this view may be held, but I profoundly disagree with it. It seems to me on the contrary that the morale of our recent success is just the opposite. The remarkable achievement of the Allies since July 18th is of the first importance, for it shows that we can win the war; but most assuredly we will not win the war if we get the idea that we can afford to slacken our efforts. This applies to every allied nation. It is the duty of the European allies to abate nothing of their energy and indeed to strive as if America were not behind them.

"America's strength, great as it is, can only be relied upon to bring about a decision if it is added to the forces of the European allies, and not substituted for them.

"I do not think I need name reasons why our pressure, both military and economic, must not be abated for an instant. From a military point of view, successes are of no value unless they are followed up, and to reap the fruits of them the enemy must be given no rest. Weakening of his civilian as well as his military morale depends upon unceasing pressure.'

A SPEEDY VICTORY.

"Again we cannot permit Germany to recruit her strength by exploiting her occupied territories in the east, and the only way to prevent such recruitment is to allow her no leisure. Lastly it is of vital importance to all the allied belligerents to bring the war to an end at the earliest possible date with a view to conserving a reasonable balance of resources for the work of reconstruction.

"Surely every thinking man must agree that a great effort to win an early victory is better business than a more languid and protracted campaign. Costs, both in men and money will be increased, and not lessened, by delay."

LITTLE GIRL SEVERELY HURT

Was Knocked Down by an Automobile.

Agnes Costello, 476 Aylmer street, was severely bruised and hurt internally on Saturday evening at 4.30 o'clock when a car driven by Simeon Arnott, Janetville, ran over her.

The little girl, who was taking some relatives to the Harwood boat, was about to cross the road on Aylmer street at the side of the Y.W.C.A. and had just stepped down off the curb when Mr. Arnott came down Simcoe street. Thinking he was about to turn up Aylmer street, the party continued down Aylmer. However, he apparently changed his mind suddenly, and proceeded down east on Simcoe street. In his quick turn he hit the lady and child with Miss Costello, and dragged her about 30 feet down Simcoe street before he could stop his car. Directly he stopped he picked her up and Dr. McNulty was called. The little girl had just recovered from a long illness in St. Joseph's Hospital, and the shock of the accident may prove very serious. Her two companions were bruised and cut also in the accident.

AMERICANS ATTACK THE KEY POSITION

American Batteries Hurl Thousands of Projectiles into the Strong German Defences at Le Petite Montagne.

RIPPING UP WIRE

(United Press Service.)
(By Webb Miller.)

WITH THE AMERICAN ARMIES IN FRANCE, Sept. 9.—American artillery has opened a steady bombardment of Le Petite Montagne, a powerfully fortified height which rises 250 feet at the point where the German line leaves the Aisne and dips towards Rheims. This height is the key position to the English front in that region. It is fortified with a strong trench systems and its slopes and crest are defended with thick bolts of barbed wire. American batteries, including many six inch guns, are hurling hundreds of shells into the slopes and on to the streets, ripping up wire, searching out deeply indented wooded ravines infested with machine guns, which command the valleys on each side, battering the trenches to ruins and generally making the mountain stronghold most unhealthy for the Germans. The constant thunder of six inch guns was rolling over the battlefield as the American artillery lashed the heights with a terrific hail of shells. German batteries behind the Aisne replied, bombarding Fismes and the back areas, dropped sight explosives haphazard over miles of country in the search for our gun positions.

Bridges Torn Up.

Simultaneously the American artillery with wonderful accuracy was smiting the Aisne bridge beside the Germans who are still on the southern bank of the river. As this was cabled five bridges had been torn up.

The enemy line from the Aisne south-eastward across the crests of the plateau toward Rheims is much the same as it was Saturday. The Germans early to-day were holding with determination the tops of the table lands. It is mainly the strength of Le Petite Montagne, now being battered, which has slowed up the American advance toward the Aisne on the right of the line. A few more prisoners have been taken, including five who hid out for the purpose of surrendering when our troops reached their places of concealment. One was accompanied by a trained messenger dog.

AN INVISIBLE CROSS FOR MAN.

There is a greater tragedy to-day than the tragedies of destruction, of sorrow and of death, which war demands as its frightful sacrifice. It is the tragedy of the man who at such a time as this turns aside from the way of sacrifice and the way of honour. The flag of our country flings to the winds something more than the Crosses of St. George, St. Andrew and St. Patrick, of our nation's glory and power. There is concealed within its folds an invisible cross for each one of us. The discerning eye of devotion clearly recognizes it, and bows in loving obedience to the duty which it inspires.

WAR SUMMARY

NEW YORK, Sept. 9.—The Associated Press to-day issued the following summary:

"As the Allied armies draw nearer to Cambrai, St. Quentin and Naudfeld, the Fismes positions of the Germans in the St. Gobain Forest, the offensive movement begins to lose much of the momentum it gained and maintained while less important enemy positions were being taken. Slow progress continues to be made by Field Marshal Haig's British forces in the direction of Cambrai and St. Quentin. If the armies of Generals Humbert and Mangin are successful in overrunning or encircling St. Gobain, the massive German retreat must begin anew and with greater rapidity than at any time since the Allied counter offensive started in the middle of July. Cambrai and St. Quentin, the immediate objectives of the British forces in the present phase of the offensive movement, are almost within striking distance. They are within six miles of St. Quentin at Villeveque, and they have captured Roisel and St. Emilie Along the line between Cambrai and St. Quentin, the British advance has carried them into their old defence positions from they were driven by the Germans last March. Further advances are being bitterly contested by the Germans.

TWO TALENTED ARTISTS

A Seemingly Impossible Feat Hinted at for This Evening.

The Conservatory of Music Hall will be the scene of an unique recital on Monday evening, September 9th, when the J. M. Greene Music Co., Ltd., will introduce Ida Gardner, the gifted contralto, and Harold Lyman, flutist, to a specially invited audience of music lovers.

The interest that is being shown in the concert indicates that a large and appreciative audience will greet her.

Miss Gardner has demonstrated her musical equipment before many leading musical societies and critical audiences and wherever she has sung, she has been generously praised. Possessed of a really unusual contralto voice, she has had a training that enables her to use it faultlessly. In addition to her vocal ability, Miss Gardner's winning personality has had considerable influence on her steady rise to popularity.

Mr. J. M. Greene deserves the highest commendation for bringing this splendid artist and has intimated that a pleasurable surprise is in store for those who have been fortunate enough to secure invitations. It is rumoured that Miss Gardner will attempt the seemingly impossible feat of singing a duet with herself. Perhaps it can be done. Who knows?

Music lovers should derive solid satisfaction from the programme that will be rendered by Miss Gardner and Mr. Harold Lyman. Mr. Harold Lyman is perhaps no less popular. He is an artist of unusual ability and delightful personality and will receive a hearty welcome.

Raffles Admits He is Crazy

A Death-Defying Feat for the Exhibition.

The other evening while Raffles was at the Empress Hotel, the following conversation was overheard between him, and Mr. Geo. Graham.

"Well Pete this is the first time I knew you were crazy and I have known you since a boy."

"Well George I have been crazy a long time but the officials of the Asylum knew it would do no good to lock me up as I would only escape any way but why the compliments."

"Well any man who is going to allow himself to be buried alive must be crazy.'

"Well you see it is like this Mr. Graham, the Exhibition Board has secured Miss Stinson, the world's greatest aviatrix to appear in Peterborough and she claims she will give one of the most daring and death defying exhibitions even shown in Peterborough. I will admit Miss Stinson is a most wonderful woman as I have had the pleasure of seeing her myself but I don't propose to allow her to carry away all the honors for death defying feats and especially in my home town so this is what I'm going to do—a feat that others have attempted but have all failed. The manager of Grafton's store has furnished a large packing case which will be reinforced and I will be placed inside—the lid nailed securely and roped and tied all the way around lowered into a hole seven feet deep and buried alive."

"Well Pete I don't think you can do it."

"Seeing is believing George, so don't forget the date, Thursday afternoon only."

Officials Are Being Executed

Bolsheviki Has Not Realized the Ideals of the Women of Russia.

STOCKHOLM, Sept. 9.—By the Associated Press—The Soviet-republic has not realized the ideals of Russian women, and they are playing an important part in hastening its end. Their influence in thsi connection is being exerted even more powerfully than it was in bringing the dictatorship of the proletariat into existence. Evidence of this was observed by the writer who came out of Russia with American refugees, who reached Happaranda, Sweden, last week. Maria Spridonovo, probably was the most powerful leader in establishing the Bolsheviki power. Several prominent officials have been slain lately and now Nikolai Lenine, idol of the Bolsheviki, lies wounded by a Russion woman, Dora Kaplan, a social ruler who said she placed her life in jeopardy to save Russia, and believed this could be realized only through a constituent assembly. Mlle. Spridonovo and Mlle. Kaplan are educated women, the former a teacher, the latter a medical student. She has since been executed by the Bolsheviki.

Workers Shot.

AMSTERDAM, Sept. 9.—An official announcement made at Petrograd and received here to-day by telegraph, says that up to the present, five hundred and twelve so-called counter-revolutionaries, including ten members of the right social revolutionary party, have been shot as a reprisal for the murder of Moses Uritzky, chairman of the Petrograd Commission for the suppression of a counter revolution. In Smolensk, thirty-four large landowners and a former Moscow archimandrite maker, have been shot in reprisal for for the attempt on the life of Premier Lenine.

Warning to the Public

Inferior Class of Fuel Has Tendency To Clay Up Chimneys.

Fire Chief Grange wishes to warn the public against the danger of allowing soot to accumulate in chimneys and flues. Owing to the inferior class of fuel obtainable last winter chimneys are very apt to be in a clogged condition and this condition has, more than once been attended by disastrous results. The prospects for a better class of fuel this winter are not very bright, therefore the Chief would emphasize the necessity of occupants of dwellings, stores, etc cleaning out of chimneys and flues regularly, about once every two weeks. A competent chimney-sweep resides in Peterboro and no excuse can be found for not assisting in the effort to reduce the fire loss of the city.

FUNERAL OF LATE THOMAS SPEIRS

The pallbearers were Mr. Darl Rose, Mr. Archer Rose, Mr. Scott Huston, Mr. Jim Huston and Mr. Bertram Huston, Vernon Miller. The service was in charge of Rev. W. L. H. Rowand.

attention of all automobilists,
-boat owners, and motor ts should be directed on the anement that the production of ne is running behind the con-ion at the rate of a million gal-
day. That is a serious state of
, and as an adequate supply of ne is absolutely imperative to a ful prosecution of the war, ian citizens should be willing to ice the pleasure of Sunday mo-while the crisis lasts in order there shall be no shortage for ial purposes. In the United
, where the Federal Fuel Comhas made the request, there is al and prompt compliance on rt of the people, and apparently l not be necessary for the offito pass a mandatory law which threatened to do if the use of motor boats and motor cycles on Sunday was not voluntarily carried out. It is estimated that some 8,000,000 gallons of gasoline are saved every Sunday by a general compliance with the order, and at the same rate, Canadian motorists could save 600,000 gallons every Sunday.

In a number of Canadian cities the members of the local automobile associations are pledging themselves not to use their cars for the next four Sundays. The plan is recommended to Peterborough motorists who are liable to become the subject of unfavourable criticism if they persist in the Sunday "joy-riding" in the face of the shortage in the gasoline supply. A ramble on foot into the country-side on Sunday afternoon as a substitute for the Sunday car ride, would not only help to save gasoline and money, but would bring the additional benefit to be gained by some much needed exercise.

A PRINCE OF LIARS.

(New York Herald.)

There is only one faint gleam of truth in the interview which the German Crown Prince has accorded to the representative of a Budapest newspaper, and that is where he admits that Germany is now on the defensive. But he proves himself a prince of liars when he seeks to make it appear that Germany from the first has been on the defensive, and that that she did not deliberately select her own time for starting a war for which she had been for years preparing. He conveniently ignores the Potsdam Conference of July 5, 1914, the full story of which has been told by Ambassador Morgenthau and confirmed by Prince Lichnowsky in his now famous memorandum.

Mr. Morgenthau, then our Ambassador at Constantinople, has related how on July 4, 1914, he was surprised to note the absence of the German Ambassador, Von Wangenheim, from the requiem mass for the Archduke Ferdinand and his wife, and also from the celebration of Independence Day at the America Embassy. Afterwards Mr. Morgenthau had the explanation from Baron von Wagenheim's own lips. He had left some days before for Berlin, the Kaiser having summoned him to an imperial council which met on July 5 at Potsdam. Here were assembled Von Moltke, Chief of Staff, representing the army; Von Tirpitz, the navy; great bankers, railroad directors and captains of German industry necessary to German war preparations. Wangenheim informed Mr. Morgenthau that the Kaiser solemply put the question to each man in turn:—Was he ready for war? All replied in the affirmative except the financiers, who said that they must have two weeks to sell their foreign securities and to arrange loans.

At that time few persons even in Germany looked upon the Sarajevo tragedy as something likely to cause war. The utmost secrecy was observed with regard to the conference. Bankers were given time to adjust finances and sell foreign securties, and members returned quietly to their work or vacations, while the Kaiser went to the Norway fjords on his yacht. Subsequently, in informing Mr. Morgenthau of the conference, Von Wangenheim admitted that Germany had precipitated the war, and seemed rather proud of the whole performance, and especially of having been invited to participate in such a momtous conference.

And Mr. Morgenthau goes on to say: "Whenever I hear people arguing about the responsibility for this war or read the clumsy, lying excuses put forward by Germany, I simply recall the huge burly figure of Wangenheim, puffing away at a big cigar and giving me his account of the historic meeting. Why waste time in discussing the matter?" Why, indeed, save that lies iterated and reiterated sometimes come to be accepted as truth by the unthinking.

EDITORIAL NOTES.

In the face of the gasoline shortage, the Sunday "joy riders" will soon be classed with the coal hoarders and other unpopular citizens.

The only German that seems to possess the saving grace of humour is the individual who issues the official German bulletin. His description of the French advance on Friday, when over 30 villages were taken, "the day passed quietly on the battle front," was a masterpiece.

With their army back to the line from which they started out on March 21st, confident that their "storm of peace" would bring the war to a close, no wonder the German people are becoming demoralized.

After the End.

Let's hope, when peace comes that the Allies will make a present to France of all war material that may be converted to the country's peaceful pursuits, such as barb wire, tractors and even possibly tanks converted into agricultural implements.—London Advertiser.

WHAT OTHER EDITORS SAY

Waiting for the Victory Loan.

(Ottawa Journal.)

At the present time deposits in the savings banks of the country are greater than they were at the beginning of the war by the enormous amount of $20,000,000.

The Candy Trick.

(Toronto Mail and Empire.)

Public eating places now are to be allowed only two pounds of sugar for every ninety meals served. That is only one teaspoonful per meal. Restaurant patrons may soon begin the habit of dropping candies into their tea and coffee.

The Coal Hoarder.

(Hamilton Herald.)

Yes, it's all right to denounce pro-Germans and pacifists, but pray don't overlook the man who, with a fair quantity of coal in his cellar, insists upon getting his whole winter's supply in although he knows that many people haven't yet got any at all.

French-Canadians Praised.

An American correspondent, describing the feats of the Canadian troops, says: "French-Canadians lately have taken part in some very fierce assaults and have been through perilous adventures, but with that great courage which is always theirs when they have to go through hell-fire, as at Courcelette, on the Somme, in the old first battles and many times around Lens." Quebec should thrill over such praise.

LIFE SAVING IN THIS WAR.

(Chicago Tribune.)

General March has permitted the publication of some interesting statistics on casualties based on the experience of the French and British armies during four years of war.

In brief, they are as follows: Of wounded sent to hospitals fewer than one in twenty die. Of wounded and sick sent to hospitals only about forty-five in a thousand die. Of all soldiers wounded in action over 80 per cent. return to service, many of them in less than two months. Only 14.5 per cent. are discharged for permanent disability.

When the history of the war is written one of the most remarkable chapters will disclose the advance made in the treatment of wounds, the prevention of disease, and the salvage of life and bodily health through modern medical and surgical science.

Make Potash Pay.

If there is as much potash as is claimed in that deposit discovered north of Maple Creek in Saskatchewan should not the Government of Canada reserve a few million tons for the people? We might as well pay off the national debt with potash as with taxes.—Toronto Globe.

Division of Labour.

What the Germans call a "war on movement" the French call a "war of manoeuvre." At any rate, Foch does the manoeuvring and the Germans do the moving.—Springfield Republican.

The Lord of the Prairies.

From a herd of 750 buffalo in 1909, the Canadian Government now has a total of 3,500 in the Wainwright park, all due to natural increase. This is good business. At that rate, all fear that the ancient monarch of the western plains will become an extinct species is groundless.—Calgary Herald.

Not a Good Sport.

The difference in fighters is the difference in their national sports. Americans with their baseball training and the Canadians with lacrosse agility may be counted upon for the dashing stunts, while the British, devotees of cricket, are willing to play matches of any length and play hard all the time. BIG SHOW OF LIVE STOCK IS ALREADY ASSURED FOR FAIR

Exhibitors Who Have Been Absent for Years Have Already Filed Their Entries—The Grounds in Splendid Condition and Everything is Ready for New Records.

THE "CRYSTAL PALACE"

All entries for the Peterborough Industrial Exhibition must be filed with the Secretary, not later than Wednesday night.

The stage is all set for Peterborough's Industrial Exhibition, which opens on Thursday morning, with every prospect of establishing new records for entries, attractions and attendance. From the present outlook, it may be necessary to provide a big tent for the overflow of cattle exhibits, one of the most pleasing demands that could be made upon the directors, who fully recognize that the fundamental conditions of success are determined by the interest of exhibitors, especially farmers, apart altogether from the gate receipts. President Denne stated this morning that there are exhibitors already listed who have not shown their stock at the Fair in years. This is the first encouragement that has kindled the enthusiasm of the directors and makes them confident that the Exhibition will establish new records in all departments.

The "Crystal Palace."

The transformation of the grounds seemed complete this morning. The lawns from both gates sweep in all directions a vivid green, against which the white fences and tree boxes stand out in pleasing contrast. The old building has disappeared. It's gone at last, and with it the myth that it once housed Noah. Out in the centre of the east half of the park is a new building—at least it seems new—gleaming in fresh paint that harmonizes with the colours of the gates and offices. You may recognize the contour of this "Crystal Palace," but you needn't impart your suspicions to strangers. Every inch of its show space has been taken by local manufacturers and merchants, and this new building generally lends a touch of impressiveness that simply tantalizes the directors when they compare it with the building of their dreams.

Lawns Are Smooth.

The grounds have been ironed out for the crowd, and the paths made straight. Automobiles will enter at the George Street gates and depart at Lock Street. Big field stones edge the new roadways to prevent the cars from wandering all over the grounds, mingling with the crowds, and generally making a nuisance of themselves. Automobile owners will find every provision for their convenience, but there has also been due consideration for the general public that humbly walks.

The "Little Levington" half-mile track was never in better condition, and the cards for the races will be one of the feature attractions of the three days. Naturally Miss Katherine Stinson's airplane flights will top the list of features, but the other numbers on the well-filled programme should preclude dull pauses at any time.

A Big German Drive to Bring Victory by Fall

This is the Theory Expressed by a Captured German Officer.

Special to The Examiner:

WITH THE AMERICAN ARMY IN FRANCE, Sept. 9. — A big German drive to bring victory by autumn is what Ludendorff is planning, according to Capt. Von Albersteen, whose father is said to be one of the Kaiser's advisers.

When captured, Captain Von Albersteen was smartly dressed and insisted on wearing a monocle. He replied insolently to his questioners. Asked his opinion of the present situation, he flippantly declared that Ludendorff is now moving his troops according to tactical plan, and that he later will make a big drive for a German peace this year.

French Troops Are at the Gates of La Fere

The Allies Capture a Number of Important Positions in Front of St. Quentin.

(By William Philip Simms—United Press).

PARIS, Sept. 9.—The French are at the gates of La Fere, which is still aflame. The fall of this bastion of the Hindenburg line, which the Allies were unable to occupy in 1917, is probable.

St. Gobain and the wooded hill country, centering in that town, is tenable only with difficulty). (The St. Gobain Forest is one of the strongest defences of Laon). The French can attack via Servais at the north, via Fresnes at the south, and via Barisis and Aulers.

To the westward the Allies have taken Villevequen and Stemile in their advance towards St. Quentin.

Fourth Game of World's Series

Boston, September 9th. — Before a fair crowd in comparison with those at Chicago, the fourth game of the world's series championship baseball was played here this afternoon, between the oston Red Sox and the Chicago Cubs.

Battle Plans Kept Secret

German's Making Use of the Old British Trenches.

(By Lowell Mellett.)
(United Press Despatch.)

WITH THE BRITISH ARMIES IN FRANCE, Sept. 9.—The line of the old British trenches north of the Somme served the German rearguard fighters to good purpose to-day. Built by the British when they faced the Hindenburg line, these trenches server to stay, but not stop, the German steam-roller fast March. It is likewise improbable that the Germans will do more than hesitate in these defences before falling back to their own original positions.

The Next Move.

Nobody knows what the next British move will be. Ther are no indications of what is forthcoming any more than there were at the beginning of the present campaign. As an illustration of the manner in which battle plans are kept secret, it is now permissible to relate an incident concerning the Canadian corps' smashing blow before Amiens.

On the fingers of one hand it is possible to enumerate the persons within the corps to whom knowledge of the impending attack was passed. They were assigned to do all the preliminary work, characterizing the operation of the "L C Scheme."

The impression among officers of high rank was general that the plans of the corps contemplated a movement from Arras, where the troops were stationed, or further northward, perhaps against Mount Kemmel.

Instead, the night before the attack the troops were suddenly shifted to Amiens. They went to the battle under an inspiration which originated mysteriously and spread rapidly in the cry "remember the Llandovery Castle." Then officers who had been working on the "L C scheme" recognized when the initials came.

A German intelligence service report recently seized contained querulous comment on the British being "past masters in concealing their intentions."

South of Gouzeaucourt British advance guards attacked to-day. At noon the assault was going well. (Gouzeaucourt is on the Hindenburg line southeast of Havrincourt Wood.)

Rev. J. A. McKenzie Elected President

At a meeting of the Ministerial Association, held in the Y.M.C.A. this morning, the Rev. J. A. McKenzie, pastor of Knox church, was elected president. The Association also adopted a resolution supporting the efforts on behalf of the Navy League.

LIEUT. ROGER PORTER MISSING.

BELEVILLE, Sept. 8.—Mr. E. Gus Porter, K.C., M.P. for West Hastings, received a telegram yesterday morning stating that his son, Lieut. Roger Porter, who has been with the machine gun section of the 2nd Battalion of Canadians, has been reported missing since August 30. Lieut. Porter is nineteen years of age and is the only child of Mr. and Mrs. Porter. He went overseas as a Lieutenant in the 155th Battalion.

FIND MISSING WOOD.

BRANTFORD, Sept 9.—Following the finding of a shortage of seventy cords of wood in the civic wood yard the committee in charge states that the leakage has been found. The wood was delivered in quarter-cord lots, and it was found that the boxes constructed for the truck, supposedly of quarter-cord capacity, were much over a quarter of a cord. This accounted for the total amount missing. The boxes since have been changed.

And yet in absent-minded way

We Consider Ourselves Exceedingly Furtunate in Being Able to have so Fine a Collection of Coats for Early Season Wearing

Candidly, we expected many difficulties in secu ring our Fall stocks. As a matter of fact, we had to overcome many trying difficulties in securing the kind of garments that we determined should comprise our stocks.

However, the main thing you are interested in is the coats that we have for your selection. These embrace every desirable style of the seaso n. You will find all the favored fabrics—you will find all the unique styles.

What is more, there is individuality of selection , for only a limited number of each style has been purchased. As a matter of fact, in many cases, th ere is only one coat of a kind.

We doubt seriously whether we will have so fine a collection of models at any time during the season. Prices range from—

$19.50 to $49.50

Slender, Graceful Lines and Extreme Length of Skirts are the Dominating Feature of the New Fall Dresses

The silhouette is again the favored feature among the Fall dress styles and this will unquestionably appeal to every woman. Aside from this, the extreme length of the skirt, which in many cases are but three to four inches from the ground and rarely or ever higher than six inches from the ground, is entirely NEW.

The sleeves are wide and loose, while the trimmings are silk, cloth embroidery and fringe, as well as buttons, braid, bead embroidery and lace.

Satins are undoubtedly the most popular of the favored materials used, while in the dresses made of cloth, navy blue is, of course, predominant.

Prices vary from $15 to $50

Extremely Attractive GEORGETTE BLOUSES AT $5.98

In the newest styles, have the new collars in the effective round and square shapes.

Many are beaded — others have combination of two colors of the same material — others show tucks and lace trimming. Usually $7.00.

An important element is that they look especially good when worn. Colors are grey, navy, maize and white.

BIG BALL GAME AT RIVERSIDE PARK TO-MORROW

The game of the local baseball season will undoubtedly be the battle between Oshawa and the champion Riversides in the semi-finals of the Ontario Baseball Association series at Riverside Park to-morrow evening at 5.30 o'clock. Oshawa is reported to have a clever collection of ball tossers, and as the Riversides will have their strongest line-up in action, the game should be well worth seeing. There will be a double umpire system in vogue, with Alex. Kay of Peterborough, working on the bases and an Oshawa official behind the bat.

NO MORE AMNESTY

Deserters Reporting Promptly Get Consideration, However.

OTTAWA, Sept. 6.—There is to be no extension of the amnesty to deserters. "It is not possible," reads an official announcement, "to extend the delay fixed for general amnesty to defaulters under the Military Service Act. All, however, should be urged to report volontarily and promptly. Those whom it will be necessary to bring in compulsorily must be rigorously dealt with. Those promptly reporting will have every consideration given to reasons for delay and to circumstances which may excuse it."

There is nothing so much to be afraid of as that which we should be ashamed of.

A Hero of Vimy Ridge Dies at Nicholls Hospital

Fred Haycock, Who Saw Long Service at the Front With the 21st Eastern Ontario Battalion, Passes Away This Morning.

A MEMBER OF G.W.V-A.

Fred. Haylock, 45 Ware Street, a member of the Peterborough Branch of the Great War Veterans' Association, a former member of the 39th and 21st Battalions, C.E.F., and a hero of Courcelette, Vimy Ridge, and other battles in which the Canadians distinguished themselves, passed away this morning at Nicholls Hospital, after an illness of some weeks.

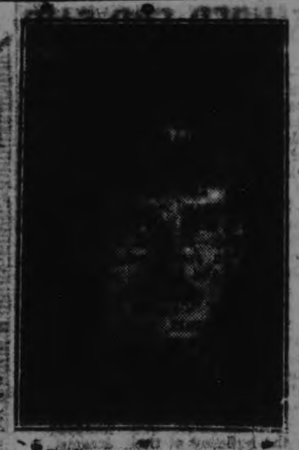
The news will be a shock to a large circle of friends, especially to the returned soldiers, in Peterborough, among whom he was most popular.

The late Fred. Haylock enlisted here early in 1915 with the Peterborough detachment of the 39th Battalion. After going overseas with the 39th he was transferred to the 21st Eastern Ontario Battalion, and served many months in France with that unit and with a trench mortor battery to which he was afterwards transferred. When the Canadians captured Vimy Ridge Pte. Haylock was shot through the throat by a German sniper, and was very severely wounded, but after long treatment in hospital in England recovered sufficiently to be invalided home last winter.

When taken ill he was employed at the Henry Hope Company.

He is survived by his wife and by two little daughters.—

There will be a special meeting of the Peterborough Branch of the Great War Veterans' Association to-night to make arrangements for the funeral and the Veterans' band will also hold a special rehearsal at the Armouries.



THE LATE PTE. FRED HAYLOCK.

Any of the boys are also at liberty to compete in the regular classes at the Fair by paying the exhibitor's fee, to Mr. Hall, the secretary.

All entries for the regular Y.M.C.A. competitions should be addressed to the Boys' Secretary, Y.M.C.A.

A meeting of all the boys intending to compete in the various competitions promoted by the Y.M.C.A. will be held at the Y.M.C.A. Tuesday night at eight o'clock. It is important that every boy gardener should be present.

Important Meeting of the G.W.V.A.

All members of the Peterboro Branch of the Great War Veterans Association are reminded of the special meeting of the Association to-morrow when Mr. W. H. Smith of the Soldiers' Civil Re-establishment Department will give an address on the work of that department which is of vital interest to returned soldiers. Members will have the opportunity of asking any questions they see fit and the meeting is an important one.

Wounded Are Splendidly Used

Sergt. H. Barrett Enthusiastic About Treatment Received.

Mrs. C. Barrett, 492 Cedar street has received the following letter from her son Sergt. Harry Barrett, formerly of the 39th who was wounded a short time ago.

Blighty, Aug., 17.

Dear Mother,—Well here I am again in England. I am hoping you were not notified that I was napoo? as I just got a nice Blighty. Why of course I'm lucky, sure I'm always that. Now for the love of Peter, don't start worrying about me getting good treatment. Talk about a home, will I never thought there was anything in England like this or I would have got hit long ago. This is a V. A. D. not a hospital but a home. There are no whitewash walls to this place, everything is grained and carpets on the floor. Now I do not know of anything you could send me as I will get everything here. A box of chocolates would not be out of the way of course as well its not Waac's but real cute sister here. So I'm camped here for the duration. I arrived here about 3 a.m. this morning.

I expect you know by the paper just where the Canadians were in the big push, near Amiens, we had no trouble going through the first day that's as long as I lasted. I was thinking I might get home by 'Xmas but say by the looks of things I don't ever want to go home. I suppose I'll be here for two or three months so Kate can write to this address. I'm not here ten hours yet and eats are up for the third time. I suppose this afternoon we will have all the town in to see the Canadians. I'm glad I got away from Jerry as easy as I did. The best of love to all.

Sergt. H .Barrett,
No. 412365, 2nd Can., Batt., Southbank Road Hospital, Ash street
Southport, England.

SERGT. MAJOR HARRY WILFORD, M.M., of Peterborough, who is officially reported wounded for the second time.

Few Registrations in Peterboro

American registration with the American Consular Agent in the city has not, up to to-day, been heavy and fewer than 20 have been at the Agent's office. Mr. Leonard would remind all who haven't registered for military service between the ages of 18 and 45 inclusive in Peterboro and the vicinity that they must do so on or before September 12.

PETERBORO COUPLE WANTED BY POLICE

Constable Colwill of Port Hope, has received word from Peterboro police to be on the lookout for Joseph Geo. "A Daughter of the Sun"

Troupe of Hawaiian Players Carried

A land that has no poisonous plant, insect or reptile, is indeed a place to be desired. The Hawaiian Islands, the Paradise of the Pacific, is such a land. "A daughter of the Sun," a story of an Hawaiian Butterfly, a play from the pen of Lorin Howard and Ralph T. Kettering, and under the management of Ed. W. Rowland, is a beautiful story of these Blessed Isles of the Pacific. The company is a large one, and carries a troupe of Hawaiian players. The scenic embellishment is massive.

"A daughter of the Sun" comes to The Grand next Monday, Sept. 16.

Preparations for Lakefield Fair

LAKEFIELD, Sept. 9.—The Lakefield Fall Fair to be held here on Tuesday and Wednesday September 17th and 18th promises to be one of the best on record.

The grounds have been put in fine shape and every accommodation provided for the large crowd expected.

The track has been greatly improved and a number of fast horses have already entered.

A hot dinner will be served on the grounds.

A good band will be present to enliven the proceedings.

A stock judging contest will be one of the special attractions.

ONE HUN SUB FLEET IS VIRTUALLY WIPED OUT

And Fifty Per Cent. of Long-Distance Submarines are Destroyed.

LONDON, Sept. 9.—A number of interesting developments in and aspects of the present naval situation have just been made available from an authoritative source.

The general tendency of the U-boats is now to operate farther from the American shore—at some points from 200 to 250 miles out.

There are no submarines in the Dardanelles, it is revealed. The losses to German submarines in the Adriatic since 1917 have been 25 per cent. of the total number operating.

The British are active in the Heligoland Bight and are carrying out operations with various kinds of light forces in the North Sea, the average number of such operations being no less than five daily. The number of German surface craft destroyed in the Bight during the year runs into three figures.

The German short-distance submarine fleet making its bases in Belgian ports has been virtually wiped out. The enemy reinforced the Flanders flotilla with long-distance submarines, commanded by Captains with daring proclivities, some of whom have dashed through the allied naval barrage, but between the end of March and July the allies definitely destroyed more than 50 per cent. of the flotilla.

Since the Jutland battle, the German high seas fleet has not been in the North Sea, except for some "tip-and-run" dashes of a few ships.

GIDEON BIBLES.

It is said there are 350,000 Gideon Bibles in American hotels. We applaud the fine motives of the Gideonites, but our observation is that if you want a Bible to last 9,000 years, and then be in a state of perfect preservation, just put it in a hotel room occupied by the casual sojourner—Houston Post

ENTRIES FOR THE EXHIBITION MUST BE MADE BY NEXT WEDNESDAY NIGHT

Time for Making Entries Has Been Changed From Previous Years Owing to Three Days Fair.

Intending exhibitors at the Peterborough Industrial Exhibition are reminded of the fact that all entries must be in not later than Wednesday night. Many changes and improvements have been made in the conduct of the Peterborough Exhibition for this year, and the changing of the time for taking entries is one of the most important.

Exhibitors already have fallen in line with the new rule, and up to Saturday night entries were far in advance of any previous Fair for the same period. Competition is expected to be keen in every class. New exhibitors locally and from a distance, will be on hand.

It will be the best exhibition from every standpoint that Peterborough has held. Thursday will be as big a day as any.

Miss Stinson will fly Thursday afternoon at three o'clock. Thursday evening at 7 o'clock and Friday evening at 7 o'clock.

Peterboro Boy Contributes a Pint of Blood

Gunner William McGee's Experiences in Casualty Hospital.

Mrs. Charles H. McGee, 590 Downie street, has received a very interesting letter from her son, Gunner William K. McGee. He enlisted with the Cobourg Heavy Battery in March, 1917, and has been in France since last Easter. Before enlisting he worked at the Peterboro light and Power Office.

August 16, 1918.

Dear Mother, Dad and Ern:

Just a few lines to let you know that I am O.K., but proceeding down the line to the base.

Last Wednesday I was helping to put in our gun platform along with the rest of two gun crews. I had a hold on the wheel plate (a very heavy piece), and the rest of the boys let their part slip, consequently catching my finger. It didn't break the finger, but gave it a bad cutting up, so I immediately hiked for the nearest dressing station. It was only five minutes walk so when I got there I had it dressed and sent to the next one for innoculation. They couldn't innoculate me there so I went on to the main dressing station which was about 15 miles from the battery. As soon as I was innoculated I came back in the same ambulance. My finger started to bleed freely so I had it redressed, and then they advised me to go down to a convalescent camp. Well I went back to the battery and saw my own major and he wanted me or rather told me to go down the line for a few days. I left the battery soon after supper and arrived at the Casualty Clearing Station, about 2 a.m. The next day the Captain R.A.M.C., came and asked if any of us that were slightly wounded could spare a little blood. Eight of us said that we would, so we had our blood tested, and this morning I gave somewhere near a pint. It was the only way of saving some of the serious cases, so I hope the poor lad that gets mine pulls through O.K. I don't feel any the worse for having lost a little blood; in fact, I never notice it.

We are having a dandy time here, nothing to do and lots to eat. I met a fellow by the name of Prophet here yesterday. He lives near Jackson Park.

Received your letter of July 22, just before I came away; also a bunch of Examiners. The weather is very hot here just at present.

Last night old Fritz was over bombing. I could hear him dropping some piece away from the hospital. What do you think of his ways now? "Tres bon," eh? Guess we're winning now alright.

Supper is coming so I will have to ring off. Don't worry about me, because I am dandy. Your loving son,

WILLIE.

Veteran's Band Visits Cobourg

G.W.V.A. Organization Hospitably Entertained in Lake Shore Town.

The band of the Peterboro branch of the Great War Veterans Association returned last evening after a most enjoyable week end visit to Cobourg where the organization made a very favourable impression through the excellence of its playing and where the hospitality of the citizens made a equally favourable impression upon the members of the band.

The musicians accompanied by President W. Staunton and Secretary Whatley of the Peterboro branch left the armouries here shortly after 2 o'clock on Saturday afternoon and motored to Cobourg. On arrival at the Lakeshore town they marched to the Cobourg headquarters of the G.W.V.A. where the band played several selections and where the visitors were entertained at supper by the Cobourg Veterans.

On Saturday evening the band under the direction of Bandmaster Walter Hughes gave a most enjoyable concert at the Cobourg Military Hospital their music being greatly appreciated. The visitors were provided with sleeping accommodation at the hospital for the night and on Sunday were billeted as the guests of Cobourg citizens. They were entertained on a motor trip on Sunday morning and yesterday afternoon participated in the joint Decoration Day ceremonies of the Cobourg Oddfellows and Veterans.

The whole visit was a most enjoyable one and the Veterans band are profuse in their expression of gratitude to the people of Cobourg for the most hospitable way in which they were entertained.

Mob Surrenders to Mighty Music

Noblest as Well as Basest in Russ Revolutionaries.

(By Joseph Shaplen—United Press Staff Correspondent).

NEW YORK, Sept. 9.—Revolutions are as capricious as a pretty woman. They can throw a people into ecstacies of joy and fits of despair. They bring out the noblest and basest in man. That is just exactly what the Russian revolution has done to the Russian people.

When one arrived in Petrograd last January he found mobs of civilians and soldiery smashing and robbing wine cellars and getting beastly drunk. The unkindest cut of all dealt by the revolution to the old court camarilla, I suppose, must have been the looting of the wonderful wine cellars of the winter palace. They were wild, dangerous mobs that worked in Petrograd in those December and January days. They showed particular preference for wine and champagne stored by the Romanoffs for the entertainment of the Rasputins. But that would not have been half so bad. The Bolsheviki handled the mobs on this score quite easily, although in one case, I remember, there were no less than 196 calls for help received at Smolny at one day, the day when the wine cellar smashing beat all records.

It was on that day, however, that the mob turned from the smashing of wine cellars to the smashing of the former Czarina's private chambers and the wonderful works of art in the palace. Here was a typical, wild mob of the French Revolution. It was disgusting, abhorrent, repulsive to see that mob at work.

About six months later—during the May First demonstration—I met the same mob in one of the magnificent ball-rooms of the Winter Palace. There was something quite different written on those faces. There was ecstacy and expectation. These people had been marching several hours, with red banners, singing songs of freedom, brotherhood and the Internationale. They were all half starved, but there was a marvellous, significant fire in those eyes. I marvelled. I was puzzled until from a neighbouring room I suddenly heard the strains of wonderful music. It was the famous Petrograd conductor, Kouts, leading his orchestra. The smashers of wine cellars sat motionless, enchanted. I suddenly understood.

They were listening to the sweet strains of the Requiem of Mozart.

WERE REMANDED FOR A WEEK

John Arscott and Vincent Scully were charged in Police Court this morning with having liquor in their possession. Three bottles of whiskey were found. Both men were remanded until Monday, Sept. 17th on their own undertaking to appear on that date.

MRS. HUTCHINSON SUFFERS 10 YEARS

Was Actually Afraid to Eat—Finds Relief at Last.

"It is a positive fact that Tanlac brought me the very first relief I was ever able to get from anything I have taken during the past ten years," said Mrs. Lizzie Hutchinson, a life-time resident of Toronto, now living at 418½ Spadina Avenue, the other day.

"I first noticed my trouble coming on about ten years ago," she continued, "and till I started on Tanlac a few weeks ago I was never free from that terrible indigestion. I had no appetite, and what little I forced down soured on my stomach and formed so much gas that it pressed up against my heart till I felt just like I was going to smother. Many a time I have rushed out of the house gasping for breath and someone would have to pound on my back to get the gas off my stomach. I suffered such agonies at times that I became actually afraid to eat anything. I lost over twenty pounds in weight and was in an awful condition when I started on Tanlac.

"I took all kinds of medicines but nothing helped me at all, and I finally decided to try Tanlac. I have taken several bottles and have a splendid appetite now, I can eat most anything I want, am never troubled the least bit with gas, and for the first time in ten years I am perfectly free from indigestion. I have gained several pounds and nearly every day some friend tells me how much better I am looking. I certainly do feel fine, for Tanlac has relieved me entirely of that terrible stomach trouble, and I think so much of this wonderful medicine that I have already recommended it to many of my friends."

Tanlac is sold in Peterborough by W. B. Warne Drug Co., Ltd.; in Fowler's Corners by W. A. Hunter; in Gelert by A. J. Scott; in Westwood by G. Pringle & Son.

Voice of The People

STREET CARS FOR EAST CITY.

Dear Editor: Would you kindly put a letter in for the poor East City girls in regard to the Hunter street bridge. Urge the council to start the building of it right away, as the poor girls need the cars in the worst way, as they have a long walk. All the winter we can get no ride whatever to work. There are two hundred girls in East City, and at times the plowman does not get around until 7.30 a.m. Something ought to be done to enable the poor girls to get to their work. The high class can get out of their cars right into their offices. We pay taxes as well as they, and need some comfort. They look on the working girls to help win the war, and why not think of them? Well, dear Editor, we know you will do your best for the poor girls in putting a nice letter in your paper for them. Thanking you kindly, yours truly,

EAST CITY GIRLS.

Record-Breaker if Weather Fine

ENTRIES AND DISPLAYS LARGEST IN HISTORY OF FAIR.

All that is required to make the Peterboro Industrial Exhibition which opens on Thursday, a record breaker, is fine weather. The entries and displays are the largest on record, and the attractions secured are first class in every respect. Prize lists have been increased all along the line, and this inducement has brought out many additional entries. All the buildings have been renovated, and grounds put in first class condition, so that everything is in tip top shape for a successful show.

The displays of live stock and agricultural products will be especially attractive, the directors having concentrated much attention on this feature, in an endeavour to encourage those who are assisting in increased production. Among the exhibits of interest in this line will be the display of war garden products.

Do you intend keeping the lads who protected your boy on his way overseas?

Canada would have been another Belgium but for the British Navy.

The sailor on the storm-tossed deck deserves your greatest consideration.

Who needs comforts more than the sailor enveloped in the frozen spray?

New Bhunswick (Fredericton): Conditions are good for an average hay crop and for ripening grain. A record yield of wheat and oats now assured. Corn is generally a failure. Early potatoes of good quality but yield is disappointing. Turnips are good where not attacked by the aphis.

DAMAGE BY FROST.

Quebec. Roberval (Chicoutimi and Saguenay): Hay harvest has been comparatively good. Frost in certain places has injured tobacco and potatoes. Cereals are ripening well and promise a good yield, especially the wheat. Ste. Anne de la Pocatiere: (Kamouraska). Weather conditions favourable for the ripening of cereals, the first sown of which are very good. Late sown cereals will probably not ripen. Potatoes injured by the late blight and drought of late date lessens the prospects of a general heavy yield. European plums a failure; apples half a crop. Hay good. Cap Rouge: All grain very good; except barley, which is good; early potatoes are extra; late potatoes are commencing to suffer from the blight. Apples are poor, and there are practically no plums. Roots for stock are good; but corn for silage is the worst crop in years. Lennoxville: Hay is an average crop. The grain harvest is one of the best for some time. The roots are promising; silage corn poor. Makamik (Pontiac): Haying done; quality fair. Yield of early sown grain probably 15 per cent. above the average; late sown very poor. Vegetables average, though potatoes badly frosted in places.

CROPS GOOD.

Ontario: The Ontario Department of Agriculture reports that fall wheat is a 50 per cent. crop of good quality. Barley, oats and spring wheat are well harvested; the yields and quality of grain are excellent, and the straw is clean. Peas good; beans fair; silo corn promising; early potatoe fair; late ones poor. Roots are now recovering from the drought; pastures are reviving. The labour situation during harvest was nicely met. Ottawa (Central Experimental Farm): The harvesting of grain is about completed, and the threshing yields are extra good, being decidedly above the average. The corn crop is not quite up to the average; it is very good in some sections, particularly near Ottawa, but in other districts it is not so good, owing to the unfavorable weather of June and poor seed. Roots are a fair crop, recent rains having benefited the turnips and the mangolds very materially.

WHEAT CROP.

Manitoba: Morden: (Experimental Farm): Probably 50 per cent. of the grain crops are already cut and nearly as much in stook. The heads are especially well filled and the kernels plump. The wheat crop will be above average in this section, with the oats and barley bumper crops. No hail or frost injury but rust prevalent; rust and wet weather have combined to make the harvest difficult. No threshing has been done. Potatoes promise to be a record breaker; certainly 400 bushels to the acre on this Farm. Many vegetables slow to ripen on account of the cool weather and great rainfall.

RAIN HELPED.

Saskatchewan: The Saskatchewan Department of Agriculture reports that the recent rains have changed conditions in the southern and central parts of the province for the better and the crop yield will be higher than anticipated. The southwestern and west central districts report that while the rains came too late to increase the crop yields to any great extent, yet the later sown grains will be greatly benefited and will result in much more feed than was thought to be available. In the northwestern, northeastern and the northern part of the east central districts frost has inflicted serious damage, varying from five to seventy-five per cent.

Indian Head: All grain has filled exceptionally well; no damage from frost, hail or rust reported from this district. Seventy per cent. of wheat cut. Conditions have improved greatly and the yield will be heavier than first expected, while the sample will be exceptionally good. Scott: Fine weather prevailing, some rain late in the month. Wheat harvest advanced but extremely light; early oat crop poor. Some late crops will require three to four weeks free from frost. Barley improved. Potato crop generally is very late.

A FAIR CROP.

Alberta: The Alberta Department of Agriculture telegraphs that the harvest is in full swing throughout the province and a fair crop is being reaped. Outlook in the Peace River country is very optimistic. The weather is somewhat irregular; considerable rain having fallen in many parts. Outlook for the live stock problem promising. Lacombe: Rains have greatly benefited the green feed and pastures and relieve the situation materially. Later grain for threshing also filled better than expected at time. Lethbridge: The wheat harvest in southern Alberta well advanced. In many localities in drier districts it is already completed, and threshing in isolated cases started. This part of the province will produce enough wheat for seed next season and have some to spare but the oat and the barley crop is almost nil.

British Columbia: Agassiz: Unsatisfactory harvesting weather during August. Precipitation 7.94, which is 5.3 inches more than average for 27 years. Grain badly discoloured; a quantity which terminated in sheaf straw only fit for bedding. Roots promise a good crop. Potatoes blighted. Second crop of clover much improved. Invermere: Crops generally under irrigation are very good; dry farming results poor. Heavy crop of second cut clover and alfalfa has been cut. Wheat, barley, corn and roots very good; oats fair. Summerland: Apricots, peaches, plums and pears exceeded expectations. Winter apples owing to the increased size, may reach 75 per cent. of last year. Much of the hay was harvested in poor condition on account of rain, but the rain has helped the dry farmers. Some farmers who expected nothing will be able to cut grain for hay. Sidney, V. I.: All crops harvested in good condition. Twenty-five per cent. threshing done. Very dry. Ploughing difficult. Pastures short; supplementary feeding necessary for dairy cattle. Live stock being slightly reduced. Feed of all kinds high in price.

OPERATION FOR APPENDICITIS.

Mrs. J. A. Ballantyne, Sturgeon Falls, Ont., writes: "My husband was treated for appendicitis and the doctors ordered an operation. But he would not consent to an operation and began the use of Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills. Since doing so he has had no need of an operation or even of a doctor as the trouble has completely left him. I cannot find words to speak our gratitude for his cure."

SARNIA, Sept. 9.—The Sarnia Automobile Club has passed the following resolution: "Inasmuch as the manufacture of gasoline have requested that autoists conserve the supply of this product by curtailing the use of the same except for very many purposes, and inasmuch as the conservation will insure the accumulation of a reserve that will be ample to prevent any serious shortage in meeting the overseas demands of the Government and our allies;

"And, inasmuch as other affiliated auto clubs are requesting their members to conserve gasoline, the Sarnia Automobile Club urges the autoists of the city of Sarnia and vicinity, and more especially the club members, to refrain from the unnecessary use of gasoline on Sunday for a period of four weeks at least, or until further notice."

GRAIN MARKET

The flour situation is such as to warrant an advance of 30c per bbl. in the Manitoba grades, war quality, old crop. Stocks have run low, as evidenced in a further advance in mill feeds, the mills awaiting supplies from the new crop. The grain markets were generally strong to-day, based in part on fear of frost last night. The crop report issued to-day from Washington shows a substantial increase in the spring wheat estimates.

Food Board Flashes

The Food Board Person was sitting within earshot of a couple of talkative women.

"Bacon for me," chirruped the one. "I see they've lifted the restrictions off it. Why they ever put them on goodness only knows. It's crazy to have laws like that. They're not needed."

Crazy, was it?

They would hardly seem to be to any one who knows the facts. As a result of these restrictions and the educational propaganda of the Canada Food Board, the export of bacon overseas was increased in the last year by 571 per cent. as compared with the pre-war average exports.

Moreover, every pound of it was needed on the other side and every pound of it has helped in the winning of the war.

Crazy or worth while—which?

The pen may be mightier than the sword, but the dollar has the laugh on both of them.

Land for the Returned Soldiers

Big Movement on Foot in the United States.

MINNEAPOLIS, Minn., Sept. 9 — Organization of the various states participating in the movement to provide thirty million or more acres of land for returning soldiers to farm in the Northwest, is progressing rapidly, according to business men here to-day.

Different means of effecting permanent organizations of the different states may be used. Some favour appointment by the governor of a commission representing each state, while others believe business men, bankers, farmers and state officials should be interested in the movement and a large body formed to negotiate business.

When each state has completed its organization two men will be appointed to a general commission to handle the situation for the entire northwest group of states, including Minnesota, Wisconsin, North Dakota, South Dakota, Michigan and Montana. Each state will make a survey to determine how much land it has available for cultivation by returning soldiers under a plan of liberal contract and report to the general commission.

At a recent conference here representative business men from the various states selected temporary committees to arouse interest in their respective states and try to effect a permanent organization. Minnesota's temporary committee is composed of C. V. Selvig, Crookston; C. P. Craig, Duluth; Daniel Wallace, St. Paul; Fred T. Lincoln, Brainerd and E. F. Farmer, Minneapolis.

"The Girl Who Had No God"

By MARY ROBERTS RINEHART
Author of "The Man in Lower Ten," The After House," Etc.

"Bah!" said the Russian, and rose. "What sort of love is that which changes? I have seen the man. If he cared at all—he still cares."

He stepped to the door of the arbor and drew a long breath. Over on the next hill, sleeping through all this turmoil, lay old Hilary. Under these same stars Huff fled the law, Ward tossed on his bed, Elinor sat despairing and ashamed. What did it all mean? What was the answer?

Perhaps had he known it, old Henriette could have told him—Henriette who had begun to measure her days from the end and not from the beginning, and who now sat on the edge of her bed mumbling. Between her fingers she ran the beads of an old rosary which she had found beneath a carpet.

"I had thought," said Elinor wistfully, "that if I could get away somewhere and start all over again perhaps some day I might be good—like other women. I can never go back to things as they were before."

"No, said the Russian. But make no mistake. You are good as few are good."

"I could sell the house and—and I do not want the jewels. If only you and the others would divide them."

But Boroday would not hear of this. To a certain extent he was reconciled to her going away. Things were closing in on the band. Before long they would probably all have to separate. It were better that Elinor be in safety.

So for a little time they discussed ways and means, available money, the question of a home for old Henriette.

"In some ways," Elinor said, "I feel as though I am deserting him." She glanced toward the graveyard where old Hilary slept. "But all I can think of now is to get away, to forget everything."

"When will they be able to move Mr. Ward?"

"In a week, I should think."

"Then in a week," said Boroday, "where do you think of going, Elinor?"

"I had hardly got so far. Anywhere but here."

"We shall have to plan for you." He picked up his soft hat, and Elinor rose.

"Good-night, Elinor."

"Good-night. I am always happier for having seen you."

He watched her back to the house, then went down the steps into the road.

There had been a dinner at the Country Club that night. The Chief had attended it, unknown to the hostess and the guests, to the extent of sitting in the grill room during the evening and carefully watching the men who came and went. He had dined quite alone in the grill. From where he sat he could see the dinner party guests on the veranda. There were noticeably few jewels to be seen. Over his chop and lager beer the Chief smiled grimly.

After that he shook dice for a short time with a young Englishman named Talbot, an interesting fellow. From him the Chief got the club view of the jewel robbery.

"It's been coming to us for a long time," said Talbot, shaking the dice. "Long ago I advised some of the women who had famous pearls to have copies made and keep the originals in their banks, but they disliked the idea of wearing imitations."

"I see."

"Then a woman isn't satisfied to have a string of pearls; she must have it announced in all the papers. Of course crooks all over the country read about them, and naturally their fingers itch."

"I understand," said the Chief, "that the Bryant pearl has been recovered."

"Yes, and good work on the part of the force," was Talbot's comment. If the chief smiled under his heavy mustache, if there was the faintest possible twinkle in Talbot's eyes, who was there to see?

Talbot took the Chief down to the station in his gray machine. They had chatted very pleasantly. But just opposite the steps from Elinor's garden they blew out a tire. The car swerved, suddenly throwing the light from the lamps along the bank. Standing in the shadows, and thus unexpectedly revealed, was Boroday.

Talbot brought the car to a stop and jumped out. The Russian had gone on down the hill.

"Awfully sorry," said Talbot. "Looks as if you'd have to walk down. Perhaps you will find another car to pick you up."

"I shall rather enjoy the walk," said the Chief, eyes ahead in the darkness. "Whose place is this?"

Talbot glanced up and around.

"I'm afraid I don't know anything about the village." He opened the tool-box.

The Chief took two or three steps along the road and turned. "About here, wasn't it, that the Episcopal clergyman was shot?"

"I can not tell you that either. It was somewhere along this road."

"Good-night," sang the Chief cheerily, and started down the hill.

Boroday had come out of the Hilary Kingston place. He knew that. Right here, almost where he stopped was where Ward had been found. Then, in spite of old Hilary's death, the band was still using his house! Things were closing up. Boroday tramped on down the road. About one hundred yards behind him the Chief followed.

Talbot, hammering at a recalcitrant tire, filled the air with the short, angry raps of his hammer on the rim. . . . .

The Russian had an almost uncanny sense of pursuit. More than once in his life it had saved him, and now he knew he was being followed. He made no attempt whatever to throw his pursuer off the track, but went directly to the station. There he got an evening paper at the closing news-stand and glanced over it, standing under an arc light. For all his engrossment he saw distinctly the figure of the Chief as he crossed the track and took up his station behind a pillar of the train-shed. Boroday was thinking hard. It had been that unlucky swerving of a machine on the hill that had betrayed him. He knew that now. And he had just come out of the Kingston place. It was bad, very bad.

Boroday rode all the way into the city with the Chief a dozen seats behind him. The Chief did not follow him home. He knew where he lived, and he could lay his hand on him when he wanted him. He was going to want him now pretty soon. The Russian knew that, too.

When he had entered his apartment and turned on the light, he found Huff standing by a window. The boy ducked back as the light went up.

For a moment the two eyed one another. Huff was unshaven, sunken-eyed, dirty. The contrast between this wild-eyedo boy and the tall Russian was strong.

"Well?" said Huff defiantly.

"Sit down." Boroday's tone was kind. He went to a closet and got out a bottle of vodka.

"When did you have anything to eat?"

"I am not hungry."

Nevertheless Boroday forced on him a little bread and meat.

"I didn't know you were out until to-night," Huff said at last, pushing his plate away.

"Where have you been?"

"Drinking my head off in a dive on Fortieth Street," said Huff savagely. "I'm all right now."

"What got into you, Walter? For you to turn on us like that—to expose every one of us, as you have—"

"She was in love with him. I wish I'd killed him."

Very patiently, Boroday told him what had happened. Over the matter of the Bryant pearl he passed as lightly as he could. But Huff realized the significance of Elinor's placing it in the almsbox. He went rather white.

"We would have got off with the Country Club matter well enough, but this murderous frenzy of yours has finished us all. We'll have to break up and get away. I want you to go out to Elinor's to-night."

"She will not see me."

"I think she will, said Boroday. "I want her to get away the first thing in the morning. Let her empty the vault."

He hesitated. Elinor's fortune in jewels was becoming a menace. Who ever took them in charge was possibly putting a halter around his neck.

"Bring the jewels to me if you have a chance. If it seems better perhaps you'd better bury them out there."

"Where?"

"You might," said the Russian thoughtfully, "bury them in old Hilarys grave."

CHAPTER XII

It was only an hour or so before dawn when Huff got to the Hall. There were no trains between midnight and morning. And Talbot's car, which he might have used, had been long delayed by his burst tire. He took a suburban trolley line for perhaps half the distance and walked the rest.

At four o'clock in the morning he pressed the arbor button, and old Henriette, grumbling at this second disturbance of her rest, roused Elinor again.

Time was precious. Huff, having rung the announcing bell, made his way up through the dew to the house. And so it was that Elinor, opening the house door met him face to face. As she recoiled from him, he closed the door.

"I have brought you a message from Boroday," he said swiftly. "I've been a fool and scoundrel and —it's about all up."

THE EXAMINER PATTERN SERVICE

LADY'S ONE PIECE CORSET COVER.

A very new and clever idea for a well fitting corset cover is pictured in No. 8858. The garment is all in one piece and is to be slipped on over the head, the neck opening being cut sufficiently large for this purpose. The lower edge of the front is gathered to give a soft fulness at the waistline, but the back fits snugly. There are tab extensions at each side of the front and back, and they fasten securely around the waistline, holding the corset cover in place.

The lady's one piece corset cover No. 8858 is cut in six sizes—34 to 44 inches bust measure. The 36 inch size requires 1¼ yards 36 or 40 inch material, with 2¼ yards 36 or 40 inch material, with 3 yards ribbon.

DOPPLER'S LAW OF LIGHT.

It Proves That Our Solar System Is Whirling Northward.

The fact that our solar system is traveling northward at a rate of twelve miles per second has been determined by means of one of the most remarkable laws in the entire history of science, Doppler's law of light. Stand by a railway track and listen to a rapid train approaching. As it approaches the bell or whistle will increase the pitch of its sound and instantly lower the pitch of tone after it passes and recedes. When coming more waves enter the ear and less when it is departing.

Light consists of the action of waves on the retina of the eye. Our earth and sun, all bodies in the solar system, are moving "to a point in the celestial vault not far from the star Vega," in the constellation Lyra, and, of course, receding from the opposite point of the sky. Waves entering the slit of the spectroscope from the northern stars are compressed—namely, more enter per second and are dispersed toward the violet end of the spectrum, less enter from the southern stars and are dispersed toward the red.

Now, exalted mathematics, based on the laws of light, determine the extent of dispersion of waves toward the red or violet for each decrease or increase of motion of light emitting bodies, and the amount actually found by experiment confirmed the mathematical formulas—a proof that modern mind is expressing at a very exalted rate.—Edgar Lucien Larkin, in New York American.

Scaring the Conscience.

Of all her curious customs London cannot boast of a more singular one that that formerly so strictly adhered to at Holland House, one of the most historic old mansions in the British capital. The last of the Lords Holland shot himself during a fit of despondency. Everything pointed to a clear case of self murder, yet the Holland family could never be dissuaded from the notion that the old man had been murdered by some unknown assasin. Accordingly every night for years it was the custom for one of the family to go to the rear of the house punctually at 11 o'clock and fire a gun for the purpose, it is said, of "scaring the conscience" of the murderer. This curious practice is a relic of medieval days in continental Europe, and the case in point is probably the only instance where it has been noticed since the days of the crusades.

When Men Powdered Their Faces.

The use of powders for the hair and face, which began in the sixteenth century, infected the men. Henry III. had the habit of parading the streets of Paris, his face covered with white and red paste, like a faded coquette, and his hair filled with violet powder and scented with musk. Powders were made of all colors, and the infatuation was such that servant girls were afraid to be seen in public with their hair of the natural color and not being able to buy that used by their employers, employed sawdust as a substitute.—London Mirror.

No Humbug! Lift Off Corns

Doesn't hurt a bit to lift a corn or callus off with fingers

For a few cents you can get a small bottle of the magic drug freezone recently discovered by a Cincinnati man.

Just ask at any drug store for a small bottle of freezone. Apply a few drops upon a tender, aching corn and instantly, yes, immediately, all soreness disappears and shortly you will find the corn or callus so loose that you lift it out, root and all, with the fingers.

Just think! Not one bit of pain before applying freezone or afterwards. It doesn't even irritate the surrounding skin.

Hard corns, soft corns or corns between the toes, also hardened calluses on bottom of feet, just seem to shrivel up and fall off without hurting a particle. It is almost magical.

Ladies! Keep a tiny bottle on your dresser and never let a corn or callus ache twice.

ODE TO A NICKEL.

O nickel, what a lonely place would be
This world of ours were it bereft of thee!
Of all the minted flock that yearly flies
Across this land you coin are my size.
Without thee I would cheerless go my way.
Nor hamburgs would I munch at close of day.
The street car which at midnight takes me home
Would rattle on without me. I would roam
About ice-creamless, poolless, shineless, too,
If some wise statesman had not thought of you.
Fair nickel, all the moving picture shows
Without your aid would shrivel up and close;
The gum trust would be busted, in the lurch;
The contribution plate that's passed at church
Would not weigh half so much; the tightwad's yell
At the hicostoliving soon would swell
Beyond belief. Thou art the poor man's bread
The rich man's quick excuse when he is bled
For shekels. And had I but saved your kind
Within my empty pockets I might find
The dough which now I lack. My sorry face
Might now be wreathed in smiles which would replace
The clouded brow at this financial pickle
I am in, O nickel!

OUR DAILY SHORT STORY

"Too Old"

By VICTOR REDCLIFFE

"You see the big entrance to the factory. Beyond, a great broad stairway leading to the offices. After that the draughting rooms. Then building after building, pattern lofts, machine rooms, molding floors. Well, thirty years, boy and man, I've gone up those stairs, kept going till I mounted higher and higher, and became superintendent, then—follow me a bit, and I'll show you the other side of the picture."

Thus Gabriel Purcell, sturdy old disciplinarian of fifty. He did not look it, he did not feel it. His voice was clear as a clarion note, his eye was full of fire and power. Just a wee stoop of the shoulders threw the stalwart figure out of direct plumb line, and the silvering hair was touched with the first frost of time and winter.

He carried a magnificent gold-headed cane under his arm, disdaining its use as a support and only taking it with him for company because it was the cherished gift of some cheap shovel men in the factory, who loved him and his just, helpful way as if he had been an own father to them. Gabriel Purcell led his companion, an old-time friend, making a brief visit to the town, around the great stone wall inclosing the plant, and then swung his cane to where a long steel chute ran from the upper floor of the tin specialty shops to the barren rear yard. Down it was now pouring the scraps, refuse, waste of the factory.

"The dump head—see it, Farleigh?" questioned the old man bitterly. "That's me—in at the front, rushed through, worked out and thrown on the dump head!"

At that same hour Thomas Wynne head of the great Wynne company, surfacing his attorney in his private office.

"The fact is, Wynne, isn't it that Purcell is Osierized?" submitted the latter.

"Don't use the word jauntily, Randall," returned the founder, "but that about covers it. You don't know how it jars on me to face the merest imputation of injustice regarding Purcell. He has been my right hand since I started in here with a little tweenby forty shed of a shop, and has helped build the business up to its present up-to-date proportions. You know how fifteen years ago my wife inherited a large estate and supplied one hundred and fifty thousand dollars capital to expand the enterprise. Well, recently a younger brother of hers, what you may call a mechanical theorist and ultra-system man, got the idea in his head that he could come in here and double up profits in a year."

"But what interest has he in the business?"

"None, except through the courtesy of my wife and some relatives who are also stockholders. Of course I can't gainsay her. Her estate owns considerable of the company stock. She helped build me up. I can't afford to quibble with her. I had to supercede Purcell. My brother-in-law is now in charge of the mechanical departments. Younger men, stricter rules, more business, higher profits, his aim. We shall see how it works out." Mr. Wynne sighed.

"We shall, indeed," muttered the lawyer cynically.

"Yes, that isn't all, Randall," resumed the manufacturer. "I am approaching a delicate subject. You know that Purcell has a son who is the pride of his soul and the apple of his eye, Arnold Purcell."

"Yes," nodded the lawyer, and it was palpably apparent that the mention aroused pleasant sentiments. "A fine young man, an exceptional one, they say. Capable, ambitious, high grade. I hear that he has won quite some eminence as an advanced sanitary engineer."

"Very well, by some strange freak of destiny he and my daughter, Elsinore, met at a social function in the city. Plainly, they are in love with each other. I am no aristocrat. I sprung from nothing, as did Gabriel Purcell. My wife, however, as you know, draws the line at social distinctions, or rather those of wealth. She has flatly told young Purcell that Elsinore must never marry a man who has not as large a fortune as her own."

"And Arnold Purcell?"

"Asks time to make good the condition."

"Great for him! He'll make it," declared the lawyer with confidence.

"The young man has not set his father or others of his love affairs," said Wynne. "He and Elsinore seem to have settled down to sensible, dignified patience and mutual fidelity. He does not intrude himself upon her company. He is pursuing the even tenor of his way, and she is content. It is the father I worry about. I want you to go and see him, and here is the memoranda of what I want to do for him."

Mr. Randall departed with his instructions. He found Purcell at his home. The latter had been a widower for many years and lived in a comfortable, but small house at the edge of the town. It overlooked a deep pit nearly a quarter of a mile in extent, to which a spur of the railroad ran. For ten years a soft limestone quarry had been mined here to supply slag mixture for the big blast furnaces. The entire property belonged to Purcell, but was of little apparent value. He greeted Mr. Randall civilly.

"I've come from your best friend," spoke the lawyer. "He wants you to accept a pension, a free and clear town residence, an automobile and—"

Gabriel Purcell burst out into a hearty laugh. He held in his hand a letter he had just received from his son. He was strangely changed from the wandering misanthrope of the early morning.

"Stop right there, Mr. Randall," he said heartily. "I understand Mr. Wynne and he understands me. The new experiment is forced on him, and no hard feelings. It won't go through. Remember what I say, that before a year is out I'll be back and the old system resumed. And say," and the old man's eyes glowed, "I'll be able to help him out if he finds he's cramped for capital."

The lawyer eyed Purcell as though he was getting rid of his senses.

"Oh, I'm not talking wild," chuckled the old man. He waved the letter in his hand towards the old quarry pit. "I own that, you know."

"That hole in the ground, you mean?"

"Exactly, and it's going to be a gold mine."

"I can't make out Purcell," reported the lawyer to Mr. Wynne. "He talks millions. He's got some dream of wealth and he seems happy as a lark. He says he'll be back in a year."

"I honestly hope it," groaned Mr. Wynne. "Already some of the modern efficiency tactics of the new superintendent have set the older working gangs by the ears, and they are quitting by the score."

Mr. Wynne put himself out of the way to meet Purcell whenever he could. He was surprised, pleased and gratified to note the glad, sincere welcome of the discarded faithful old fellow worker. Purcell was more than friendly, he was cheerful, loquacious, and referred constantly to his "vacation," and blinked jocularly at the founder and referred to "the good old times coming back all new."

Then came a period of care and trouble for the plant. A good many of the old expert workmen sought new fields of labor. The new superintendent took a large contract at a loss. In rushing a special order they forfeited the trade of one of their oldest and most substantial clients.

Meanwhile, something that puzzled the townspeople was going on at the old quarry. Near the edge of the big pit new tracks were laid, a large weighing scale put in, derricks erected, and scoops, elevating and lowering machinery. Purcell bustled about the liveliest, cheeriest being ever was, and his son Arnold made frequent inspection visits to the old homeset the quarry pit.

One day, like a thunder-clap, came the news that the big plant was shut down pending a reorganization. The new superintendent had resigned. Some outside stockholders had become alarmed at the reports of fast shrinking profits, and had thrown their holdings on the market at a ruinous decline.

That very morning a train of 50 gondola dump cars gracefully wound round from the main railroad tracks and half encircled the quarry pit. Each car was weighed, the contents dumped, and the train returned to the city. Ashes, building debris, all the daily accumulated rubbish and waste of a great city was represented in this first dumping into that useless, valueless, almost fathomless quarry pit.

Thomas Wynne looked up from his desk in the office of the deserted plant as Gabriel Purcell entered. The founder's face was worn and drawn.

"Is it as bad as they say?" questioned Purcell.

"Worse. Outside of my wife's capital I have no resources. I must have two hundred thousand dollars to get back where we were before this ghastly experiment was made, or go into bankruptcy."

"Good!" cried Purcell animatedly. "I'll provide the deficit amount for a like amount of stock."

"You?" cried Wynne incredulously.

"Myself and my son, yes. You see, old friend, the quarry pit. Arnold is the head expert in recovery and disposal work for the city. We are only 12 miles away, and the nearest available dumping pit. They have been carrying the refuse out into the lake, but the barge rates have become prohibitive. In fact, we have a ten years' contract for disposing of the rubbish at forty cents a cubic yard. Fifty cars a day and all profit, but the weighing. Figure it up, and don't wonder that we are able to anticipate a million in payment any time we want it."

"And you propose—"

"To go back to my old job and run the plant on the old safe, sensible basis. Old friend," suggested Purcell, with twinkling eyes, "did it happen to occur to you that in Osierizing the plant you forgot that you were ten years older than myself?"

And then when affairs had been readjusted and Arnold Purcell qualified fully as a meet suitor for pretty, patient Elsinore, and the old cheerful hum of industry cheered the contented workmen at the plant, Thomas Wynne and Gabriel Purcell, again in the right groove, felt as though they had stepped back into the magic enthusiasm of their earlier years.

When a man has not a good reason for doing a thing, he has one good reason for letting it alone.—Thomas Scott.

PLANNING THE MEAL

Balanced Rations an Important Factor in Home Economics.

"Oh, dear! This eternal planning and contriving, from meal to meal, over what to serve next."

A common enough exclamation, surely, and one familiar to the family man, who too often considers wife's work more or less of a shiecure and wonders why she frets so easily over trifles.

Just throwing things together in bulk, regardless of the food's effect on the general health and efficiency of those who must eat it, is a wasteful and even a dangerous process.

Nowadays, the thoughtful housewife "balances rations" as skillfully and carefully as does the careful stock feeder. She feels that what is good for beasts of the field is surely worth applying to man.

A few hints on balancing rations from the home economics department, College of Agriculture, University of Wisconsin, follow:

Fat, protein and carbohydrates should be distributed through the day so that no meal will contain an excessive amount of any one foodstuff.

Don't serve two or more foods rich in the same foodstuff at one meal. For example, macaroni and cheese with meat, rice and potatoes.

Don't serve the same food in the same form twice in the same day except with such staples as bread, butter and milk. Never serve such a combination as tomato soup and tomato salad, or creamed peas and cream of pea soup in the same meal.

Work for flavor contrasts between different courses of a meal. Seek to have pleasing combinations of flavor, color and form in each course.

Plan to serve a fruit or vegetable at each meal. A mixed diet of vegetable and animal food is safest and best.

Would Not Be So Cruel.

Alice—Now that you've broken your engagement with Jack, you will of course return the diamond ring he gave you? Betty—Certainly not. It would be a constant reminder of the happiness he had missed. — Boston Transcript.

SUMMER COMPLIANT
CAUSES MANY DEATHS AMONG INFANTS

If every mother would keep on hand, during the hot season, a bottle of Dr. Fowler's Extract of Wild Strawberry, she would be saved a great deal of anxiety and her baby a great deal of pain.

Hundreds of infants are carried off annually through neglect of this simple precaution. There is no remedy so safe and effectual for the cramps and pains in the stomach, cholera infantum, the diarrhoea of teething children, and none which has saved so many babies' lives during the past seventy-two years it has been on the market.

Mrs. C. W. Cooper, Collingwood, Ont., writes: "When my little boy was four months old he had a very bad attack of summer complaint. Nothing seemed to do him any good that was prescribed by the doctor. He got steadily worse until we thought we would lose him. One day a friend, with children of his own, asked me if I had ever used Dr. Fowler's Extract of Wild Strawberry. I at once got a bottle, but with no hopes of it doing any good, as so much else had failed, but to my surprise and wonder, I soon saw a change in baby, much to my great relief, and we soon had him well again.

I now keep it in the house all the time, and when the children show any signs of diarrhoea it never fails to check the attack.

There are many substitutes for "Dr. Fowler's" on the market. Don't accept any of them. Get the genuine put up by The T. Milburn Co., Limited, Toronto, Ont. Price, 35c.

Canadians Achieve New Records in World's History

Dominion Soldiers Achieve Big Results in One Month—Capture Seventh of Guns Taken—Lifting the Veil on World's Record.

MOVED TO ANOTHER FRONT

(By J. F. B. Livesay — Canadian Press Correspondent).

WITH THE CANADIAN FORCES, Sept. 10. — It is a month yesterday since the Canadian corps went into action before Amiens. In that battle and in the more recent battles of Arras on has added two important chapters to the history of the world and to the deeds that redound to the honour of Canada. In that brief span its captures of guns have been one-seventh of the total guns captured by all the Allied nations this year.

Lifting the Veil.

It is possible now to lift the veil a little and give a connected account of these operations.

During the period July 1 to July 10, the Canadian corps was concentrated in the Monchy-Breton-Liggereuil-Le Laurov-Oisial-Auchel-Chateau de la Haie area and held in reserve. For the previous two months they had been constantly practising open warfare. On July 10 the corps was released from the reserve and relieved a corps in the line from Telegraph Hill south. This line was held by three divisions and our 2nd Division, which had been attached up to that time to another corps, thus losing the benefit of the period of training, was taken out and put into reserve to go through the same course. The general plan adopted during this period of holding the line was to foster in the mind of the enemy the idea of a pending attack in order to retain or draw his reserves into this area and consequently an aggressive policy was adopted. Active patrolling was carried out by day and night, and raids were constantly effected. The artillery carried out a vigorous programme of harassing, firing, and counter-battery work. From prisoners it was learned that the enemy expected an attack and that troops had been frequently rushed forward to defend the Drocourt-Queant line.

Another Front.

On July 30, the corps was transferred to the fourth army and orders were received to move to another front. The time between July 30 and August 8 was given up to moving the corps to the new area extending from Villers-Bretonneaux in the north, to the woods of Geksil Gentelles in the south. How the move was executed and with what secrecy can best be indicated by the fact that no member of the corps knew where he was going, and the success of the attack was demonstrated by the fact that the enemy was taken completely by surprise on the night of August 7-8. Therefore the Canadian corps was concentrated in woods and fields and all available cover in front of Amiens and immediately behind the front line extending from Domart through Hangard Wood, east of Cachy. At twenty minutes past four on the morning of August 8, the corps attacked with three divisions, the second division being on the north, the first in the centre and the third on the south. The corps was extended between the Amiens-Chaulnes railway and the Amiens and Roye road. On the left flank of the Canadians were the Australians, and on the right flank, the French. All troops attacked simultaneously.

A World's Record.

During the first day the Canadian troops advanced about twenty thousand yards, a world's record, capturing the villages of Domart, Hourges, Hangard, Abecourt, Courcelles, Demuin, Ignacourt, Marcelcave (whose capture has been erroneously attributed to the Australians), Beaucourt, Capeux, Wiencourt, Le Quesnel, Gillancourt, Beaufort and Folies. On the second day a further advance was made through stiff fighting, and when the fourth Canadian division was thrust into the fray to relieve the second. On this day the villages of Bouchoir, Warvillers, Rosieres, Maucourt, Maharicourt and Chilly were captured. On the third day the corps was reinforced by a British division, and the attack was proceeded with. The villages of Quesnoy and Fouquescourt fell on this day. The fighting was intense since the enemy had been driven back on to a system of trenches easy of defence and was making the most of it.

THE FIRST TROUSERS.

They Were Worn Skin Tight and Led Men to Pad Their Legs.

The advent of the silk hat led to the introduction of trousers. Knee breeches and silk stockings did not correspond with stovepipe hats. Try them now and see if you think they do. So reformers set themselves to work to devise some nether garments congruous with the new headpiece.

The result was trousers. There had, it is true, been some precursors of those inimitable garments. The Turk had worn voluminous twin bags on his legs, gathered and tied, bag fashion, at the ankles. The Cossacks, too, had found such things more convenient for horseback riding than any other garb, and "pantaloons" were used in armies, especially by the French. But none of these nor any other garment that was worn prior to 1815 could be described as genuine trousers.

The first trousers worn in London were of plain, light colored cloth, and fitted very tightly; almost as tight, we may believe, as those in this country a generation ago. In the second season striped and other figured cloths were used by some, but such trousers were regarded as quite plebeian and fit for wearing only in bad weather when the streets were muddy, or as a sort of rough outing garb at the seaside. A favorite material for trousers worn by men of fashion was an elastic stockinet, which fitted literally "skin tight." Beneath such garments, to supply the deficiencies of nature, men were not averse to wearing false calves and other paddings on their legs. Straps passing beneath the foot were used to keep the trouser legs held down in place.—Exchange.

SWISS MILITARY SYSTEM.

Tests All Youths Must Pass Before They Become Soldiers.

The Swiss system is ultra militaristic and probably would never be acceptable to the United States. But it is interesting, nevertheless, as indicating how the problem of defense has been met and apparently solved by the earnest and patriotic people of a republic like our own.

The Swiss system is compulsory and begins with the early schooling of each boy. He does not drill or handle firearms, however, until he is twenty years old, when he reports to federal authorities for physical and literary examination. He must be able to read and write and figure, and answer questions in elemental Swiss history and geography.

The physical tests require that the applicant shall cover at least eight feet in a running jump, lift a weight of thirty-seven pounds in both hands at least four times, and run eighty yards in fourteen seconds.

Those who fail in these tests are given an extension of time for further training, not to exceed four years, and if physically disqualified at the end of that period they are obliged to pay a tax, or to take some assigned position which they can fill.—Kansas City Journal.

The Sixteenth Century Carver.

At the formal banquet of the sixteenth century the man who carved the meat was bound with the red tape of precedent. When carving for distinguished guests he had to remember that certain parts of the birds or meat must be set aside. In carving for his lord and lady he was expected to exercise great discretion in the size of the pieces he sent round, "for ladies will be soon angry and their thoughts soon changed, and some lords are soon pleased and some not, as they be of complexion." He was expected to have the rules both of the kitchen and the peerage at his knife's end. A pike, for instance, must be dished up whole for a lord and in slices for commoner folk. The rank of his diners, too, determined whether a pig was to be served up whole, sliced, plain or with gold leaf or whether new bread or bread three days old should be eaten.

Attacked In Front and Rear.

A youngster of our acquaintance who has a faculty for getting into scrapes recently expressed the wish that he was a postage stamp. When asked why, he answered, "Because a postage stamp can only be licked once," whereupon we pointed out that the stamp received, besides the licking, a severe punch in the face.—Boston Transcript.

THE STORY OF ICELAND

THIS COUNTRY WILL BECOME A SOVEREIGN STATE.

The People Will Have Their Own National Flag and Become Independent of Other Lands, Although Federated With Denmark — Iceland Is an Ancient Norwegian Colony With Norwegian Culture.

DENMARK and Iceland have concluded a treaty, to be finally settled by referendum in September, to the effect that the two countries shall form a federation of free sovereign states, to be united under a common king. All friends of Iceland, especially the Norwegians, rejoice that this famous old country, the Hellas of the north, shall at last be recognized as a sovereign state under her own national flag.

Iceland is an ancient Norwegian colony, wholly populated by Norwegians. She was a free republic for centuries, and represents, with her sages, Norwegian culture at its highest development since ancient times. She has been the source of the Norwegian modern revival in Ibsen and Bjornsen. Both Norway and Iceland for centuries were under German-Danish rule, against their treaty rights until by revolutions in 1814 and 1905 the Norwegians freed themselves from foreign domination. With hope and joy Norway followed her daughter nation's struggle to win freedom again.

For a thousand years she kept her language and nationality intact despite severe oppression, and is fully entitled by history, present capacity and natural wealth to enter a league of free nations, which this war will establish, on the same footing as Norway, Denmark and Sweden.

Iceland obtained a legislative parliament in 1874 and later worked to free her legislation from interference by the Danish Government. During the war, Denmark was forced, on account of Iceland's geographical position, to conclude separate commercial agreements on behalf of Iceland with the Allies and America. This was a further impulse to the Icelandic freedom movement.

She repeated her demand for a national flag, but was refused by Denmark last November. Iceland then demanded complete independence, at least a purely personal union according to old treaty rights. This made the Danes change their attitude. In June, four delegates, prominent leaders of political parties in Denmark, went to Iceland to negotiate a settlement. A treaty was signed whereby Iceland's sovereignty was nominally recognized. She obtained her own flag, which was a step forward. How freedom and sovereignty were carried out may be seen in the chief regulations. Denmark conducts Iceland's foreign affairs, and Danish ministers and consuls represent her in foreign countries, assisted by subordinates expert in Icelandic matters. The adviser in Icelandic foreign affairs is appointed by the Danish Foreign Office, but he is not responsible to the Icelandic people. While Denmark can conclude treaties independent of Iceland, the latter country is bound by Denmark. Iceland's only safeguard internationally is that Denmark cannot conclude treaties binding Iceland against the will of Icelandic Government. The Danes have equal rights with the Icelanders with regards to iceland, and vice versa.

The significance of this regulation which seems nominally to establish an equality of rights, is best understood by considering a project of equal citizenship for Danes and Germans in their respective countries. Germany has 70,000,000 inhabitants, Denmark, 3,000,000 and Iceland 150,000. German citizenship in Denmark would mean German domination and absorption of the Danish nationality, while Danish rights in Germany would not endanger German nationality there. There is the same relative strength between the Danes and Icelanders as there is between Germany and Denmark, so by submitting to their demands the Icelanders opened admission to the Danes, who became master of their country. In Denmark recently a company was formed to purchase the waterfalls of Iceland, which are the biggest waterfalls of Europe and constitute the future of Iceland. The company intends to start works there for the production of nitrate from the air for Danish agriculture, and make Denmark independent of other countries for fodder.

By obtaining equal rights with Icelandic citizens, the Danes will be able to control conditions for their own benefit, as Iceland will be prevented from distinguishing between Icelandic and Danish capital. The Danes have equal rights in the fishery in Icelandic seas with the natives, and vice versa. No Icelander goes to Danish waters for fishing, but the fisheries in Icelandic territory is one of the country's greatest natural resources. Iceland declares for permanent neutrality, but has no marine flag. Denmark is under no obligations for her defence.

How Iceland was persuaded to submit to these conditions can be guessed from Danish pro-German articles in the Scandinavian press. She had been told that if she should want her independence she would be seized by Germany, Britain or America, so it would be safest for her to remain under Danish protection. There was of course, not the slightest foundation for the suspicion cast on Britain and America. Germany is powerless so far north, but Denmark seems to have profited by German bluffs and intrigues and to have frightened the Icelanders from demanding independence.

Iceland also was told by the Danes that she had a responsibility toward all northern states, and would be doing a service to them by a close union with Denmark, and would strengthen the feeling of kinship and common interest among the northern countries against surrounding great powers.

However, just to the contrary, free, independent Iceland with real command of her foreign commercial policy, would be a great help to Norway in her lifelong task as a nation to counteract German spiritual and economic penetration of the north via Copenhagen. This has always been a menace to the three Scandinavian states, and is now greater than ever as both Sweden and Denmark gravitate commercially toward Germany. Britain has always been the chief friend of Norwegian independence, and never a menace.

Subordinated to Denmark, Iceland stands in peril of being drawn into the German sphere of influence, while she missed the best chance of her history of becoming a free nation. Instead of the historic demand of Iceland for Icelanders, the treaty makes Iceland for Danes.

BATTLES AND DOWNPOURS.

There Is No Connection Between Gunfire and Rainstorms.

So far as the records are available, the rain accompanying or immediately following great battles is not unlike that which might have been expected in the course of natural events, says a writer in the Popular Science Monthly. Bearing in mind the fact, already stated, that throughout large areas rain occurs on an average once in three or four days and also the subjective fact that rain associated with July 4 celebrations or with battles would doubtless not have been remembered had it not been for such associations, the hypothesis appears to have no foundation.

In 1892 the United States government disproved the idea by experiments in which violent explosions of dynamite were produced within clouds by means of kites and balloons, with no rain following as a direct or even as an indirect result. The practice, still followed in various European countries, of attempting to prevent hail by bombarding approaching clouds or of projecting vortex rings of smoke upward also is without scientific basis. The relatively feeble convectional currents resulting from these artificial attempts to influence the weather are too meager to have any appreciable effect upon the massive convection accompanying storms and are wholly inadequate to influence precipitation.

Jimmie's New Clothes Stirred Ma's Ambition For His Success.

Sir Thomas Lipton says it requires a vast deal of courage and charity to be philanthropic and tells the following story in illustration:

"I remember when I was just starting in business. I was very poor and making every sacrifice to enlarge my little store in Glasgow. My only assistant was a boy of fourteen, faithful and willing and honest. One day I heard him complaining, and with justice, that his clothes were so shabby that he was ashamed to go to church.

"'There's no chance of my getting a new suit this year,' he told me. 'Dad's out of work, and it takes all of my wages to pay the rent.'

"I thought the matter over, and then took a sovereign from my carefully hoarded savings and bought the boy a stout, warm suit of blue cloth. He was so grateful that I felt repaid for my sacrifice. But the next day he didn't come to work. I met his mother in the street and asked her the reason.

"'Why, Mr. Lipton,' she said, courtesying, 'Jimmie looks so respectable, thanks to you, sir, that I thought I would send him round town today to see if he couldn't get a better job.'"—Philadelphia Ledger.

FIXING PRICES IN AUSTRALIA

Is Causing the Keenest Interest in the Land of the Kangaroo.

MELBOURNE, Sept. 9.—The great political question that is most discussed and seems to arouse the keenest interest is the continued fixing of prices of various commodities. The Minister for Price-Fixing — Massy Greene—is one of the busiest men in Australian public life to-day, and the decision of the Cabinet to add meat to the other commodities for which a definite price is fixed will add to his labours. This decision was reached last Saturday when the recommendations of the Interstate Commission were refused by the Cabinet. The fixed price is to be based upon the export parity, and is to relate to all cash sales by retail. The Imperial contract prices, less a fractional deduction to offset freezing charges, is to be fixed as the maximum wholesale price for meat and the retail prices will be made public in a few days. The decision has already aroused some dissatisfaction and a noticeable fall in stock values took place immediately after the promulgation of the Government's decision. It is argued by opponents of the measure that a heavy lambing season is in prospect and had the Cabinet not interfered prices would have fallen automatically with the first drafts of lambs.

With regard to wheat, an agreement of four shillings and fourpense ($1.04) a bushel, less freight from the point of delivery is to be guaranteed to farmers in all parts of the country for the 1918-1919 wheat crop. This increased price was arrived at a meeting of the Ministers of Agriculture of the various States with the Acting Prime Minister which took place last week. All the States agreed to this price with the exception of the representatives of New Soutr Wales, who left the conference when the decision was reached. The Commonwealth will arrange for a first advance of three shillings (72 cents) a bushel.

The Price of Bread.

Meanwhile, the cost of living is being kept down to some extent and a comparison of the prices paid in Australian cities with those prevailing in Canada and the United States, to say nothing of England, shows that a considerable advantage rests with us. Bread is selling at from thirteen to fourteen cents for a four pound loaf, while at an enquiry held by the Assistant Prices Commissioner this week a baker declared that he could sell bread by retail at twelve cents for four pounds and still make a profit if he was fairly treated by the millers.

Federal finances under the new Treasurer are making a much better showing than his critics and opponents predicted when he assumed office. That a surplus will remain in the Treasury on June 30 is now practically certain. The year began with a balance in hand of $10,000,000 and, although part of this has been spent, a surplus of $8,750,000 is confidently predicted. The yield of gold for May shows a total of over 22,000 ounces, an increase of over 7,000 ounces compared with May of last year, and this is valued at about $435,000. The gross revenues of the railways have largely increased and for this financial year which ends in two weeks time the Victorian railways are expected to set a new record with a gross revenue of $82,000,000.

A record price for a five year old New South Wales pure bred ram was set last week when F. S. Malkner and Sons of the Wangemella Estate sold such an animal for $10,500, the purchaser being Mr. J. S. Minaar of Graff Reinet, South Africa. The ram is known as His Majesty and already one of his progeny has sold for $5,500.

Increase of Crime.

The increase in crime is beginning to alarm the authorities and protests against the inefficiency or carelessness of the police are being made in many quarters. A return brought down in Parliament shows that between 1910 and 1916 there were in Victoria 72 murders for which 32 persons were found guilty and three hanged while out of 62,795 robberies there were only 9,475 arrests and 6,193 convictions. The question of strengthening the police and detectives forces of the larger cities is likely to be aired in the federal and state parliaments very shortly.

DROPS INSURANCE.

The city of Windsor will not continue to pay premiums on the 180 insurance policies it took out at the beginning of the war on the lives of 180 Windsor soldiers, the City Council has decided. The action will save the city $10,000 a year on the premiums. Soldiers who lives were insured will not lose the entire benefit of the policies, however, as they are payable in full without any future premium payments if the holder dies within ten years of the date of issue. After ten years they are void except in cases where the holder can pass a new physical examination, in which event he can continue payments himself.

PETERBOROUGH, TUESDAY, SEPTEMBER 10, 1918

British and French Are Still Driving Ahead In Spite of Stubborn Enemy Resistance

Additional Gains of an Important Nature Have Been Made by the Allies—Enemy Attempts a Counter Offensive.

OFFICIAL REPORTS

LONDON (Official), Sept. 10. — The Germans delivered a counter attack yesterday against the positions won by the British to the west of Gouzeaucourt, fronting the Hindenburg line southwest of Cambrai. Field Marshal Haig announced to-day that the enemy assault was completely repulsed. In this same sector the British line was advanced during the night south of the town of Havrincourt. On the Flanders front the British progressed northeast of Neuve Chapelle and north of Armentieres.

FRENCH OFFICIAL.

PARIS, Sept. 10.—Important progress towards the southern end of the Hindenburg line in the neighbourhood of LaFere, north of St. Gobain Massif has been made by the French forces. The War Office announces the capture of the Liez Fort and additional ground in the St. Gobain region.

North of LaFere the French advanced capturing the towns of Remigny, Montescourt-Lizerolles, Clastres, Serecourt-Le-Grand, Roupy and Etreillers, the last two towns being within three and a half miles of St. Quentin.

Counter Offensive.

(Special to The Examiner.)

WASHINGTON, Sept. 10.—That Germany is about to attempt something approaching a counter offensive along the western line is the belief here to-day. Presence of an unusual amount of artillery and increasing evidence of the massing of reserves at certain vulnerable points indicate that the Teuton has plans for a stand.

The Allies have regained practically what they lost in the German smash, Germany is now striving to halt the onrush at virtually the lines existing before the March push.

Latest reports as to the situation at Lens, recently reported taken by the British say that the British are astride of and beyond the town, which is filled with gas and German machine gun nests.

In Old Trenches.

(United Press Service.)
(By Lowell Mellett.)

WITH THE BRITISH ARMIES IN FRANCE, Sept. 10.—The British to-day hold their old trenches facing the Hindenburg line at Goucecourt, as the result of a brief but brisk engagement. These trenches were built last year.

According to captured orders, the Germans proposed to remain here for some days while their retirement to permanent lines was accomplished to the southward, but they were quickly crowded out. This gain foreeasts an early enemy retreat behind the main line here.

The Germans are not relinquishing ground without a struggle. Immediately after the British attack at Gouzeacourt they counter-attacked and pushed Haig's men back behind the village, but a renewed British assault gained all objectives and fifty prisoners. Simultaneously the New Zealanders on the left pinched off seventy prisoners.

A Reorganization.

The German counter attack indicates reorganization in some of the divisions opposite the British. One of these is the Sixth Cavalry, dismounted. A prisoner from this unit a few days ago declared the cavalry won't fight if infantry won't.

A Barrage.

(United Press Service.)
(By Frank J. Taylor.)

WITH THE AMERICAN ARMIES IN FRANCE, Sept. 10.—In the Woevre the German artillery fire has increased to the intensity of a barrage. This is the only activity on this part of the front, except for patrolling encounters in Alsace Lorraine. All the German raiders were driven off.

American negroes recently held an important sector in the Vosges, swearing to get revenge for German barbarities during August. From refugees, our patrols learned the Germans fear the Negroes, as their officers have told them the American colored troops always cut off their prisoners' ears.

The negroes first suffered from German trickery when a sergeant and three privates were on outpost duty, and several Germans arose immediately in front of them crying "kamerad." The negroes did not shoot, thinking the Bodhes were sincere, whereupon the Huns threw hand grenades at them, killing one and wounding another. The remainder drove off the Germans. As the result of this treachery, the negroes are full of the spirit of revenge.

HYDRO WILL DEVELOP 10,000 H. P. FOR PETERBORO

Announcement Made Yesterday That $1,500,000 Has Been Authorized by an Order-in-Council for the Development of the Water Power at Ranney's Falls, Campbellford.

HON. DR. REID'S ASSISTANCE

The Hydro-Electric Commission notified the city yesterday afternoon of its decision to spend $1,250,000 in the erection at Ranney's Falls, Campbellford, of a power plant that will produce from 8,000 to 10,000 horse power. It was stated by a representative of the Commission, in a telephone communication with City Clerk Armstrong, that the work would be begun as soon as possible this fall. The workmen are already organized and engaged in laying a flume at the Healey's Falls powerhouse for the installation of a new 1,500 kilowatt generator. When this is completed the men will be transferred to Campbellford. It is not expected that much progress will be made before winter sets in, but the preliminary work should be well advanced for the general operations next spring.

Is Welcome News.

This announcement from the Commission is as timely as it is gratifying to the City Council, manufacturers and other citizens who have for some time been convinced that Peterborough's rights and needs were receiving scant attention from Sir Adam Beck and his colleagues. When the Quaker Oats Company informed the Council that it would require for its own use the surplus of 1,500 h.p. which it had been supplying the city, the visible shortage of power in this city and district became exceedingly acute. In fact the power situation had reached a crisis.

The Council has not been idle, but its activities in this matter were not reported. Conferences were held with the manufactaurers, deputations went to Toronto, but the only result of the first efforts was a rather alarming reply from the Commission that it had no power in this district to replace the Quaker Oats' surplus allotment. Furthermore, there was no indication of plans to meet the growing shortage.

Responsibility on the Commission.

By the agreement which the Commission made with the city when Peterborough adopted the Hydro scheme, an abundant supply of power was guaranteed. But the first emergency found the Commission unable to meet this city's increasing requirements.

Mr. J. H. Burnham advised the Council to appeal to Hon. Dr. Reid, Minister of Railways and Canals,

A STATE OF SURPRISE

Enemy Resistance is Stiffening and New Operations are Looked For.

THE GERMAN VIEW

(United Press Despatch).
(By Wm. Philip Simms)

PARIS, Sept. 10.—Once again the allies stand face to face with the Germans on almost the identical lines where they stood throughout the winter, awaiting the unloosing of a great Teutonic offensive. Once again as it was last March, each day is a day of waiting and suspense and "what will to-morrow bring?" To-day the British, French and Americans are making their last adjustments in front of the Hindenburg line.

Positions Menaced

The British menace Armentieres, Lens, Douai and Cambrai, while the French threaten St. Quentin. LaFere, St. Gobain and Laon. Will the allies keep up their drive, and will the Germans attempt to hold their present positions? The next sixty days must tell the tale. After that General Winter takes charge of operations. Foch continues in his role of human enigma. The only hint given as to his intentions was when he said the allied offensive would not stop until victory had been won. This statement is elastic as he probably intended it to be. It may mean an intense attack, throwing the Germans back from the Hindenburg line this autumn ,or it may mean merely harassing them until the new campaign season opens in the spring.

Retreat Ended

Hindenburg, however, announces that his retreat is at an end. This obviously means he intends to stick where he is. The Berlin Vorwaets, in an article that looks as if it had been inspired, declares the Germans intend to fight on the defensive. Is this sand, purposely thrown in the allies eyes, or is the statement sincere? Heretofore the Germans have ended each fighting season with some dazzling coup intended to give the German people courage to face the privations of winter.

Gloomy Prospect.

Hindenburg affirms the country is very gloomy, Hertling admits the Kaiser's dynasty is endangered. In view of this situation it would not be surprising if the Germans attempted some sort of a forlorn hope, either a bayonet offensive or a peace offensive soon, especially as they know that next spring the Allies will smother them with men, airplanes, tanks, guns, shells, gas and materials when it is too late for them to do anything.

Local fighting keeps up in the British and French sectors, but this is interesting only as hammerings behind the curtain betoken preparations for the last act.

WAR SUMMARY

NEW YORK, Sept. 10.—The Associated Press to-day issues the following summary.

Increased resistance by the Germans and weather conditions unfavourable to the swift movement of troops have a tendency to slow down the Allies' offensive along that stretch of battle line from St. Quentin to Cambrai. Here the British in fighting of local character have carried their lines to Havrincourt Wood and Peiziere. To the south Field Marshal Haig's men have taken Vermond and Vendelle, the former about five miles from St. Quentin. On the British right the French have advanced to within four miles of St. Quentin. At Liez they crossed the Crozat Canal and their patrols are nearing LaFere, which is reported to be burning. With the fall of LaFere only a question of time, the French also command all of the region west of the Oise River and are tightening their line around St. Quentin and in the valley to the east through which they must pass to take Laon. The capture of LaFere will be a menace to the strong German defences in the St. Gobain Massig. The burning of LaFere furnished evidence of the weakness of the German line and of their ultimate inability to stop the turning movement against the St. Gobain sector.

THE WEATHER

Clear, cool weather with a particularly high barometer prevails at the present time. The weather that is passing over to-day has been hovering over the North West for several days, and temperatures of from 5 to 10 degrees below the freezing point have generally prevailed in that section. The weather is fine at the present time all over the continent. Lowest here last night 43 degrees. Probably fine and warmer.—W. P.

Germans Refuse to Counter Attack at Some Points—Huts Still Intact.

ADVANCE CONTINUES

(By Lowell Mellett — United Press).

WITH THE BRITISH ARMIES IN FRANCE, Sept. 10. — (Noon). — British troops, like the French, are edging closer to St. Quentin. An outpost was reported established this morning near Fresnoy Le Petit, three miles from the Hindenburg line. (Fresnoy Le Petit is slightly more than three miles north-west of St. Quentin).

One of the officers of the 201st Division, facing the British, made a written report, in which he said: "A counter-attack is quite out of the question. The men simply won't do it."

British patrols met a private of the 201st Division yesterday pushing a wheelbarrow toward the British lines. In the wheelbarrow was a wounded German. The private dropped the handles and threw up his hands, surrendering in behalf of himself and his comrade.

While the advance has taken the British into country where the towns and villages are all levelled, they are finding many huts they built a year ago, still intact and habitable.

Nine German Spies Arrested

Five of Them Were Sent to France.

Special to the Examiner:

ZURICH, Sept. 10.—During August the Swiss authorities arrested nine German spies, it developed here to-day. The work of these spies included finding the location of the American troops in France. Among those taken was Dreisher, the leader, a German Consulate official here. Five spies were sent to France, and are awaiting trial there.

Three Thousand Dollars Worth of Peanut Brittle Dumped Into the Sea.

Special to the Examiner:

LONDON, Sept. 10.—According to reports here to-day, ground glass was found mixed with $3,000 worth of peanut brittle aboard a transport from America. The candy was dumped into the sea. A most rigid inspection was ordered for all candies and other supplies destined for soldiers.

Will Succeed Miss Killmaster

Miss Jeanette Killmaster, who for the last eight years has been associated with the Peterboro Conservatory of Music has accepted a position as head of the Piano department at the Institute for the Blind, Brantford. Miss Killmaster will be succeeded by Mr. Earl Newton of the Toronto Conservatory, who comes highly recommended by D. Vogt. Mr. Newton has had a very brilliant career having studied successfully with Dr. A. S. Vogt, T. C. M., Georgia Kober, W. H. Sheerwood the eminent American pianist and Alberto Jonas the Spanish virtuoso. Mr. Newton will begin his duties to-morrow.

FRANK JENNE Says:

There's a very important point about your boy's first long trousers. The boy who wears them is still a boy, so it doesn't do to tailor him a suit in senior styles. In Semi-ready suits for youths he gets manish lines without losing his youthful appearance. All suits well tailored from the best, tweeds, serges and worsteds. For your boy's first "long" suit "Come to me."

To pad the edges of doilies before embroidering them, work them in a coarse chainstitch.

GAIN FOR ALLIES REPORTED IN SIBERIA.

(Special to Examiner.)

Vladivostok, Sept. 10. — Direct communication with Oloviannaya has been established by the Czecho Slovak troops in Siberia, according to advices from headquarters at Harbin. The Bolsheviki at Troinekozavisk surrendered.

Have Made a Wide Breach

"We Have Passed Through Many Dark Days," Says Field Marshal Haig.

London, Sept. 10.—"Already we have passed beyond our old battle lines of 1917, and we have made a wide breach in the strongest defences," Field Marshal Haig declared to-day.

"All ranks have borne themselves in a worthy and honorable manner. The British armies captured 75,000 prisoners and 750 guns in four weeks. This speaks for the magnitude of our effort and our magnificent achievements."

"We have passed through many dark days. Please God these will never return. The enemy has now spent his effort."

THE GROCETERIA

The great scarcity and high cost of food stuffs is making many changes in the old methods of distributing groceries. The economic condition under which the country is laboring at the present time demand that the men and motor power be conserved as well as other resources. Again the Canada Food Board strongly urge that reckless expense which has been in fashion in connection with the delivery of goods can be, and must be done away with. These reasons added to the unfairness of the present grocery system with its unnecessary small deliveries and credits has caused E. F. Mason, who has always been Peterboro's most up-to-date grocer to inaugurate the Groceteria, the modern and progressive development of grocery business methods. Every consumer is becoming more patriotic day by day and is anxious and willing to assist "win the war" and is paying the cash and is carrying her purchases or having them taken home in the auto or in the children's wagon but the unfair part of it is they are paying for a service they are not getting. The Groceteria opens its door to the public at the old market arcade on Thursday Sept. 12th and customers will be agreeably surprised at the savings that can be effected shopping in this manner. In a months purchase it will mount up to a good round sum. We predict success for this new enterprise as it is stocked with high grade groceries.

Stinson Day at the Exhibition

A Big Feature for Opening Day of the Fair.

The directors of the Peterboro Industrial Exhibition have decided to feature Thursday as Stinson Day, as Miss Katherine Stinson, the world's premier aviatrix will make two flights Thursday, first at two thirty p.m., and the second at seven p.m., sharp.

This engagement will in all probability be the last appearance of this charming little lady in Canada this year, as she was called to New York from Ottawa last Thursday to make arrangements and sign contracts for flights in South America.

Miss Stinson spent a very pleasant week in Ottawa, visiting relatives of her pupils whom she taught to fly at her Aviation School in San Antonio, Texas, and who are now overseas with the R.A.F.

Miss Stinson has taught in all 60 Canadian boys who are now overseas, a few being Billy Lodge of Arnprior, Joe Gorman, Don Masson and Gordon Bysshe of Ottawa. Lodge is back home again while Joe Gorman was killed in Italy, and Gordon Bysshe is at present a prisoner in Turkey.

Miss Stinson has had the plane all overhauled, the wing recovered, and will be prepared to make the best flight since coming to Canada, and you can be assured of getting all the thrills in her repertoire.

Fortified Height on the American Lines Under Heavy Bombardment—Advance Difficult.

PRISONERS TAKEN

(United Press Service.)
(By Webb Miller.)

WITH THE AMERICAN ARMIES IN FRANCE, Sept. 10.—Americans have advanced in local attacks against the Le Yetitte Montagne tableland.

(Le Petite Montagne is a fortified height on the American lines where they drop down from the Aisne to the Vesle. It has seriously impeded our troops advance on their right flank.)

After a strong borbardment of the hill, with the heaviest fire concentrated on the Le Petite Plateau, the Americans launched their assaults Monday morning. The fighting was still continuing Monday night. Reports from the battlefield said the Yankees' assault was directed toward the tableland.

Filtered In.

Our infantry went forward in small groups, filtering in between the enemy machine gun nests which were thickly scattered through the wooded ravines. The Americans picked off German snipers and gun crews one by one. When the last word was received the Americans were approaching the foot of the plateau and working in around the sides of the tableland. The advance was most difficult owing to the large number of machine gun nests and isolated snipers who fired upon our men. Despite this resistance, good progress had been reported by evening. A number of machine gun squads were wiped out when the Germans fought back with determination from hidden emplacements.

Strong Defense.

The crest of Le Petite Montagne is infested with machine guns behind a strong wire system which American heavy guns have been methodically pounding. Some prisoners and machine guns were taken during Monday and sent to the rear.

On Sunday night, during pitch darkness American troops sifted between the outlying nests, killed or drove off the crews and then returned to their own lines.

Simultaneously, the French on the right advanced in co-operation with us.

Determination of the enemy to hold their positions on top of the plateau, and the strength of these positions, is shown by the fact that the Germans have eighteen heavy machine guns and over a score of light ones on the tableland alone.

As machine guns on fringes of the heights are gradually cleaned out, the Americans are working up the lower slopes of the system of strongly defended plateaus.

WHY BLAME THE FOOD FOR THE BAD?

Just now, when so many makers of cloths are cheapening their products, a man needs to be especially careful where he buys his clothes. Because cheap serges and shoddy worsteds and tweeds will not make good suits, has nothing to do with the pure, all wool fabrics you pick from the Scotland Woolen Mills Company. There is no mistaking the high quality of our woolens, and this Fair Week should keep us busy measuring and booking orders for Suits and Overcoats.

Heintzman & Co. Piano For the Opera House style upright piano, has been installed in the Grand Opera House, by Messrs. J. J. Turner & Sons. This handsome instrument is seven and one-third octave, with double veneered mahogany case, and patent Agraffe bridge. It poseesses strong volume and power, with a rich tone, especially adapted for concert halls. It is with a piano that the ear can be trained to the best appreciation of good music. It was selected for Heintzman Hall warerooms, Peterborough, B. H. Britton, manager, purely on its merits, and the public will not fail to appreciate this enterprise on the part of the management of the Opera House.

KILLED EIGHT-YEAR-OLD CHILD

DETROIT, Sept. 9.—Heart-broken and in despair because a Detroit manufacturer whom she expected to wed, had married another woman during her absence from the city, Mrs. Claire Madeline Neinstedt, 32 years old, a beautiful Brooklyn, N.Y., divorcee, shot and killed her eight-year-old daughter, Wilma, in their room at the Hotel Pontchartrain here yesterday, and then fell unconscious to the floor, where she was found some time later.

SWORN TO AND GUARANTEED

"Peterborough Presents Possibilities Unsurpassed."

SEPTEMBER 10, 1918.

UNNECESSARY MOTORING.

There will be no pleasure driving of automobiles, motor cycles and motor boats in Peterborough next Sunday if the owners of these vehicles are patriotic enough to heed the appeal of the Canadian Fuel Controller. There is urgent necessity for conserving gasoline, and no more helpful or simple way could be adopted than by the eliminating of unnecessary motoring on Sundays. Those who are engaged in the oil industry are exerting every effort to meet the abnormal demands for gasoline and other oil products created by war requirements. To supplement these efforts a limited conservation of gasoline is advisable, and the Fuel Controller is appealing to motorists to do their bit by avoiding all unnecessary driving.

The Examiner is confident that the appeal will not fall on deaf ears as far as Peterborough is concerned. No local citizen would want to take his car, motor boat or motor cycle out next Sunday, in the full knowledge that in so doing he is wasting gas that is vitally needed for war purposes. Peterborough motorists will cheerfully accept the situation, realizing that the country's needs come first.

In addition to the actual saving of gasoline through a general compliance with the Fuel Controller's appeal which is estimated at 600,000 gallons each Sunday, there will be an appreciable saving in money and motor wear by the reduction of Sunday motoring to only the absolute necessary driving. $150,000 is the estimate of the actual saving in money through the doing away of "joy-riding."

Let Sunday, September 15th, be remembered in Peterborough, therefore as the day which marked the end of Sunday pleasure motoring in this district.

MORE NEWS OF THE WAR.

The announcement by Hon. N. W. Rowell, that the Canadian people are to be more fully informed on war matters, is a welcome one if it means that the people at home are to be allowed to know a little more about the adventures of the Canadians in France. The Canadian Press correspondent, Mr. J. F. B. Livesay, has been giving in his daily cables from France some most fascinating stories of Canadian prowess and bravery, but much of the value of these splendidly written articles is lost because the rigorous censorship necessitated that the identity of the heroes of the feats described should be anonymous. For instance, yesterday we were told of the gallantry of "the colonel of a Canadian Scottish battalion who with his unit was in a very tight place last Monday on the right of our line, owing to the flank being in the air for want of support, personally led it to the assault, leading his front rank by a hundred yards in his charge against the enemy machine gun position, and thus snatching victory from what seemed disastrous defeat."

Why should not the people of Canada know the name of this very gallant colonel? If he had been an American officer the story of his exploit would have been told in every city in the United States, because the names of American officers and men who have particularly distinguished themselves are allowed to be mentioned.

Here in Canada the people are totally ignorant of the part played by the different units in the Canadians' wonderful feat in breaking the Drocourt-Queant line. We are allowed to know only that the line was broken by the Canadians, and we know that many a gallant lad died in helping to win the victory, but beyond that we know nothing. Once in a while there is a reference to a Manitoba battalion or an Ontario unit, but that is all.

If Mr. Rowell's announcement means the lifting of the censorship to some extent, as far as is considered compatible with safety, it is indeed good news for all Canadians.

FASHION AND THRIFT.

The Examiner has been accused of being unchivalrous, because it reproduced an article from the Toronto Saturday Night dealing with extravagance, particularly in the case of women's dresses. A fair reader has made the accusation that it was unfair to single out for condemnation, under the head of extravagance, Peterboro girls who are at work in local factories and business places. There was no intention on The Examiner's part to leave the impression that some of these girls are the only citizens who spend their money extravagantly. Such is far from the case. The Toronto Saturday Night article was printed because it contained one example of the lack of thrift that is only too evident in every branch of life in Canada. Girls are by no means the only offenders; there is extravagance and reckless expenditure everywhere.

High wages are one cause—probably the biggest. But it must be admitted at the risk of another charge of lack of chivalry, that the ambition to follow the dictates of fashion is an important factor. When leather, through war conditions, became scarce, did the designers of ladies' boots place on the market low shoes in order to conserve leather for war purposes? Far from it. Instead ladies' boots were immediately made nearly knee-high. About the time that a wool shortage was imminent, somebody started the fashion of home-knit sweaters and immediately the needles that had been plying industriously in making socks for the soldiers, and many other needles as well, began to "click, click" in the manufacture of sweaters. And soon these vari-coloured garments were seen in hundreds on the street.

Fashion's laws do not tend to economy and if there is to be a saving for a rainy day there will have to be more attention paid to the prospects for the future and less to what the styles call for.

A GOVERNMENT OF MURDER.

(New York Times).

Probably nothing calling itself a Government ever received such a diplomatic communication as that which the murderous Bolshevist Government has received from Great Britain. It is not the language of one Government addressing another, but the language of a police officer to a professional assassin. And it will strike a responsive chord wherever, throughout the world, men have grown tired of keeping up the fiction that this pirate crew are a Government.

The attack on the British Embassy was ordered by the terrorist clique that rules in Moscow and Petrograd, which has been preparing the Russian mind for it for some time. All their measures have been tending in that direction, and the latest despatches show that they have been deliberately creating the belief among their ignorant and brutalized henchmen that the French and British Governments incited the assassination of Mirbach and Eichhorn and the attempted assassination of Lenine. For instance, the Moscow correspondent of the Frankfurter Zeitung, who surely is on confidential terms with the Russian "Government," informs his paper of a contemplated note from that "Government" to the Entente countries "that any further attempts upon the lives of Russian Government officials will be countered by attempts upon Entente statesmen in their own countries."

That is the kind of stuff the Bolsheviki have been instilling into the minds of their Red Guards, men unspeakably ignorant and many of them criminals freed by jail deliveries. It was intended to ripen into crime. Their Janissaries believe, no doubt, that the British and French Governments have employed the Social Revolutionists to kill off their officials. Of course, if the Soviet "Government" has informed friendly German correspondents of its intention to make this preposterous charge against Entente countries, that information is not the first hint of the charge that has gone abroad in Russia; it is not the first step, but the last. Doubtless the Red Guards had already been assured that the next time the British and French Governments caused the Social Revolutionists to assassinate a Bolshevist official they should have their revenge.

Well, then, on Saturday last another member of the Bolshevist "Government" was shot. It was Moses Uritsky, who held the office of "People's Commissary of Home Affairs." The assassin was presumably a Social Revolutionist. On the same day the Red Guards took their revenge. They invaded and sacked the British Embassy and murdered Captain Cromie, mutilating his body. The next time, presumably, that a Social Revolutionist shoots a Bolshevist there will be a general massacre of Frenchmen and Englishmen.

The British Government is right in not addressing to the villains who inspired this crime any other language than that which it would address to a brigand or a pirate. It does not make any pretense of believing that the Bolshevist "Government" was ignorant or innocent of the murder. It assumes that the individual members of that "Government" were guilty, and it warns them that unless they make full reparation, or if another British subject is murdered, each individual of them will be held responsible. It tells them, what may have a more sobering effect than anything else, that it will "make every endeavour to secure that they shall be treated as outlaws by the Governments of all civilized nations and that no place of refuge shall be left to them." If this assumes that the Bolsheviki may soon or some time need a "place of refuge," it assumes no more than what must often have occurred to the most optimistic among them.

It is an unspeakable relief to see one Government dropping the shallow pretense that these men are the representatives of their people. If they were, no matter what crime they had committed, no such language would have been held toward them. The people of Russia elected a Constituent Assembly, two-thirds of which belonged to the Social Revolutionist party. The Bolshevist minority dispersed the representatives of the people, seized the reins of power by force, and have been ruling ever since by terror. The fiction that this murderous minority was in any sense a Government has been kept up too long; the world is tired of it. The world wants Russia freed from it, and the majority of the Russian people rid of their tyrants.

Uncle Sam's Job.

"It is a matter of common knowledge that the United States must provide the new armies that are necessary to win the war. We have no right to expect the British and the French, in view of all that they have gone through, to do more than repair their wastage and hold their forces up to the present military strength. STRIKE WILL NOT AFFECT MEN HERE

Dominion Express Company's Employees on Strike.

MONTREAL, Sept. 10.—One thousand employees of the Dominion Express Company of Canada went on strike this morning. They demand recognition of union. The company announced to-day it expected temporary dislocation of business, but anticipated filling places of the strikers.

Mr. Seels of the local Dominion Express Company's office says the strike does not affect the office here. The strike is confined to Quebec, where a new union has lately sprung up amongst the company's employees. In Ontario there already existed a union known as the Dominion Express Brotherhood, which is recognized by the company. Mr. Seels also stated that he is confident the strike will not extend any farther than it has already reached.

MONTREAL, P.Q., Sept. 10. — Striking employees of the Dominion Express Company say if they don't get a conciliation board in twenty-four hours they will bring Canadian Northern men out too.

AN ADDRESS

Rev. Mr. Craig, a former Peterboro boy, but now a missionary in Japan showed the rise of the land of the Rising Sun to be that of world power Everybody is being impressed with the fact that a new social order will come as a result of this war. Since Japan has awakened from her long sleep great revivals and changes have taken place, chiefly, political intellectual, economic, social and religious. In 1902 a treaty of equality was made between Great Britain and Japan. In 1904 occurred the Russo-Japanese war which awakened the eyes of the rest of Europe.

"I have been amazed since coming to Canada, to notice the distrust of Japan this is prevalent.'

STOP SUNDAY MOTORING.

WASHINGTON, Sept. 6. — The Fuel Administration has called upon the public in states east of the Mississippi River to cease the using of all classes of automobiles, with a few named exceptions, motor-cycles and motor-boats, on Sundays until further notice, as a gasoline conservation measure. Only voluntary compliance with the letter and spirit of the request will prevent the issuance of a mandatory order prohibiting the use of gasoline on Sundays, it was declared at the Fuel Administration. Automobiles for hire are included in the curtailment programme.

Motor vehicles to which the restrictions do not apply were announced as:

Tractors and motor trucks employed in actual transportation of freight.

Vehicles of physicians used in performance of professional duties.

Ambulances, fire apparatus, police patrol waggons, undertakers' waggons, and conveyances used for funerals.

Railway equipment using gasoline.

Repair outfits employed by telephone and public service companies.

Motor vehicles on errands of necessity in rural communities where transportation by steam of electricity is not available.

The action was taken by the Fuel Administration, it was stated, to meet a threatened shortage of gasoline for shipment overseas, created by the increased domestic demands and extensive military operations in France.

Has Returned From Montreal

Mr. F. D. Kerr Attended Meetings of Dominion Bar Association.

Mr. F. D. Kerr, President of the Peterborough Bar Association, returned this morning from Montreal, where he has been in attendance at the meetings of the Dominion Bar Association.

Mr. Kerr reports that the meetings were of the most interesting description, the papers and addresses being on matters of great importance dealing with company law, divorce, succession duties, the uniformity of the laws of the different provinces, and legal education.

A Feature.

A most interesting feature was the presence of distinguished representative lawyers from Japan, France and the United States, namely the Hon. Tsunejiro Miyaoka, of the Bar of Japan; Monsieur Frederic Allain, of Paris, France, and the Hon. Hampton L. Carson, of Philadelphia, U.S., their addresses being most striking, although possibly the honours of the gathering went to the Japanese representative, who spoke eloquently and in most perfect English.

A unique feature in connection with the closing banquet was the toast to the King, the President of the United States, the President of France and the Emperor of Japan, and the reading of greetings to the Association from General Foch, General Haig and General Currie.

Mr. Kerr speaks in most appreciative terms of the unbounded courtesy and good-fellowship of the members of the Montreal Bar.

To preserve rubbers for fruit jars cover them with dry flour. They will be as pliable as when new.

Mrs. Vernon Castle At the Empire To-night

Everybody Has Heard of Her, Now You Should See Her in "The Hillcrest Mystery."

Irene Castle, strange as it may seem, didn't learn dancing from a teacher—she just danced. From the time when she was a tiny tot she couldn't hear music without wanting to dance it, so as her father, Dr. Hubert Foote, of New Rochelle, N.Y., believed that all boys and girls should be taught to earn their own living, she went him a bit further and earned hers. And so as Mrs. Vernon Castle she became the idol of two continents, set dancing styles until she voluntarily abandoned the art, became the arbiter of women's fashions and known as "the best dressed woman in America," and then went into motion pictures, where she has met with equal success. A remarkable record, truly, and one that shows a striking personality and talent!

Mrs. Castle's latest picture is the Pathe Play, "The Hillcrest Mystery," which is at the Empire Theatre tonight. When you see her in it you will understand something about how she won such phenomenal success in such a few years.

PATRIOTIC MENUS FOR THRESHERS.

Forman, N. Dakota, Sept. 9. — Sargent county threshers are eating the patriotic menus of trained chefs. The idea was conceived by County Agent Greenwood, who made the proposition to the owners of the threshing machines at a county meeting. The suggestion was popular, and Miss Florence Pool of the North Dakota Agricultural College Extension Department conducted a two days' school for the young women who were to preside at the cook cars.

MRS. CLARK NOW EATS ANYTHING

Relishes Food She Didn't Dare Touch Before Taking Tanlac.

"I had taken so many kinds of medicines without result that I was almost in despair, but so many of my acquaintances were taking Tanlac that I tried it, too, and now I am praising it like the rest," said Mrs. Mary Clark, of 9 Hagerman Street, an old-time resident who has lived in Toronto for thirty years, the other day.

"It has been all of seven years," she continued, "since my stomach got out of order and indigestion began to worry me. I lost my appetitite and soon got so I couldn't eat a thing without having trouble. Cabbage and all kinds of vegetables acted like poison and I didn't dare eat anything of the kind. What little I forced down formed a hard lump right in the pit of my stomach, and soon gas would rise, and if I didn't start vomiting at once, sour bitter water would just boil up in my mouth and I would spit out bits of undigested food. The gas would press so on my heart that I felt like I would smother and I simply cannot describe the agony I suffered. My head ached awfully, griping pains would seize me. I would become so nauseated that I couldn't retain a thing on my stomach, and at times I'd get so weak that I felt like I was going to faint. Everything tore me up so terribly that I actually dreaded for meal-time to come, and the lack of nourishment was making me weaker every day.

"Before I had finished my first bottle of Tanlac I felt so much better that I kept it up till I had taken six bottles in all, and I am now feeling just fine. My appetite is splendid and I can eat anything I want without having any trouble afterwards. All kinds of vegetables agree with me perfectly and I can eat pie, too, something I didn't dare touch before taking Tanlac. My head has stopped aching, I never have sour stomach or gas troubles and that dull, heavy feeling is gone. Tanlac has given me such wonderful relief that I want everybody to know it, and I have already recommended it to many of my friends."

Tanlac is sold in Peterborough by W. B. Warne Drug Co., Ltd.; in Havelock by A. C. Denike; in Lakefield by Tanner Drug Co., Ltd.; in Fowler's Corners by W. A. Hunter; in Gelert by A. J. Scott; in Westwood by G. Pringle & Son.

Corn Planting Drive To-day

Farmers Urged to Conserve Seed Corn for Spring Planting.

ST. PAUL, Minn., Sept. 10.—Minnesota started a corn-planting drive to-day.

Every farmer in the State will be visited during the succeeding ten days and will be urged to put away a bushel of seed corn for every acre he expects to plant next spring and the following spring.

"A million bushels of seed corn this fall" is the cry of the county agricultural agents working in co-operation with the University of Minnesota agricultural extension service. Each division agent has appointed committees to go over adjacent territory and help carry the word to the farmer.

Minnesota grows 8,000,000 acres of corn, it is estimated, and it takes 500,000 bushels to seed 3,000,000 acres. Therefore farmers are urged to put away enough for two spring seedings that there may be no shortage again such as almost threatened a dire shortage this spring.

The farmer will not be asked to give up his seed to any committee, person or persons. He will merely be urged to store it away safely, where he can find it intact when seeding time comes next spring.

And the farmer who is around asking his neighbour for seed corn next spring will probably get a glassy stare and nothing else.

GAS FOUND IN STIRLING.

BELLEVILLE, Sept. 9.—An important discovery of natural gas has been made in Stirling village, when a well was being drilled. The drill was at a depth of 80 feet when the smell of gas was distinguished. The workmen could not continue their work. A match was applied and the flame shot up fifteen feet. The rock formation at Stirling is Trent limestone. Steps will be taken to cap the well.

HOW TO PRONOUNCE NAMES OF BATTLEFRONT PLACES

(Boston Transcript.)

Most of the places which have been named in recent cable despatches from the western front belong to Artois, Picardy and the Ile de France, and so possess local characteristics not common in the rest of France. Many are famous in English history and for centuries have been pronounced in the English way. In certain cases the ancient spelling has been retained, while the pronounciation has changed. Sometimes where the "s" has become silent before "n" or "t," it is still retained; where it has been dropped, the preceding vowel usually carries a circumflex accent.

French is an unaccentuated language, but the rising inflection given to the last syllable of words often gives the foreign ear the illusion of accent or stress. Again, phonetic analysis of a French word often shows syllables where the foreigner's ear detects none. In the list below it has seemed necessary to indicate all syllables:

How to Banish Wrinkles Quickly

If your face is disfigured with wrinkles, no matter what the cause, you can quickly dispel every line, even the most obstinate, by using a simple, home made wash lotion. Merely dissolve an ounce of powdered saxolite in a half pint witch hazel—inexpensive ingredients found in any drug store. Bathe the face in this, and—presto!—you scarcely believe your own eyes when you look into the mirror and behold the marvellous transformation!

The remarkable astringent action of the saxolite so tightens the skin, the wrinkles are literally pressed out. Best of all this result is not purely temporary, for the lotion also has a healthful, tonic action, which tends to strengthen and tone up the weakened tissue and added benefit may be expected with continued use. Use this once a day for a while; it cannot injure the most delicate skin. The treatment itself leaves no trace—no one guesses the secret of your increasing youthful appearance.

EXPECTED TOO MUCH.

WANT THE LID ON WINES.

Alliance Executive Think Native Beverage Too Strong for Sale in Open Way.

The Executive Committee of the Ontario branch of the Dominion Alliance has decided to ask the Ontario Government to prohibit the sale of native wines except for purposes permitted under the Ontario Temperance Act. The committee believes that their strength, 30 per cent., is excessive for other uses.

The committee also found the law governing patent medicines lax. There is, for instance, nothing to require a manufacturer to disclose that there is any alcohol in his preparation and nothing to prevent him from altering the amount of alcohol contained therein.

The committee reviewed the work of the year and heard reports on the Alliance standing.

GERMAN "DETERIORATION"

The German offensive of March 21st was received by the German military critics in a very curious way. They wrote long articles to prove that it had been absolutely necessary to attack. Some of these articles, appearing, be it remembered, side by side with German communiques announcing great victories, were almost apologetic.

They were not the work of one or eccentrics. It was clear, indeed, that they were written to the instruction of the German Government, for different papers used the same arguments and sometimes almost the same words.

These articles were a very interesting sign of the condition of the German people. And this sign was confirmed by later articles complaining of the nervousness and alarm of Berlin, where more attention was paid to unofficial stories of enormous German losses than to the official stories of a great German advance. The people appeared to feel that even victory was not worth the price.

The most curious feature of these curious articles was that they attempted to throw the responsibility for the offensive on the German troops. The military critic of the Berlin "Lokalanzeiger," for example, wrote: "Moreover the splendid aggressive spirit of our incomparable troops positively pressed us to the attack." While General Von Ardenne wrote in the "Berliner Tageblatt" in very much the same words, "Moreover we were urged to this by the impatience of our own army, which rightly felt that we can see the road to peace only in a decision by arms."

It is a strange picture this, of a reluctant Great General Staff compelled to attack because the war-like ardour of the troops could not be restrained. One might well doubt at the time if it were true. We know now something of how untrue it was.

About the same time that the war-weary people of Berlin were reading of the "aggressive spirit of their incomparable troops," these same troops were causing their leaders great anxiety by their "slow but steady deterioration." They were falling into the same condition as the people. They were tired of war.

A little more than a month after those articles appeared General Von Quast, commanding the Sixth Army, issued the following order:

"The slow but steady deterioration of discipline is undoubtedly due to the long duration of the war. This lack of discipline shows itself primarily in the large number of sentences passed in which courts-martial too often show signs of clemency and subsequently, more plainly in the unsoldierly bearing adopted by the men towards their superiors."

The order went on to complain that the "great majority of the men" were becoming slovenly, that they were forgetting to show marks of respect to their officers, that they no longer troubled to salute. More significant still, it complained that the German officer, the most exacting of all officers, in his demand on his men, contributed to this by his own indifference to their want of discipline.

The order was published in May. A month later the General Officer commanding the Second Army, Gen. Von Der Marwitz, was complaining of exactly the same things:

"Discipline, which is the key-stone of our army, is seriously shaken. I cannot permit commanders to take upon themselves to shield by excess of indulgence officers, N.C.O.'s, or men guilty of breaches of discipline."

The next week he issued another order:

"Cases of soldiers refusing to obey orders are increasing to an alarming extent."

Such was the true condition of the "incomparable army," whose ardent and aggressive spirit could not be restrained. It was disobeying orders "to an alarming extent." It was "slowly but surely deteriorating" as a result of "the long duration of the war."

WHAT O'GRADY SAYS

By CAPT. B. F. W. REES

Should you ever meet one of those pessimists who tell you that life at the front is one long hell, don't believe him; make the expression of your disbelief unequivocal; for he is a liar.

Nobody, on the other hand, is going to pretend that existence in front of Brigade Headquarters is a bed of roses; but between that and uninterrupted Hades there is a huge difference. There are lights and shades, as in all other existences. When that pessimist begins to bore you, just ask him if he knows O'Grady.

O'Grady, one might put it, is the spirit of relaxation in the British Army in the forward areas. He reigns elsewhere—on every parade ground where soldiers are drilled — but in those forward areas he is such a cheery and welcome fellow that one associates him more with them than with the places behind.

O'Grady in short, is a game—one of those games that the Army Gymnastic Staff has introduced into physical drill with such wonderful success. Gone for ever are the days when "jerks" was a succession of staccato movements of divers limbs, varied by occasional doubling, and sometimes — when the mothers and sisters came to the Drill Hall—done to the tinkling of the regimental piano.

Nowadays, the soldier is interested. He does, say, during an hour of physical drill, six set exercises of about two minutes each, and the rest of the time is taken up with "quickeners" and games. And King of all the games is O'Grady.

A trained instructor will rattle off to you, at about three hundred words a minute, a description of O'Grady which will tell you that it develops the mind and the muscles, teaches control of the body, practises the man in responding automatically to the word of command, and does great physical good while interesting and entertaining the subject. An ordinary soldier will tell you that it is jolly good fun.

The way of it is this. You tell your squad that "O'Grady is on"; and after that no order must be obeyed which is not prefaced by the words "O'Grady says." The man who makes a fault has to double sharply to a fixed point and back again. Having explained this, the instructor barks "'Shun!" at his squad, and half of them spring up to attention - and pay the penalty; for O'Grady has not said it.

There are many variations. It develops into a competition between instructor and class. Men become amusingly proud when they have escaped throughout nearly the whole of the exercise, and when the instructor says "Hands up those who haven't been caught yet" up go their hands in conscious superiority—and off they have to double; for O'Grady did not say it.

Sometimes an officer takes the class, and the instructor falls in with the others—all of whom are watching to see if he will fall into his own traps. But he is a wily old bird, and is not going to be caught. Then the officer seems to tire of the game, and tells the instructor to carry on. Caught! O'Grady did not say it. The class is in the seventh heaven of delight, for the biter has been bit.

When you see men doing O'Grady in some sunken road just behind the line, with shells every now and then whining overhead, and occasional bursts of smoke not far away; when you see those fellows laughing and enjoying the whole thing like a party of children spending a day in the country, then you realize the glorious spirit that is behind the British Army, the wonderful recuperative powers of mind and body that enable the men thus light-heartedly to enjoy a school-boy's game some few hours after the end of a heavy tour in a "sticky" part of the line. You need nobody to tell you that they are reaping enormous benefit from it.

Presently they will be doing squad-drill with arms, and bayonet fighting, and other things in the doing of which soldiers do not laugh, but jump smartly to the word of command. But for the moment O'Grady is boss of the show,—dear, jolly, rollicking, irresponsible O'Grady.

Just tell your pessimist about O'Grady!

Lawyers Want the Law Changed

Easiest Thing in the World to Change Name in Ontario.

There is nothing in the law of Canada to prevent a man from changing his name providing he declares it is not being done for the purpose of committing fraud.

In England, however, a regulation under the Defence of the Realm Act, makes it an offence for any person who is not a British subject to assume or use, "any name other than that by which the was ordinarily known at the date of the commencement of the war."

Toronto lawyers, though they make fees out of the prevailing practice here, are generally in favour of having the law changed.

"Herman Schmidt can file a deed poll for four or five dollars and call himself Samuel Green, and put everybody off their guard," complained one lawyer. "I think there should be a change in the law. A man is not permitted to change his nationality during war time; the same should apply to a man changing his name. It's just as dangerous."

The fee for filing a deed poll, exclusive of the solicitor's fee, is about 70 cents. Before long this fee will be raised to about $5. One of the objects of the higher fee being to discourage the filing of deed polls.

Artists Were Well Received

Miss Ida Gardner and Mr. Harold Lyman Prove Success of Voice Re-Creation.

Probably a number of people who attended the recital given last night by Miss Ida Gardner and Mr. Harold Lyman at the Conservatory of Music Hall were at first puzzled and disappointed when they discovered a phonograph cabinet occupying the centre of the stage. They felt that they had been beguiled into going to hear a charming singer and a clever flutist, and naturally thought that they had been imposed upon.

They hardly were reassured when Mr. Lyman appeared on the stage and commenced to talk about "reproduction, "re-creation," and other like matter. It finally became apparent that the phonograph was at least to receive assistance from the singer, but even then the mental outlook was not exactly bright.

Mr. Lyman explained that the purpose of the recital was to illustrate that Thos. A. Edison, after years of work, had achieved his ideal to perfect a musical instrument which would actually re-create music so perfectly that the re-creation would be indistinguishable from the original.

A Broad Claim.

This was a broad claim, but it was established before the evening was over, for Miss Gardner actually stood beside the new Edison phonograph and sang in unison with Mr. Edison's re-creation—so called—of her own voice. This would have proved little as her voice might easily have overbalanced the tone of the instrument—swallowed it up—so to speak; but Miss Gardner did more — or, to be accurate, less. She paused from time to time, apparently at random, and permitted her re-created voice to be heard alone. This gave an opportunity to compare one with the other, and it is no more than just to state that there was no discernable difference in tone quality.

There must have been a slight difference in volume when Miss Gardner stopped singing, but it was not noticeable, for the voice which came from the cabinet was round and lucious with all of the vibrant, pulsating quality of that which came directly from Miss Gardner's throat. It was only by watching the singer's lips that one could be sure when she sang and when she did not.

Mr. Lyman offered similar comparisons with his instrument playing in direct comparison with the re-creation of his own performance. This proof was very convincing. If it were not another proof was offered. After Miss Gardner had commenced to sing one number the lights were turned out—ostensibly so that the audience could not watch the singer's lips.

It did not seem difficult to determine in the dark when the singer sang and when she did not. The writer was pretty sure about it himself until the lights were turned on again, and it was discovered that Miss Gardner was not on the stage at all, and that the new Edison alone had been heard.

The programme also included re-creations of a piano solo, a delightful number by a concert orchestra and a corking patriotic song by a baritone. Thus all types of musical sound were heard.

Music such as Mr. Edison has given to the world is especially gratifying and inspiring in these war times, and it is interesting to know that several thousand new Edisons, especially encased in durable field cabinets, have been furnished to the boys in camp and "over there" without profit to Mr Edison.

The recital was arranged by The J. M. Greene Music Company, Ltd., Charlotte Street.

The Warfare on Submarines

Expert Says U-Boats Cannot Be Completely Defeated.

LONDON, Sept. 10.—That the U-boats cannot be completely defeated and that the destruction of shipping must continue, unless the North Sea, including the territory waters of neutral nations, is entirely closed and controlled by the Allies, is the contention of Archibald Hurd, naval expert in the Telegraph. Mr. Hurd remarks that, notwithstanding that submarines are being held with greater success than ever before, three million tons of shipping are being sunk annually.

Industries Will be Protected

Preparations Under Way for the New Draft.

Special to the Examiner:

WASHINGTON, Sept. 10.—In the forthcoming draft every care is to be taken to protect essential industries, but at the same time exceptional alertness will be shown to prevent the abuse of "industrial exemption" claims.

Casualties Are Light in the Royal Air Force

Statistics Substantiate This Claim—A Comparison.

During the past few months a number of articles have appeared from time to time giving erroneous statistics regarding casualties in the Royal Air Force Training Squadrons. The public have, therefore, received an incorrect impression. The purpose of this letter, which is addressed to Mr. Vincent Eastwood of this city, chairman of the sub-committee of the R.A.F., regarding the above question, the writer says: I should be obliged if you would extend the same co-operation as you have in the past and see that information given below is placed in the hands of your local newspapers.

A Comparison.

For the purpose of preparing statistics, the total number of flights and casualties throughout the entire R.A.F. during a certain period was obtained. For the purpose of comparison, similar statistics were obtained from Training Squadrons operating in England, in the R.A.F., Canada, there were 36,253 flights, with 13,566 hours' flying, during which there were 59 crashes, 36 of which were admissions to hospital. The English statistics give 9,000 flights with 4,000 hours' flying during which there were 58 (practically the same number) of crashes, 16 of which were admissions to hospitals.

From the above figures you will see that for four times as many flights, with three times as many hours in the air, the number of Canadian casualties are practically the same as the number of English casualties.

You will note that the above flights in Canada cover approximately 813,960 miles, or 34 times around the Globe, thus, we have one fatality for 116,280 miles, or for 5 times around the Globe. The conclusions to be drawn from the above figures are so evident, that no further explanation is necessary.—Recruiting Officer Royal Air Force.

The Duke Visits United States

(Canadian Press Despatch.)

CHICAGO, Ill., Sept. 10. — The Duke of Devonshire, Governor-General of Canada, was the centre of interest at the Government War Exposition to-day (Canadian Day.) His visit bears the stamp of approval of the Governments of Great Britain and Canada for his official position is such that it was necessary to obtain the consent of both. Canada's determination to win the war is even stronger than it was four years ago, the Duke said. During the last two years I have not seen nor heard a pacifist. As far as I knew such a type does not exist in Canada.

FUNERAL OF LATE CLARENCE TOOLE.

The funeral of the late Clarence Toole was held on Saturday afternoon at two o'clock from the residence of Mr. Alex. Robertson, 406 Aylmer St., to Little Lake Cemetery. The funeral service was conducted by the Rev. Robert Pogue, of St. Paul's Church, of which Sunday School the deceased was a faithful member. The pall-bearers were six associates from the Central School. The floral tributes were many and beautiful.

THE WORLD OF SPORT

Joe McGinnity Still in the Game

ST. LOUIS, —How many active ball players would be left for use on the diamond if the new draft age provisions advocated by the war department are approved and put into effect, with the law reading that all men who have not reached their forty-sixth birthdays by a certain date (say September 5) shall register, be classified and either inducted into the Army or placed at some essential war work? "Mighty few.," would be the average fan's answer and he probably would add: "I guess Bobby Wallace and Nap Lajoie and a few more like them would be exempt."

Wrong. If the figures of a baseball record keeper are correct as to age of the athletes, these is absoluetly not one player out of the hundreds who have been seen in active service on the diamond this past season, in majors and minors, who would be above the draft age. A Detroit baseball writer, who is old enough himself to know better, says Norman Elberfeld would be the only "active" player exempt, but as a matter of fact the famous "Kid" was born in 1876, which makes him 42 years young.

Elberfeld Just Seems Old.

Elberfeld, from his length of service in baseball would seem to be on the shady side of 50 but the Kid started playing when he was about 17 years old—and he still was playing, now and then, when the Southern League season closed in June.

Had the writer who picked Elberfeld as the only active player above the new draft age cared to dig a little into the dope he could have discovered that the oldest active player, in point of years, as well of length of service, is right in the majors to-day. He is Bobby Wallace, who plays the infield—and does it well, now, and then, for the St. Louis Cardinals. Wallace was born in November of 1874, so that even he is of draft age under the new law that is expected to be in force before he reaches his forty-fourth birthday. As for length of service he was playing professional ball in 1893, when Elberfeld was still a semi-pro-on the lots of Cincinnati.

Honors to McGinnity.

Actually the oldest ball player who did any active service this season, so far as the records disclose, was Joe McGinnity, the veteran pitcher, who twirled a few games in the Pacific Coast International League. Joe was born in March of 1873, and is thus a year and a half older than Wallace but even he is in the new draft age. McGinnity started his professional career the same year that Wallace broke in.

Going to the other extreme, the youngest player in the major leagues—there may have been a few younger in the minors—is Clifton Heathcote, outfielder on the same Cardinal team with which Wallace plays. Heathcote has passed his nineteenth birthday, so he is of draft age under the new regulations.

Thus Uncle Sam gets them coming and going, and it's no use to figure on base ball for next year if the new draft law is passed, as it undoubtedly will be.

SPORTING COMMENT

Qualities attributed to the fifteen-year-old Vincent Richards in winning the tennis doubles championship with William Tilden 2d are speed, generalship, resourcefulness steadiness and coolness, an imposing list of tennis virtues, and enough to make him formidable in the singles this month if he is as proficient at going it alone as he is in company. Likely he is plucky—he didn't falter after Wright and Alexander had tied the score by winning the third and fourth sets. It is pleasing to note that as a potential champion he has something besides speed and stamina—skill, craft and courage being qualities of the head and heart with a more subtle appeal than the others with their more nearly physical nature. The real spirit of tennis or so it always has seemed to a layman who doesn't profess to know much about it, is head work, handicraft and well managed agility rather than a violently dashing game with none of the plotting and concealment of effort—easy effort, effort without appearing so, conservation, or whatever it is—which is the truest art.

On the one hand we have a league repudiating the national agreement, an instrument which so long as it was in operation should have been considered inviolate, and on the other a league servilely submiting to the affront and thus failing miserably to hold up the hands of its capable executive, John K. Tener. Which, as a sorry two-sided spectacle, will go far toward reconciling patrons to the major leagues dropping out for a spell.

Cobb, gas and flame Huston, engineers Maranville, navy; Kelly, aviation; Haugthon, chemical warfare; Jack Miller, marines; Gewdy, infantry; Pipp, naval aviation; Evers, athletic director—baseball will be represented in a variety of uses in the fighting forces.

The Great Lakes Naval Training Station gets another skilled athlete. Leroy B. Andrews, who for two years was named as tackle on All-Kansas football teams will report there next month.

Among the American soldiers reported killed in action in France was Lieutenant Laurens Corning Shull. As a football player at Chicago University Spike Shull was a tackle of note on three teams—Norgren's in 1913, Des Jardins's in 1914 and Russell's in 1915. Incidentally all three of these captains are in the service. Shull also was a baseball and basketball player. He enlisted shortly after the United States declared war, and his home was in Sioux City.

One of the best first basemen baseball has known was a transplanted one—Hugh Jennings, who went to first when his arm failed at short. He ranked with Tenney, Chase, Tucker and Donohue, the kingpins. Maybe Zim will attain those heights Graceful, quick, clever at footwork and fine on pick-ups, he ought to be an ideal man for the bag.

Finishing only second, third or fourth in the big leagues this year has its compensations. The players of those clubs share in the world's series money without taking a chance with the work or fight order.

Jack Britton's declared belief that Leonard will knock Lewis out in five rounds when the two come to grips is based on his own clashes with those fighters, but opinions of this sort have no especial worth in any kind of sporting contest. In football, baseball and other games the fact that a man has been aganist later principals has not kept him from guessing wrong as often as the non-combatant, who has only observation to guide him. Frank Moran, after being smothered by Fulton, was sure Fulton would whip Willard. Maybe he would have, but in the light of what happened when Fulton met Dempsey few hold that opinion, and maybe Moran himself no longer thinks so.

McGraw refused for a long time to abandon hope of overtaking the Cubs, but maybe he meant after the war.

5,000 CANADIANS AT QUANT BUXTON

ominion Authorities Utilizing Nearly All Hotels as Hospitals at Charing Cross.

BUXTON, England, Sept. 5.—For twelve months or more the principal streets of this charming town, in the heart of the Derbyshire hills, have been daily besprinkled liberally with men in the uniform of the Maple Leaf. Since the Canadian hospitals formerly on the raided east coast, moved here, the Canadian floating population has never been far short of five thousand. Canada has commandeered well-nigh every large hotel in the place. The Red Cross opened the invasion nearly two years back by securing the Peak Hotel as a special hospital for rheumatic cases. Later the Empire Hotel fell to the Adjutant General as a discharge depot. Then both the Hydro and the Palace Hotels were secured by the Medical Corps, to serve as fresh quarters for the Granville Special Hospital, previously at Ramsgate. There is also the beautiful convalescent hospital for Canadian nurses at Northwood, and a few miles off, at Matlock, is an equally attractive centre of recuperation for officers.

In the far-off days of peace Buxton's floating population consisted in great part of obese elderly folk who believed they would rid themselves of ailments, real or fancied, by "taking the waters." There was another section who came merely to have an enjoyable sojourn at one or other of the big holiday hotels. Another element, permanently residential, was composed of well-to-do manufacturing folk, who hied themselves here at night, out of the smoke of Sheffield or Manchester. A great change, truly, for staid Buxton to bid farewell to a large proportion of this good easy class of visitor, and to receive in its stead a crowd of men, many in ungainly hospital blue, and to have ambulances driving here and there in place of the former well-appointed hospital 'buses. The present writer had a chat with one well-known resident of Buxton, who spoke frankly on the subject of this Canadian invasion.

When the committee had interviewed the magnates and received the assurance of consideration of the grievance, the game went on.

A Change in the British Command is Hinted At General Wilson May Succeed Field Marshal Haig—Other Changes.

Special to the Examiner:

WASHINGTON, Sept. 10.—Just a brief line from Lord Northcliffe's paper, hinting at a shift in the British army command and perhaps in the American, has caused broad speculation here.

But as far as it was possible to ascertain to-day, there is no present prospect of removing General Pershing from the leadership of the A.E.F. Officials who should know said they doubted it would happen now, and affirmed that they had heard no discussion thereof.

There is a strong feeling that German propaganda may be behind recurrent rumours that Pershing is to be removed and relegated to some other position than his present one.

Nothing Official.

The War Department has semi-officially spiked the latter story with the statement that his stay will probably not be longer than his first journey. While no actual official statement was forthcoming as to Pershing, officials on the inside did their utmost to discourage the story.

Lord Northcliffe hinted that Haig would also get leave of absence, and might be replaced by General Wilson. At the same time, he intimated that there might be a change in the American command as there had been in the French and Italian.

CHILD KNOCKED DOWN BY A CAR

Cross Street Boy Had a Narrow Escape.

Clarence James, the seven-year-old son of Mr. and Mrs. Roy James, 407 Cross street, had a narrow escape from death yesterdaya evening at 5 o'clock.

The boy was crossing the road on Park street between Murray and Cedar street, and in keeping a c close watch upon two trucks which were standing in the road did not notice a third truck of the Singer Sewing Machine Company approaching, and was run down by it and dragged a considerable length. Dr. E. E. Harvey was called and found that while the child's body was very badly bruised, no bones were broken as was at first thought.

Hydro Will Etc.

since he was virtually the landlord of the Commission in the Trent waters. From that moment there has been action. Incidentally, it may be observed that the publicity given the situation by Mr. R. R. Hall's articles doubtless had some helpful effect. Dr. Reid called a conference of representatives of the Hydro-Electric Commission and a delegation from Peterborough, to be composed of Mayor Duncan, Mr. Burnham, Mr. Gillespie, and Warden Anderson. They were to have met him in Ottawa to-day, but yesterday's decision anticipated and obviated the necessity of the meeting with the Minister.

Appreciation Wired.

Following the statement from the Commission, a telegram was sent to Hon. Dr. Reid, expressing the city's satisfaction with the settlement, and also its appreciation of his intervention. To the Hydro-Electric Commission the Mayor also wired the city's gratitude for this opportune and splendid evidence of good faith.

The acquisition of 8,000 or 10,000 horse power in the Trent Hydro circuit will not only remove the danger of an actual shortage of power, but it will also establish a surplus for the needs of a period beyond the near future. The Ranney's Falls unit will have a power production equal to the Healey's Falls plant, and affords the desired assurance that this city's prosperity will not be held up by a shortage of power.

It is believed that the Campbellford power-house will be operative late in 1919.

Power Abundant Here.

The fact that the Commission decided to harness the potential power at the old pulp mills at Ranney's Falls incidentally suggests the abundance of electric power that is available in the Trent district. It has been recently shown that in the Otonabee's course through Peterborough, there is power going to waste, and likewise at Lakefield and Young's Point there are other powers not yet in use. For the present, however, the threatening cloud of shortage vanishes with the Commission's promise of an early undertaking to meet it.

Peterborough's industrial progress is assured, and it is particularly satisfactory that the Commission's decision contemplates so early a beginning.

An Ancient Ironclad.

As for the ironclad, its existence in Japanese waters in the seventeeth century is vouched for by Capt. John Saris, who says, in his "Journal of the Voyage to Japan in 1613":

About eight or tenne leagues on this side the straights of Semina-Segue (Shimonoseki), we found a great towne, where they lay in a docke or juncke of eight hundred or a thousand tunnes of burthen, sheathed all with yron, with a guard appointed to keep her from firing or treachery. She was built in a very homely fashion, much like that which describes Noah's ark unto us. The naturals told us, that she served to transport souldiers into any of the islands, if rebellion or warre should happen.

There is surely nothing new under the sun. The old civilization of China and Egypt, not to speak of Crete, have taught the world that lesson long ago.

Germany's Food Shortage.

Food shortage as well as disease, the latter probably an effect of the former, is adding to the worries of the Kaiser and his chiefs. In the south and west of Germany favorable conditions prevail due chiefly to rains and intensive cultivation. In middle Germany, however, and especially in Mechlenburg and Pomerania, the dry weather has curtailed or destroyed the vegetable crops, and importations of foodstuffs from other parts of the empire already have been found necessary. To complicate the situation in the drought ridden areas, plagues of insects have attacked the potato crop and all but destroyed it. The cabbage crop has suffered heavily in this respect, too.

A Five-Acre Plowing Contest for Peterboro County Farmers

Usual Plowing Match Will Not be Held This Fall—Two Classes This Year.

The great interest taken in the plowing contests conducted on the home farms of the competitors last year by the Peterborough County Plowmen's Association had lead the directors to decide to hold another similar competition this fall and to extend it by having two classes instead of one. The idea of this competition is considered such a good one by the Dominion Department of Agriculture that it has published a special notice about it in the Agricultural Gazette and also suggested that other organizations throughout Canada might hold similar competitions.

In this year's contest there will be one class for men and one class for boys eighteen years of age and under. In both classes the competitors will be expected to plow five acres or over in stubble. They are at liberty to use any kind of plow. The entry fee is $1.00, and may be paid to Mr. H. B. Cowan, of Farm and Dairy, or sent direct to the Secretary, Mr. C. S. Brown, R.R. No. 9, Peterborough. There will be five prizes in each class, 1st, $15.00; 2nd, $12.00; 3rd, $10.00; 4th, $8.00, and 5th, $5.00.

The Entries.

Entries must be made by October 1, and the plowing must be completed by October 20. The judges will be Mr. Chas. E. Would, of Asphodel, who, for four years, has been the champion plowman of the county, and Mr. John Gillespie, of Otonabee. The judges will visit each competitor's place as soon after October 20 as possible and will score the work of each plowman. Mr. McRae, B.S.A., of Norwood, the District Representative, will co-operate with the judges.

Owing to the scarcity of labour it has been decided not to hold the usual county plowing match this fall, but to confine the competition to the work done on home farms by the farmers who decide to enter this contest. One advantage of this competition is that competitors in all parts of the county are able to take part and greater interest is thereby aroused in it.

WAYS OF DUSKY ROYALTY.

The Scene When Abyssinia's Emperor Feasts His Army.

The emperors of Abyssinia are in the habit of inviting the 40,000 soldiers of the Gibebi garrison to a great dinner every Sunday. At the foot of the emperor's place is the imperial box. Its tables are resplendent with European silver and glass, surrounded by unimpeachable waiters, who serve the high dignitaries and distinguished visitors with a repast of immense variety with French sauces, Italian macaroni and so on. In the vast hall one can see nothing but a compact homogeneous crowd of black faces and woolly heads, among which the high officials are in no way distinguished.

Above all is the red throne on which sat his majesty, the Negus Negheste, under a great canopy supported by four gilded columns, with two tall candelabra lighted in front and on either side a row of Ras, Degglah, Ligg and Ato. He ate with the fork provided by nature—viz. his five fingers—the engiera and the berbert produced in his dominions.

When he took in his hand the horn goblet full of the twenty-year-old tetch, the Ras, the Degglah, the Ligg and the Ato closed round him and covered him with their sciamma and their mantles so that the profane eyes of the European guest might not see the "lion of the tribe of Judah" drink. They also crowded round him and covered him when, tired of any dish, he washed his hands and turned to another.—Washington Post.

Tan, Red or Freckled Skin Is Easily Shed

To free your summer-soiled skin of its muddiness, freckles, blotches or tan, the best thing to do is to free yourself of the skin itself. This is easily accomplished by the use of ordinary mercolized wax, which of course can be had at any drug store. Use at night as you use cold cream, washing it off in the morning. Immediately the offending surface skin begins to come off in fine powder-like particles. Gradually the entire outer scarf skin is absorbed without the least harm or inconvenience. The second layer of skin now in evidence presents a spotless whiteness, and sparkling beauty, obtainable in no other way. One ounce of mercolized wax usually is sufficient to completely renovate a bad complexion.

Napoleon Outdone.

In a small town there was a veteran who was called Colonel Bingle. He was stored full of anecdotes about his life as a soldier, which had won him the unbounded admiration of a certain little boy in the town who was of a martial cast of mind. But never had the boy's admiration for the colonel round such complete expression as when he remarked to a little playmate: "Come on, Jimmy, let's play soldiers. You be Napoleon Bonaparte. I'll be Colonel Bingle!"—New York Times.

The Threshing Results Exceeded the Estimates

Report on Ontario Crop and Live Stock Conditions on September Second —The Milk Supply is Improving.

FODDER SUPPLIES FOR THE WINTER

The following is a summary of report made by agricultural representatives to the Ontario Department of Agriculture.

For lack of barn space some grain has had to be temporarily stacked in the fields. Threshing in the open also help to conserve room for the crops. The results of threshing in most cases exceed the estimates made regarding the standing crops. Mixed grains in Norfolk have given as high as 65 bushels to the acre.

Corn promises to be a fair general crop after all, especially for the silo. With ordinary fall weather corn from the new Southern seed used this year is likely to mature. Durham, however, reports that the crop there has a tendency to run to stalk rather than ear.

Clover fields have been much improved by recent rains, which were much needed. Alsike and alfalfa are doing relatively better than clover for seed.

Late potatoes have suffered from drought, and will not be equal to those planted earlier. Apart from the number of small potatoes the soaking rains of the past week will help them along.

Fall wheat land is being rapidly put into shape, and seeding has already started in some of the southwestern counties. The timely rains of the past week or two will put the ground in excellent condition for plowing and seeding.

Cattle, which have been rather thin owing to poor grass, are getting back to form owing to improved pastures and the abundance of coarse grains and other fodder now available. Marketing generally has been slow, although Lambton states that "Thirty carloads of cattle were shipped to Buffalo last week and fourteen this week from points along the Michigan Central Railway. Frontenac reports that surplus stock such as old cows and bulls are coming on the market.

The milk flow is recovering, as meadows have picked up nicely with the rains.

Hogs are a little lower in value, prices running from $18.50 to $19 a cwt. Arrangements are being made for a fair supply of hogs being fed during the winter.

Fodder supplies for the winter are already well assured. Coarse grains never yielded better. Hay is light in yield, but much of the straw is of excellent quality for fodder. Corn for the silo promises to be a fair yield.

There is at present comparatively little demand for farm labor, as most of the extra work of fruit picking, etc., has been arranged for in advance.

Canadians Flounder in a Slough of Mud

Covetous Eyes are Cast on the Eden of Cambrai Just Beyond—It is Cold as Well as Wet.

WITH THE CANADIAN FORCES, Sept. 11. — Four days of rain, mostly a drizzle, sometimes a deluge, has converted this unhappy No Man's Land into a slough of mud and puddles. The delights of life under canvas are somewhat tarnished when one finds one's tent a pool of water and one realizes something of the miseries of the old trench warfare behind us. Fritz is throwing some of his big stuff around Arras. In front is the Canal du Nord and beyond lies a range of low hills, heavily wooded on their western slopes. Back of them lies a Garden of Eden, wher war has not entered.

"Why can't they let us in there?" our soldiers grumbling ask. "There's mighty good billets in Cambrai. In this blessed hole you cary off a shell hole every step!"

The men grumble, but they are happy. The old corps is all right. Fritz would sooner run up against a mad dog any day.

The Post Office.

The army post office has worked devotedly, but it has been a desperate task keeping up to the kaleidoscopic movements of the corps. The first Canadian letters are beginning to arrive, telling of what the folks at home think of the Amiens show, but no Canadian newspapers. I have not seen one since July, and there is a dearth of cigarettes, tobacco and matches. A lucky souvenir-hunter found six hundred matches in Escourt and traded half a dozen boxes for a box of cigars. These things are practically unprocurable even at the army canteens.

It is cold as well as wet. Woollen underclothing, socks, mitts and night caps are welcome friends. They should be mailed to the boys now rather than when half the winter is over.

Reference is being made to trench warfare. It is mere speculation, of course, but it is doubtful whether trench warfare in its bitter old form will recur this winter. It is proved that any rigid line can be broken through at will. A very wide No Man's Land, anything up to five or even ten miles, lightly held by our posts, with behind a great depth of mobile defences, seems most likely. Best of all is to keep the Hun moving as long as a road can bear a gun. It is a pity if he gets time even to prepare a crust of defence against our flood-tide of victory next spring. The only foe the army fears is peace by agreement this winter.

GREAT DEEDS, FEW WORDS.

Brief Dispatches That Told of Famous Victories in War.

It is fitting that the great soldier, who should be a man of deeds rather than words, should set an example of terseness in his dispatches. Thus, after the capitulation of Prague, Suvaroff thus communicated the joyful news to his empress: "Hurrah! Prague!" To which Catherine, not to be outdone in brevity, answered, "Bravo, field marshal!"

That grim seadog Robert Blake, after gaining one of his famous victories over the French, sent the news in this concise and businesslike form: "Met with the French fleet; beat, killed, sunk and burned as per margin."

The Vicomte de Turenne, marshal of France, was a man of equally few words, as he proved when, after his brilliant defeat of Conde at the Dunes in 1658, he announced his triumph in ten words. "The enemy came, was beaten; I am tired; good night!"

But the world's greatest generals have always been models of brevity as of modesty since the days of Caesar, whose "I came, I saw, I conquered," sent to his friend Amintius after the glorious victory over Pharnaces at Zela, is the most famous "dispatch" in the annals of war.—London Saturday Review.

He Dodged Cold Mutton.

A curious reply was made by Cecil Rhodes to a lady who, seeking to draw him out, suggested that he owed his phenomenal rise to the impetus of noble sentiments.

"Madam," returned Mr. Rhodes, "I owe my fortune simply and solely to cold mutton."

"Cold mutton!" gasped the lady. "Oh, Mr. Rhodes, what do you mean?"

"When I was young," continued the South African millionaire, "I was so dosed with cold mutton and I hated it so cordially that I resolved to grow rich in order to put it on one side for the rest of my life. Yes, madam, cold mutton was at the root of my success. Noble sentiments had nothing to do with it."

Drinking Water.

It is surprising how many people drink little or no water. There is no greater purifying agent than plenty of water internally. An abundance of it not only flushes the entire system, but improves the action of the skin; hence the complexion. Care should be taken that the water drunk is free from germs. If there is any doubt boil it. Do not confine yourself exclusively to either cold or hot water and do not take either at extreme temperatures.

"The Girl Who Had No God"

By MARY ROBERTS RINEHART

Author of "The Man in Lower Ten," "The After House," Etc.

Elinor hardly realized what he was saying. The light of horror had hardly died out of her eyes. To her Walter, once her lover, now typified all of suffering and nearness to death that lay in old Hilary's room upstairs.

"The first train leaves the city at six o'clock," he said, trying to keep his voice steady. "It is hardly likely they will be out so soon, but under some pretext or other they will search the house this morning."

"How can I leave the house now? Up-stairs in father's room——"

"I know," he put in hastily. "I know all about it, Elinor. I am sorry. I am wildly sorry. It's no excuse to say I was crazy, but I was."

"If I go away," Elinor said, with white lips, "how will they manage about him? The nurse needs so many things, and—I—see that she has them."

A flame leaped into the boy's eyes. "If you care for him like that—what are you going to do about it? Even if he cared for you you can not marry him, if he ever found out about you——"

"He will never marry me. And—he does know."

The fact that Ward knew the truth about Elinor and the band brought back to him their common peril. He thrust aside, for the time at least, his passion and his despair; and calmly directed his energies toward deceiving the house for the inevitable search.

So systematic had old Hilary been that there were few papers to destroy. Such of the ledgers as were incriminating he burned in the furnace. Elinor's box of jewels he carried upstairs and placed on the library table. Such settings as had remained from the Country Club raid, after the gems had been taken out, he melted together in old Hilary's crucible and placed the gold and platinum nugget in Elinor's box.

He had set the safe to a simple combination and closed it. Except for its size, and for the protective wiring buried in its walls, it might have been a family safe, built by a nervous and elderly gentlemen living in the country to hold his silver spoons.

It was too late by that time to bury the box as Boroday had suggested. Huff did the next best thing. He buried it carefully in Elinor's garden, under a clump of crimson phlox.

Elinor worked hurriedly but with hopeless eyes. Her preparations consisted in little more than putting on the clothing in which she meant to travel. In this new life on which she was entering she wanted little to remind her of the old. A letter to Henrietta contained enough money to pay off the servants and the household accounts. In another letter she folded the deed to the house and a note conveying it to Henriette.

"You can sell it," she wrote. "Goodby, dear Henriette. I shall never forget you and if ever it is possible be sure I shall see you again."

The time came just before dawn, when she and Walter stood again face to face in the library.

Huff was going at once. It was not Boroday's plan that any of them should further incriminate Elinor by accompanying her to the train. At a sound of steps on the stairs, Huff started.

"The nurse going down, probably for ice," she explained.

"He is getting better," Ian't he?"

"Yes, but he still suffers at times."

When the steps had died away Elinor slowly drew off her engagement ring and held it out to him across the table. Although he was watching her he made no move to take it and she laid it down between them on the table.

"I don't think we need talk about it, Walter," she said simply. "There is nothing to say, is there?"

"I suppose not," he returned bitterly. He added: "If only you will try not to hate me, Elinor."

"I do not hate you. But if he had died——"

Huff came swiftly around the table and taking both her hands in his, held them to his throat with a despairing gesture.

"If I didn't know that it would make you more unhappy," he said slowly, "I'd kill myself to-day."

"Walter!"

"I'll tell you now. It won't change matters any, but perhaps it will change your memory of me. Ever since I have known you I have had one dream. You were to marry me, and I was to turn straight. I could have done it with your help, but now——"

He dropped her hands and turned away. Elinor watched him wistfully. The one thing he wanted she could not give. There could be no compromise between them. It must be all or nothing; and she had given her all to someone else.

In the doorway he turned and looked back at her with haggard eyes. It was as if he were impressing on his memory every light and shadow of her face; every line of her straight young figure. Then he went out into that darkest hour of the night that precedes the dawn.

For the first time since his injury Ward's mind was quite clear. He had not been able to sleep, and the nurse had been reading to him. Strange reading too for the assistant rector of St. Jude's. The books that old Hilary had kept on his bedside still lay there.

Even the nurse accustomed to many books for many men, was gently outraged.

Ward lay in his bed, his eyes half closed, listening intently. At last the nurse put down the book.

"Why, it's frightful, it's outrageous—it's blasphemous! Do you really think I should read you any more of this?"

Ward smiled feebly.

"If you are afraid of the effect on you."

"Not at all," said the nurse almost sharply, and picked up the book again.

Ward lay back on his pillows, and listened to the age-old arguments.

So it was on such a literature as this that Elinor had been reared! How fair a plant to have grown thus in the dark! And as the nurse droned on, Ward came to realize how natural and how inevitable had been her development. Reared in such soil, what might he himself not have become; and more than that, would he have been one-half so sweet, so tender—so good?

Towards dawn the nurse slept in her chair. Her cap had fallen a little crooked, and the beautifying hand of sleep had touched away the small furrows between her eyes. Plain she was but kindly and full of gentleness. Ward, lying awake, watched her. She was no longer very young. He thought of the children that should have clung to her broad, flat bosom, and felt the touch of her tender hand.

Then, because, curiously enough, everything of gentleness and tenderness reminded him of Elinor, his thoughts swung around to her. He closed his eyes and dreamed the dream that had been with him subconsciously all the night. To take her in his arms, and by teaching her love, teach her Infinite love; by showing mercy and forgiveness and great tenderness, to lead her by these, His attribute, to the Christ—this was his dream.

And because it brought hope and healing and great peace, after a time he slept. Elinor standing alone in the house outside his door took courage from his even breathing and ventured in. So light was his sleep that she dared not touch him. She knelt very quietly by his bed, and kissed the corner of his pillow.

Ward spent his Sabbathical year in Oxford. He had thought to find peace by exchanging one form of activity to another, but with the less arduous duties of his work there he had more time to think. He found the old pain even greater; his restlessness grew on him. In the three years since Elinor's flight he had done many things. He had left Woffingham for New York and could feel his usefulness now only bounded by his strength.

But the old zest of life was gone. He was restless, heavier of spirit. There had been times when he had thought that he was forgetting, only to discover, through a stray resemblance, while his heart pounded and the blood raced, that his forgetting was only the numbness of suffering.

Once, on the Strand in London, he came face to face with Boroday. Ward would never forget that meeting, its quick hope which died into the old ache at Boroday's words.

Three months ago the United States Government placed an embargo upon the use of steel for making pulleys, except for war orders.

Since that time the difficulty of securing steel pulleys has been so great that some shop superintendents have been forced, against their better judgment, to buy Dodge Wood-Split Pulleys.

But a curious result has come about from this necessity.

Their experience with the Dodge Wood-Split Pulley has been so satisfactory that they are now specifying Dodge Wood-Split Pulleys instead of metal pulleys, both as regards replacements and new equipment.

They have found that the face of a Dodge Wood-Split Pulley provides greater adhesion, consequently there is less belt slip; and, our pulley being lighter and better balanced, there is less weight friction. These advantages effect a saving in power and coal.

They have also found that Dodge Wood-Split Pulleys may be run at higher speeds than metal pulleys without danger of bursting.

In short, the Dodge Wood-Split Pulley has proved that it will do all that any metal pulley ever did, and do it better, at a less cost.

Add to this that you can get a Dodge Wood-Split Pulley of any diameter, from 4 inches up to 6 feet, on the day you order it, and the arguments in its favor are complete.

ENGLISH AND AMERICAN.

Differing Forms of Speech in Great Britain and This Country

The common objects and phenomena of nature are often differently named in English and American. Such Americanisms as creek and run for small streams are practically unknown in England, and the English moor is a stranger in the United States. The Englishman is naturally but little familiar with bayou, gulch, gully, cañon, butte, divide and bluff. He knows the meaning of sound (Long Island sound), but always uses channel in place of it.

In the same way the American knows the meaning of English bog, but almost always uses swamp or marsh (often elided to ma'sh). Foothill is an Americanism; so is cold snap; so also are prairie, backwoods, flats and neck (in the sense of peninsula). The Englishman seldom if ever describes a severe storm as a hurricane, a cyclone, tornado or blizzard. He does not say that the temperature is 20 degrees or that the thermometer or the mercury is at 20 degrees, but that there are three degrees of frost. He calls ice water iced water.—Pittsburgh Press.

Settled the Duel.

Lord March, afterward the Marquis of Queensberry, was not accustomed to view a duel with unbecoming apprehension and usually attended an affair with an air of enjoyment that often was decidedly displeasing and embarrassing to his adversary. But he was served at last with that sauce which the proverb explains is for the gander as well as for the goose. It was when he was challenged to fight an Irish sportsman. Lord March appeared on the ground accompanied by a second, surgeon and other witnesses. His opponent arrived soon afterward with a similar retinue, but added to by a person who staggered under the weight of a polished oak coffin, which he deposited on the ground, end up, with its lid facing Lord March and his party. Lord March became decidedly uncomfortable when he read the inscription plate engraved with his own name and title and the date and year of death, and peace was patched up.

A Serious Matter

There is a delicacy about mentioning piles. And yet so many suffer needlessly who could be readily relieved and cured if they only knew about Dr. Chase's Ointment.

Men tell one another about this remarkably successful treatment. But many women pine away their health and vitality, dreading a surgical operation and not knowing how easily they can be cured at home by Dr. Chase's Ointment.

FAT SINGERS.

Female singers, after they became famous, generally fall victims to the same fat producing results as their male colleagues. In fact slim singers of extraordinary fame seem to be exceedingly rare. There are several young prima donnas of very high rank who for a while appeared to be in the way of breaking the tradition about the undue rotundity of the average operatic favourite, but the moment that recognition and shekels flowed their way they too succumbed to the apparently inevitable and joined the imitators of the barrel.

The abundant mantle of flesh should be avoided by the young singer as a deadly danger. Not only does it detract from the stage appearance in opera and concert, and curtains the bloom of youth, but more especially it makes in time for shortness of breath and for that apoplectic appearance of the neck and face, to gaze upon which influences an audience into regarding every note of the singer as a terrible effort and an agonizing strain.

OUR DAILY SHORT STORY

Hartley's Caller

The Meeting Brought Matters to a Crisis.

By COLIN S. COLLINS.

"Lady to see you," announced Jimmie, one of the office boys, with a deference that he showed only to Hartley, the dramatic critic, and Murphy, the sporting editor. The sporting editor could call all the baseball players by their first names, but Hartley had only to write a slip of paper and it would take Jimmie into the much desired "show." Such small fry as editors and star reporters were not at all in the same class with a man who carried passes in his pocket every day.

"I've told you a hundred times to get the name, Jimmie," was the testy response. Hartley was ill at ease with the whole world that morning.

"I know," admitted Jimmie, with unembarrassed truthfulness, "but, say, Mr. Hartley, she's a peacherino for fair!"

"I'm not interested in fruit," was the cold response as Hartley turned to his desk. He hated all women at the moment, for he had had to do a thing which would probably cost him the love of the one woman he really did care for.

He had had to tell the cruel truth about Norma Keating as an actress, and he felt that the high spirited girl never would forgive him.

Jimmie, the persistent, hung over the desk.

"She don't look like an actress," he declared, using the argument he knew to be most potent. "An she's a pippin for fair!"

"I can't see any one who does not send in a card," declared Hartley as he turned to his work again, and Jimmie dashed out presently to return with a bit of pasteboard.

With a start Hartley read Norma's name and gave orders that she be ushered in. It was better perhaps that since there was to be a quarrel they should meet on his own ground.

Somehow, with the familiar surroundings, he felt more safe than he ever could in the parlor of the little actress' suit at the hotel. With a sternness that indifferently masked the misery that he felt he prepared to receive his caller.

He had expected that she would come storming in to denounce him for his criticism and to declare him biased and unfair.

He was braced for the shock and ill prepared for the sight of the dejected little woman who came timidly into his dingy office, her rich furs forming a strange contrast to the bare walls and cheap furniture.

Jimmie slipped away after one last admiring glance, and then the girl raised her eyes to Hartley's and met the pity in his bravely.

"I did not come to reproach you for your notice," she said, with a quick appreciation of his attitude. "It was your right to say what you pleased. I paid a big price for the special performance in order to get the metropolitan notices, and in doing so I exposed myself to every form of critical attack.

"I suppose that you are expected to be severe on beginners, to ridicule them and beat them down and force them into their proper places.

"You demand that we start at the bottom. I can see now that it was absurd to think that I could win favorable comment from the great men who have made their reputation more through the savageness of their attacks than through their ability as critics."

"And yet you said you had not come to reproach?" he asked gently. Even in her bitterness he noticed a new note in the rich voice. It hurt him to think that he was in part responsible for that little catch of pain which would sound, try as she would to be hard and cynical.

It was as if her whole quivering soul was laid bare in spite of the dress of words with which she sought to clothe it.

"I did not mean to say that," she cried. "I only meant to come and ask you if you would let me have my photographs back. You and the rest of your confreres have beaten me. I am in retreat. I am going as far from New York as I can. I want to take with me everything that is mine."

"You should have sent your agent and spared yourself," he reminded her gently. "I will see that the pictures are found for you. Will you sit down?"

He indicated a chair as he rang for a boy, and presently Jimmie went away with instructions that Miss Keating's photographs were to be returned by the art department at once.

Neither spoke until the boy had laid the package down and had departed for the outer office. Then Hartley rose and placed them on the chair beside her.

"There is another one," she said uncertainly, "the one that I gave you. May I have it back, please?"

"If your wish," he promised as he turned again to his desk to draw from one of the recesses a photograph with a flowing autograph across its face. "Does your anger go so deep that you are unwilling to leave me even this souvenir of a friendship that I shall always treasure in my memory?" he asked. "May I not keep it?"

"To add to your sacrificial heap," she retorted bitterly. "I suppose you must have a goodly collection of those you have flayed."

"I have few photographs—and few friends among the women of the profession," he said simply as he opened a drawer for an envelope. "I had hoped to number you first among those few."

He held the envelope toward her, and for a moment she hesitated. She seemed about to leave the room, but she turned and faced him again.

"You told me once that you never would marry an actress," she said tensely. "Was it because—because you did not want me on the stage that you—that you wrote as you did?"

"I have made no secret of my admiration for you," said Hartley simply, "and I may have made the remark you attribute to me, but it was with no desire to drive you from the stage that I framed my criticism as I did.

"Can't you see," he continued passionately, "the awful position in which I was placed? If I praised your acting I should have made my paper the laughingstock of the town. If I spoke the truth I knew that I should lose you. Every line of the story in this morning's paper was studied that I might speak as warmly as I dared without stultifying the paper."

"It was a little better than the rest," admitted Norma, "but I thought you had been a little kind so that I would not suspect how you had induced the other critics to be so merciless."

"On the contrary, I saw none of the boys," he declared. "I was far too sick at heart to mix with them and hear their ugly comments."

"Was I really as bad as that?" asked the girl wonderingly. "I thought it was because I was an amateur and had the money to hire the theater and the company. They always jump upon the rich amateurs. I had heard. I thought that was it. Was I really as bad as all that?"

"Don't ask me," pleaded Hartley, but the girl persisted.

"You have a good voice and a good presence," he said slowly. "You have some crude ability, but that is all. You lack the spark of genius. Even money cannot buy that."

"Then you think I will never be an actress?" she asked with quivering lip. Hartley shook his head, and she turned away to the window, pressing her brow to the cool pane, against which the sleet rattled angrily.

For several minutes she stood thus looking out into the whirling snow and hail with unseeing eyes, while Hartley silently watched her.

He would have given the world to take her in his arms and comfort her, but instinctively he realized that she must fight her battle alone. She was the one woman in all the world to him and yet he dared not speak.

At last she turned, and now her eyes were smiling, though her lips still were drawn and white.

"Why struggle against unanimous condemnation? You must be right," she conceded. "I never shall make an actress, and you said that you never would marry an actress."

"I'd marry you if you were Bernhardt and Duse in one," he cried, "but I rather would marry just you, dear. Will you have me? In spite of the blow that I have struck your pride can you love me?"

"I hate to marry a wife beater," she said with a wan little smile, "but, Frank, I think I'd rather have your love than to be a great actress, and I don't mind the notice—now."

Jimmie, coming in with a card, turned and fled precipitately.

"I used to think that Mr. Murphy had the best of it, goin' to prize fights an' ball games," he said reflectively, "but I guess it's Mr. Hartley that has the cinch. I'd rather kiss that pippin than know the hull ball team."

BE READY FOR EMERGENCIES.

The best way is to always keep a bottle of Dr. Chase's Syrup of Linseed and Turpentine in the house, ready for emergencies. Then when croup or colds come suddenly, they can be promptly cured before they have time to reach an acute and dangerous stage. To meet this requirement we have put the syrup up in family size bottles which contain nearly three times as much as the 25-cent bottle and sell at 60 cents.

Care of the Ear.

Never be alarmed if a living insect enters the ears. Pouring warm water into the canal will drown it, when it will generally come to the surface and can easily be removed by the fingers. A few puffs of tobacco smoke blown into the ear will stupefy the insect. Never meddle with the ear if a foreign body, such as a bead, button or seed enters it. Leave it absolutely alone, but have a physician attend to it. More damage has been done by injudicious attempts at the extraction of a foreign body than could ever come from its presence in the ear.—Health.

OF GERMAN EXTRACTION.

The Famous Dutch Tulip In a Sense "Made In Germany."

It would doubtless surprise and perhaps disappoint many a lover of the Dutch tulip, or "oignon a fleur," to learn that it was in a sense "made in Germany." It is on reliable record that the one variety of tulip from which most of the celebrated varieties were obtained is the Tulipa Gesneriana, which Conrad Gesner, a German, brought in 1550 from Constantinople to Augsburg, whence it found its way to Holland. A ludicrous claim of pan-Germanism, therefore, may yet be heard in which Holland is declared to be unmistakably Germany's by right of the bulb trade, unless Turkey should make a prior claim, or Persia should sue the Dutch for using a Persian word with which to name the national flower. For "tulip" is none other than the Persian "tolliban," meaning a turban.

The tulip is cultivated in Holland more than any other flower, not merely because of the wealth that lies in the industry, or the appropriateness of Dutch soil for producing the best flowers, but also because of the Dutch people's intense love of color. There were days, centuries ago, when the tulip was the subject of frantic speculation, comparable only to the South Sea Bubble. A single bulb of the tulip L'Admiral Liefkensboch has sold for 4,500 florins, while the Semper Augustus has brought as much as 13,000 florins. The speculation spread through to England, where £100 was once paid for a single bulb of Fanny Kemble, while a poet wrote of the fashionable flower in those ingenuous couplets:

For brilliant tints to charm the eye,
What plant can with the tulip vie?
Yet no delicious scent it yields
To cheer the garden or the fields;
Vainly in gaudy colors drest,
'Tis rather gazed on than caressed.

The inflated prices, however, did not last. The Dutch Government stepped in and brought Mynheer back to his senses. The speculation was followed by the inevitable crash, and now the Dutch growers cultivate the flower content to make a reasonable profit without any of the visionary's hopes of producing the unique, the the priceless Black Tulip, that "philosopher's stone" in tulipdom, the attainment of which, as every reader of Alexandre Dumas knows, was the subject of the feud between Cornelius Van Baerle and Boxtel in the stirring days of the Brothers de Witt.

The known cultivated varieties of the Dutch bulb number nearly 2,000. Haarlem, or the district of Hillegom-Haarlem the bulb nursery garden of the world, is a feast of color at about this time of the year. Acres upon acres are covered with tulips in full bloom, while the quays are sure to be lined with barges converted for the nonce into floating flower shops. To the onlooker, the coloring is bewildering, the growers are able instantly to identify the flowers by a simple and well-understood method of classification. There are the "selfs," or flowers of one solid color, and the "bizarres," "roses," and "bybloemen," which for the connoisseur signify definite colorings, shadings, and markings. Then there are the plants known as offsets and seeding tulips.

The offsets grow to a flowering size in three or four years; the seedling tulips after four or five years. But there is this remarkable feature about the latter, that whatever may have been the colors and markings of the flowers from which the seeds were taken, the first flowers are of one dull, plain color. They continue in this uncertain condition for several years. Then the time comes when they break into brilliant colors, and display those markings which are classified as "flamed," or "feathered." But nobody is certain as to when the exciting period of "breaking" will occur, though all kinds of ingenious devices are resorted to in order to hasten this stage. Once it is reached, there is always the prospect of unexpected markings appearing. A moment of tense expectancy has arrived for the modern grower. Let the markings but reveal that a hitherto unknown variety of tulip has been produced, and his cup of happiness is filled to the brim.

Alkali in Shampoos Bad For the Hair

If you want to keep your hair looking its best, be careful what you wash it with. Don't use prepared shampoos or anything else, that contains too much alkali. This dries the scalp, makes the hair brittle, and ruins it.

The best thing for steady use is just ordinary mulsified cocoanut oil (which is pure and greaseless), and is better than anything else you can use.

One or two teaspoonfuls will cleanse the hair and scalp thoroughly. Simply moisten the hair with water and rub it in. It makes an abundance of rich, creamy lather, which rinses out easily, removing every particle of dust, dirt, dandruff and excessive oil. The hair dries quickly and evenly, and it leaves the scalp soft, and the hair fine and silky, bright, lustrous, fluffy and easy to manage.

You can get mulsified cocoanut oil at any pharmacy, it's very cheap, and a few ounces will supply every member of the family for months.

History of Belgium.

Modern Belgium dates only from 1831, but the history of the country dates from the time of Julius Caesar, who in 51 B. C. finally conquered the country inhabited by the Belgae. Belgium is the southern part of the Netherlands. The northern part is now known as Holland. Belgium is also the northern part of what was called Flanders and two provinces of Belgium still bear the name, East and West Flanders. The southern part of old Flanders is now the northwestern part of France. All this flat country was commonly called the Low Country. Modern Belgium is a part of it.

Physician Explains Who Should Take Nuxated Iron

Practical Advice on How to Help Build Up Great Strength, Energy and Endurance.

Commenting on the use of Nuxated Iron as a tonic, strength and blood builder by over three million people annually, Dr. James Francis Sullivan, formerly physician of Bellevue Hospital (Outdoor Dept.), New York, and The Westchester County Hospital, said: "Lack of iron in the blood not only makes a man a physical and mental weakling, nervous, irritable, easily fatigued, but it utterly robs him of that virile force, that stamina and strength of will which are so necessary to success and power in every walk of life.

It may also transform a beautiful, sweet-tempered woman into one who is cross, nervous and irritable. I have strongly emphasized the great necessity of physicians making blood examinations of their weak, anaemic, run-down patients. Thousands of persons go on year after year suffering from physical weakness and a highly nervous condition due to lack of sufficient iron in their red blood corpuscles without ever realizing the real and true cause of their trouble. Without iron in your blood your food merely passes through the body something like corn through an old mill with rollers so wide apart that the mill can't grind.

For want of iron you may be an old man at thirty, dull of intellect, poor in memory, nervous, irritable and all "run down," while at 50 or 60 with plenty of iron in your blood you may still be young in feeling, full of life, your whole being brimming over with vim and energy."

The accompanying article of Dr. Sullivan should be carefully read by every man and woman who wants to possess perfect health, great physical endurance and a strong, keen mentality. Dr. Sullivan tells how to increase the iron in our blood and thereby gain greater physical and mental power, brighter intellects and better health.

But in my opinion you can't make strong, vigorous, successful, sturdy iron men, and healthy, rosy-cheeked women by feeding them on metallic iron. The old forms of metallic iron must go through a digestive process to transform them into organic iron—Nuxated Iron—before they are ready to be taken up and assimilated by the human system. Notwithstanding all that has been said and written on this subject by well-known physicians, thousands of people still insist on dosing themselves with metallic iron, simply, I suppose, because it costs a few cents less. I strongly advise readers in all cases to get a physician's prescription for organic iron—Nuxated Iron—or if you don't want to go to this trouble then purchase Nuxated Iron in its original packages and see that this particular name (Nuxated Iron) appears on the package. If you have taken preparations such as Nux and Iron and other similar iron products and failed to get results, remember that such products are an entirely different thing from Nuxated Iron.

Manufacturers' Note—Nuxated Iron which is used by Dr. Sullivan and others with such surprising results, and which is prescribed and recommended above by physicians is not a secret remedy, but one which is well known to druggists everywhere. Unlike the older inorganic iron products it is easily assimilated and does not injure the teeth, make them black nor upset the stomach. The manufacturers guarantee successful and entirely satisfactory results to every purchaser or they will refund your money. It is dispensed in this city by McDermid & Jury and other druggists.

INVISIBLE WRITING.

So Simple a Process as Milk and Water Can Be Used.

In more romantic days (not so very long ago) invisible ink was a favorite precaution of sentimental youth—usually, of course, a quite unnecessary precaution. Just now, perhaps, if a letter reads as if it had something between the lines, it is a reasonable precaution to give it a good toasting before the fire and see if anything comes out. The two simplest and handiest invisible inks are milk and water. If you write your letter with a clean pen in milk it will dry off quite invisibly. But the writing will show up in a faint brown when it is toasted at the fire. If you write in water, the way to make the writing visible is to sprinkle the sheet with fine coal dust or powdered charcoal.

There are, besides, various chemical invisible inks. A weak solution of cobalt used as ink remains invisible until the paper is heated, when it shows up red. The red can be changed to green by steaming it or breathing on it. A solution of salts of lead or bismuth makes an invisible ink which shows up black when treated with sulphurated hydrogen. Another recipe is to write in a weak solution of tannic acid. When dipped in a bath of a persalt of iron the writing comes out black.—Manchester Guardian.

FUSES FOR EXPLOSIVES.

They Are Made by Winding Gunpowder In Cord Meshes.

Fuses, such as are used for setting off charges of dynamite in digging subways and tunnels and for explosive shells in warfare, are prepared very simply in several different ways. One old form was made by soaking a loosely wound cord for ten minutes in a boiling solution of acetate of lead. Another form is a cotton cord impregnated with chromate of lead.

The fuse invented by Bickford in 1831 consists of a fine thread of black powder inclosed in three envelopes of thread and soaked in pitch or rubber, according to the use to which it is destined.

One of the most commonly used fuses today is made by letting a fine stream of black powder run from the small end of a funnel into an envelope of hemp, thick, but not much twisted, the powder falling in as fast as the hemp is twisted. This tube is then inclosed in a mesh of fine cotton, twisted in the direction opposite to that in which the hemp was twisted. The whole is held together with glue or pitch. This is very flexible and burns at the rate of one centimeter a second.—New York World.

Rule of the Corset.

If Cleopatra wore corsets she may rank as a royal champion of them with Catherine de' Medici, who is credited with having introduced the busked corset in France from Italy. Male monarchs have been less friendly. Joseph II. of Austria tried to discourage the corset by making it part of the costume of a convicted woman of bad character. Napoleon, shaking his head over the tight lacing of his day, told Dr. Corvisart that he saw in it a sign of frivolous tastes and a menace of coming decadence. The restoration kings, Louis XVIII. and Charles X., were equally hostile. Formerly, said the latter, France had been full of Venuses, Dianas and Niobes, but now there were only wasps. The revolution alone temporarily put down the garment that has triumphantly defied kings.—London Spectator.

Whale as Food.

Whale meat as a substitute for beef, lamb, pork, and other meats which we are conserving gave great satisfaction at a demonstration lunch under the auspices of the American Museum of Natural History, New York, with Prof. Fairfield Osborn, president of the Museum, as host. Some said that the dish tasted just like American roast pork, and others noticed a striking resemblance to venison, but all agreed that it was good food.

THE EXAMINER PATTERN SERVICE

GIRL'S SET OF CAPS.

The quaint little caps for the tiny girl which are quite out of the ordinary are illustrated in No. 8881. No. 1 is very simple to make, for the diagram shows just how the two pieces are cut and put together. The pointed corners of the crown are formed by tacking the sides together, and the brim buttons to the straight edges of the crown. This cap will be very pretty if the edges are scalloped as suggested by the sketch. Cap No. 2 is a variation of the Dutch style, with a circular brim which is stitched to a slightly circular band. The circle which forms the crown buttons to this band. Both of these caps should be made of wash material.

The girl's set of caps No. 8881 is cut in two sizes—two and four years. Any size requires ⅛ yard 32 inch or wider for No. 1, and ⅜ yard 32 inch or wider, with 1½ yards ribbon for strings.

HINTS FOR SWIMMERS.

It Is Important to Know How to Breathe.

All good swimming at the present time is based upon the freedom from strain and the greater efficiency that is secured by submerging the face, or, in other words, by keeping the head on a level with the rest of the body. The breath is always exhaled under the water and to secure a new supply of air the head is simply turned or twisted to one side until the mouth is above the surface, whereupon the swimmer takes a quick, full gasp of air through the mouth. In this way one can secure a fairly full breath almost instantly. To attempt to inhale through the nose would take too much time and would interfere with the movements of the swimming stroke used. By taking a quick breath through the mouth, timed in harmony with the rolling body, there is no interference with the stroke. In other words, if the right arm is brought up and over, the body thereby naturally rolls upward to the right and a little twist of the head brings the face out of the water for the breath.

It is obvious that one can breathe several times more quickly through the mouth than through the nostrils. Even if one is swimming the old breast stroke, with the face out of the water, there is still a disadvantage in breathing through the nostrils, because if a wave should wash over your face, a certain amount of water would be sucked up into the cavities of the head, thence passing into the bronchial tubes.

All good swimmers observe the same fundamental principles of inhaling through the mouth and exhaling under water. The form of breathing that I have adopted for myself, however, differs from that of the average short distance swimmer. The usual method is to exhale under water through the nose, whereas my idea is to exhale through the mouth when under the surface of the water. I have found that one has much better breath control in this way, for the lips can be puckered up as in whistling so as to regulate the opening and the outflow of air. Naturally, when swimming fast and breathing rapidly, the opening of the mouth is large, permitting a greater passage of air and requiring more frequent inhalations. When swimming slowly, quick breathing is not essential and one should make the opening of the lips small. The burying of the head in the water not only relieves all tensions of the muscles, and thus saves energy, but it also keeps the body parallel with the surface of the water. The great advantage in this is that the legs will not drag and the body will encounter the least possible resistance.

It is important, so far as possible, to permit the air to leave the lungs without any effort on the part of the swimmer to blow it out, as it were. The action of the involuntary muscles of the diaphragm and the pressure of the water against the chest are sufficient to expel the air from the lungs without special effort.

If you find that you become exhausted easily when in the water, you may understand that this is partly the result of forcing the breath from the lungs. It is also wrong to take too many inhalations for the reason that you may acquire what is known to swimmers as an "oxygen jag."

The right amount of breathing or the frequency of inhalation can best be determined by the individual swimmer for the reason that only he can tell whether or not he has secured too much or too little air. If he is breathing more frequently or more deeply than necessary he is likely to feel the dizziness resulting from the over-oxygenated condition. If his breathing is insufficient he will have a sense of breathlessness and early fatigue. But lastly, if the proper amount of oxygen is being inhaled, there appears to be almost no exertion on the part of the swimmer even after spending hours in the water. Care should be taken not to practice too much at first but to progress gradually.

Rhythmic breathing is especially important in connection with distance swimming. A certain pace and rhythm of breathing should be adopted and no variations therefrom should be permitted. Anything that is done in rhythm is always more easily done than without, and this pertains most of all to swimming.—Henry Eliosky, in Physical Culture.

GAS IN THE STOMACH IS DANGEROUS

Recommends the Daily Use of Magnesia To Overcome Trouble, Caused by Fermenting Food and Acid Indigestion.

Gas and wind in the stomach accompanied by that full bloated feeling after eating are almost certain evidences of the presence of excessive hydrochloric acid in the stomach, creating so-called "acid indigestion."

Acid stomachs are dangerous because too much acid irritates the delicate lining of the stomach often leading to gastritis accompanied by serious stomach ulcers. Food ferments and sours, creating the distressing gas which distends the stomach and hampers the normal functions of the vital internal organs, often affecting the heart.

It is the worst of folly to neglect such a serious condition or to treat with ordinary digestive aids which have no neutralizing effect on the stomach acids. Instead, get from any druggist a few ounces of Bisurated Magnesia and take a teaspoonful in a quarter glass of water right after eating. This will drive the gas, wind and bloat right out of the body, sweeten the stomach, neutralize the excess acid and prevent its formation, and there is no sourness or pain. Bisurated Magnesia (in powder or tablet form—never liquid or milk) is harmless to the stomach, inexpensive to take and the best form of magnesia for stomach purposes. It is used by thousands of people who enjoy their meals with no more fear of indigestion.

PRACTICAL HEALTH HINT.

Nervousness In Women.

When the nerves get out of order the whole system lags in sympathy. The digestive system, the liver and the heart all refuse to do their work. Every nervous woman should eat several times a day. She should eat three meals; have a light luncheon between meals and never omit a warm drink taken just before she goes to bed. Gentle exercise and work are as necessary to the woman with nerves as food and fresh air. An active interest in life will be her salvation, but generally the woman in such a condition thinks she is not interested in a thing in life, so she must keep at work until she develops an interest. A celebrated physician has said: "If you wish to avoid nervousness live with reason, have a purpose in life and work for it. Play joyously, strive not for the unattainable, be not annoyed by trifles, aim to attain neither great knowledge nor great riches, be not self centered, but love the good and thy neighbor as thyself."

The Moth and the Flame.

A naturalist states that a moth—and for that matter many other insects—will fly toward a flame for the same reason that a plant seeks the light. Insects, it seems, move in the direction of the light rays that fall upon them. But the light must be of considerable intensity to produce a marked result. Toward a feeble glare the insect would move but leisurely, but in the case of a concentrated light like the flame of a candle or lamp the insect travels with great rapidity to its death.

WOMEN PEARL DIVERS.

In Japan They Are Taught to Swim While Mere Babies.

In Japan, where pearl fishing is an important industry, nine-tenths of the pearl divers are women. Tiny girls, mere babies, are taught by their mothers to swim, and later to dive, the seashore is their playground, and at thirteen or fourteen, when they leave school, they are usually ready to begin diving in earnest. A good mother superintends her daughter's diving exercises as carefully and instructs her as faithfully as any good German hausfrau instructs her daughter in domestic tasks.

A girl does not reach her highest point of efficiency until she is about twenty-five years old. She works from eight to ten hours a day, with only two holidays a month, diving in from fifteen to forty-five feet of water. January and February are too cold for all day work, but even then she often spends from one to five hours daily on and under the water. She wears a special dress of white cotton bloomers and short skirt, her hair is twisted into a tight knot with a cloth wound through it on top of her head, and she wears goggles to protect her eyes. A small tub attached to her waist holds the oysters. She earns from fifteen cents to a dollar a day.

On this small pay she often saves a considerable amount of money, which constitutes her dowry.—Youth's Companion.

Crossing the Channel.

What landing at Sandwich was like in 1533 we learn from Hubertus, the envoy of the Palsgrave Frederick to Henry VIII., whose story is given in Mrs. Henry Cust's "Gentlemen Errant." Hubertus was detained for a week at Calais by stormy weather and had a terrible time when he finally hired a ship and crossed. A young Englishman compelled the sailors to do their duty by ropes' ends and threats of death, and taught Hubertus, who was "middling seasick," to pump out the water, which he did "till at the break of morning the winds fell, and we saw the mountains of England spread out before us." They found themselves off Sandwich (that mountainous district) and were taken off the ship in small boats and carried "on neck or back" to land.—London Chronicle.

USED FOR SHAVING.

Many men are troubled, more particularly in the cold weather, with a sort of roughness of the skin or eczema caused by shaving. The application of Dr. Chase's Ointment after the shave soon cures the trouble and by using it after each shave you keep the skin soft and prevent irritation and soreness. Because of its antiseptic qualities this ointment prevents and cures Barber's Itch.

Petrograd is Burning in Twelve Different Places American Legation Reports

Citizens Are Indiscriminately Massacred on the Streets—There is No Semblance of Law, Police or Military Regulations.

PERSONS EXECUTED

(Special to The Examiner.)

WASHINGTON, Sept. 11.—Petrograd is burnng in twelve different places and there are indiscriminate massacres of people in the streets, according to reliable information received by the American Christiania Legation reaching the State Department to-day.

According to these reports there is no semblance of law or police or military regulations.

Persons Executed.

LONDON, Sept. 11.—A list of thirty-seven persons recently executed in Moscow includes the names of several former cabinet ministers, who served during the reign of the late Emperor Nicholas. A Russian wireless message containing the list as published by M. Tchicherin, the Bolsheviki Foreign Minister, gives among others the names of Alexerim Khostoff and H. Propopopoff, both former ministers of the interior. J. G. St. Cheglovitoff, a former minister of justice, and M. Maklakoff, and M. Vostergoff, the latter the notorious chief of Black Handers. A number of other officials and gendarmes of the Czars regime also are contained in the list.

WAS BURIED WITH MILITARY HONOURS

Funeral of Comrade Fred Haylock Took Place To-day.

The funeral of Comrade Fred. Haylock, of the Great War Veterans' Association, took place this afternoon to Little Lake Cemetery, under the auspices of the Peterborough Branch of the G.W.V.A., and was largely attended. A funeral service at the Armouries was conducted by Rev. J. A. MacKenzie, pastor of Knox Church, assisted by Rev. Canon Davidson, who read the lesson. Many citizens gathered at the Armouries for the service.

The funeral cortege was headed by a firing party in charge of Sergt. John Allen, followed by the G.W.V.A. Band, playing the Dead March in Saul. The hearse and mourners came next, and then the members of the G.W.V.A.

At the Cemetery three volleys were fired over the grave of Comrade Haylock and the last post was sounded.

GERMANY PLAYS A DOUBLE ROLE

Peace Game Offers No Prospect of Fruition.

(Special to The Examiner.)

WASHINGTON, Sept. 11. — Germany is playing a sinister double game of peace and war, according to information received here to-day.

Her peace game is the use of Baron Burian, the Austrian Foreign Minister, to put out "get together" feelers.

Her war game is the incitement of the Bolsheviki to war on the Allies in the north.

The peace game offers no prospect of fruition.

SITUATION IN AUSTRIA SAID TO BE VERY SERIOUS

Hope of Winning the War Has Completely Vanished—Food is Scarce.

POLITICAL DISORDERS

Special to the Examiner:

MILAN, Sept. 11.—According to eight hundred repatriated Italians, the economic and political situation in Austria is absolutely tragic. A repatriated professor said that the population's present occupation is to end the war soon at any cost.

Since the battle of the Piave and the German reverses on the Western front, the hope of winning the war has completely vanished. The professor also confirmed the reports of political disorders in Bosnia and dread riots in Vienna, which forced the Government to grant concessions and increase the ration of bread, which is, however, still unpalatable.

This year's crop is a failure, owing to the fact that most crops were consumed before they were fully ripe. There are few potatoes. This has prevented a general increase in foodstuffs rationing, with the exception of bread.

The Exhibition Directors Ask the Whole Hearted Support of Citizens

Improvements to the Grounds and a Bigger and Better Fair Only Possible by Big Attendance.

At the last meeting of the Trades and Labour Council the question of the admission of 35c to the Exhibition Grounds Fair week, was discussed, and properly so, by the members of that body and an enquiry made as to the reason for it.

In the multitude of details in connection with the Fair, the directors had thought the reason for the increased price was understood and overlooked making an explanation in the press that would show the citizens the necessity for it and at the same time make every person in the city a booster for the fair.

Much adverse criticism has been made in previous years about the appearance of the Exhibition Grounds, which to say the least was merited, After last years exhibition the Directors made up their minds that they would have a fair in 1918 in real grounds and set out with this object in view. First of all every Director subscribed $10.00 to an improvement fund which was augmented by five sub scriptions from the manufacturing concerns, business men and public-spirited citizens of the city. In addition to this $1000.00 was made from two holidays in all over $5000.00 has been spent and all paid for save $1200.00 which the Board is carrying and are responsible for. If any person has any doubt that the money has not been wisely spent let them take a run down to the grounds to-morrow night when they will be all lighted up and they can get in and out and look over things and if they do not come away with the opinion that the improvements are immense then the Directors will feel they have spent the money in vain.

In order to enlist the sympathy of everyone interested in the Peterborough Fair the Directors felt that the extra charge of 10c which is being used this year to help with the improvements would be heartily taken hold of and every person in attendance would feel that he or she had given some little help to Board to assist in making the improvements possible and a better exhibition staged.

The Board believes that every citizen will boost for this year's Fair and that the extra 10c will make him take a keener interest in the grounds in as much as the extra admission charge is being made for improvement purposes.

If anyone who visits the Fair, sees the aeroplane, the races, the grand stand attractions, the fine exhibit of horses and cattle, flowers, fruits and vegetables, fancy work, etc., and comes away feeling he has not got his money's worth he will have it cheerfully refunded at the gate.

POSITIONS CAPTURED

New Attack is Meeting With Success —300 German Wagons Seized

ENEMY ATTACK

(By Lowell Mellett — United Press).

WITH THE BRITISH ARMIES IN FRANCE, Sept. 11. — The British armies launched an attack at three a.m. to-day north-west of Peiziere. As this is cabled, it is reported the British captured important ridges. (Peiziere is a northern suburb of Epchy, on the Hindenburg line midway between Cambrai and St. Quentin).

Heavy German shelling has developed all along the front. In the Sensee Valley the German batteries were worked so rapidly their bombardment was like a hurricane.

There is as yet no official confirmation of the British gains in the regions of Peiziere.

Wagons Seized.

In the Tincourt area, nearly 300 German wagons were seized, with 908 prisoners, including three officers. To-day's prisoners so far reported number 264. The September total is 2,027. Regardless of intermittent heavy rains, sometimes storms and cold and generally depressing weather, the British continue attacking here and there, usually gaining limited objectives. Occasionally these assaults are desisted from in the face of stiff resistance from refreshed German troops.

A German attack west of Govzeaucourt at six p.m. yesterday was repulsed, except at Dead Man's Corner, the junction of the sunken roads near the town.

At 9.10 o'clock last night, enemy troops attempted to advance north of Ecourt St. Quentin. The British outposts were withdrawn, after a brisk engagement. No losses were suffered.

MISS STINSON'S BIPLANE'S PARTS ARE ASSEMBLED

Everything Ready for Her First Flight To-morrow Afternoon at the Exhibition Park — Entries Piled Up To-day.

Miss Katherine Stinson's biplane was the centre of attraction at the Exhibition Grounds this afternoon for the straggling visitors who couldn't remain away until to-morrow's official opening of the fair. The airplane was shipped in big boxes, carefully wrapped and protected against accident. Miss Stinson's mechanician was engaged this afternoon in assembling the parts, attaching the spreading wings and the tail to the long cigar-shaped fuselage, in short transforming what at first glance looked like a wrecked machine into a strange sprawling bird shaped thing, just as the hundreds of war pictures have shown it.

The frame work is hidden under a cover of linen so tightly drawn a drum major could play a solo on it. I has been varnished a straw shade, and although it appears as light as a kite, the texture suggests an inherent strength that belies the seeming flimsiness.

It would be invidious to compare Miss Stinson's flying with the feats that are performed every day in the routine of warefare in the air, but she is the pioneer of her sex in aviation, and has gained a world-wide reputation as an accomplished and fearless aviatrix. Her first flight will be to-morrow (Thursday) afternoon, and will include all kinds of stunts that most of us have read about, but have never seen. She will also give an exhibition on Thursday evening, and again on Friday evening at 7:00 o'clock. In the list of attractions secured for the Fair, Miss Stinson is in a class by herself, and the citizens should not miss this opportunity of witnessing air flights that will give them a thrill or two they will not soon forget.

Many Entries.

Secretary Hall was almost overwhelmed by to-day's heavy mail of entries. There are many exhibitors who have never been to the Peterborough Exhibition before, and all the old friends are in line with new herds, flocks and fitters.

Thousands of Lights.

Thousands of incandescent lamps have been strung in all directions, and when the power is turned on to-night for the first time, the grounds will be splendidly illuminated.

THE WEATHER

Last night's lowest was 33 degrees, one degree above the freezing point. There was also a heavy white frost. This will likely bring some rain before long.—W. P.

OFFICIAL DESPATCHES

British Line Was Advanced Slightly Northwest of St. Quentin.

FRENCH ADVANCE

LONDON (Official), Sept. 11.—During last night the British line was advanced slightly in the region of Vermand, northwest of St. Quentin, Field Marshal Haig reports today. The Germans delivered a counter attack in the region of Ecourt-St. Quentin, it was repulsed in stiff fighting. There was sharp fighting also at Gouzeaucourt. The Germans were beaten off except at one point where a British post remained in enemy possession.

POSITION CAPTURED.

PARIS, Sept. 11.—The village of Travecy, near the southern end of the main Hindenburg line, has been captured by the French, according to reports received here. If the French can hold this town the important enemy position at LaFere, the northerly defense of St. Gobain Massif, two miles south of Travecy, will be virtually outflanked.

TROOPSHIP TORPEDOED

Canadian Press:

LONDON, Sept. 11.—A troopship with 2,800 American soldiers on board has been torpedoed. All hands were saved. The troopship was beached. In order to save time, instead of launching boats, the men clambered the ropes to destroyers which swarmed around the stricken vessel and came close alongside. This operation was greatly facilitated by the fact that the sea was not rough. The troopship was a member of a large convoy approaching the English coast. The vessel was torpedoed 200 miles from shore at 3 o'clock on Friday afternoon.

WAR SUMMARY

NEW YORK, Sept. 11.—The Associated Press to-day issued the following summary: The British were again moving forward to-day toward the Hindenburg line in one sector where they are still some distance from it, near the centre of the Allied battle front. Some progress was made during the night in the Vermand region, where Field Marshal Haig's forces are closing in upon St. Quentin from the north, while the French are pushing up from the south. Further north the British were reported to-day to have gained a foothold in the twin towns of Peiziere and Epehy, two and a half miles from the Hindenburg line, opposite Le Catelet. Their resistance in this sector is also taking the form of strong counter-attacks at Gauzeaucourt, just to the north. They gained a lone British post in hard fighting here last night, but otherwise were completely repulsed.

For the Labrador Medical Mission

The Treasurer of the Labrador Medical Mission desires to acknowledge with sincere thanks the receipt of fifty dollars for Sister Bailey's work at Forteau. The same generous donor has given five dollars for "Bricks" in the Orphanage at St. Anthony. Dr. Grenfell has asked the children of Canada for money to build a home for homeless children in Labrador. It cost twenty-five cents to place a brick in the new building. Surely there are many children in Peterborough who would gladly contribute one or more "bricks" for the comfort of the Orphan children of Labrador. Miss Parker of the Y.W.C.A. will gladly receive and acknowledge any contributions.

THE CAMPAIGN IS PROGRESSING

Subscriptions to Sailors Relief Fund Not Yet Totalled.

Mr. W. H. Dunsford, secretary of the Navy League for this city states that the campaign for fund at present in full swing is progressing satisfactorily. The canvassers however, have not been able to report on the amount of the subscriptions and figures are not yet available. The canvass will be carried on for the balance of the week.

"The subscriptions are coming in satisfactorily," summed up Mr. Dunsford.

Fighting Operations on the Western Front Are Steadily Slowing Down

Terrific Rains Hamper the Allies, Who Are Not Ceasing to Batter the Germans—Another Blow at an Early Date is Considered Practically Certain.

(United Press Service.)
(By Wm. Philip Simms.)

PARIS, Sept. 11. — Through the most terrific rains since the fighting began last March the Allies to-day are not ceasing to batter the Germans, harassing them everywhere from Dixmude to Rheims. Nevertheless the operations are steadily slowing down. Belgians, British, French and Americans are snuggling up closer to their former lines. If the rains continue, mud will force a further slackening. Still the weather has been exceptionally dry since before the offensive, and the ground is thirsty, so much of the moisture can be absorbtime, pending the completion of the rainy season which is now liable at any time, would affect the whole trend of the remainder of the campaign.

Marking Time.

To-day, despite local fighting, where the British and French were driving in the last German outposts westward of the Hindenburg line, the western front was virtually marking time, pending the compleaion of the new passage of the campaign. Experts here were totally at variance regarding the nature of this new phase of the fighting. Some declared that Foch would not permit Ludendorff to get his second wind at the Hindenbutg line, intimating that a great blow is practically certain. Others doubted whether there will be any real big efforts before spring.

Lines Shortened.

German critics, however, speak as if they were all drawing their inspiration from the same fountain, which hitherto has actually been the case. They admit the Allied blow was so serious that German plans, certainly as far as 1918 was concerned, were completely upset, and they suggest that no further offensive is possible from their side, although it is no secret that Hindenburg by shortening his lines, has accumulated some forty divisions of passable reserves with perhaps as many more entering the process of reorganization and taking the rest cure.

British Opened a New Attack This Morning

Important Ridges Were Captured—French Are Close to La Fere.

RAID REPULEDS

(Special to Examiner.)

London, Sept. 11. — (British Admiralty Wireless Press). — The Hindenburg line, save where it is already in possesion of the British, is under the fire of the French or British guns along the whole of its length. The Germans have been forced back until they have reached ground which is seamed with the old trenches, and their retirement has naturally slackened. They are compelled to find temporary relief in a partial return to the old style of fighting.

WOTAN SECTION GONE.

The Wotan section has gone and it remains to be seen whether the Siegfried section which lies between the Sensee and Lafere, and the Almeriche which runs farther south, will prove more lasting security. At present the British are across the hinge of the Hindenburg line south of St. Quentin and from Marqui on they threaten Cambrai from the northwest. The French are also close to LaFere and are keeping the Germans up on the Aisne very busily occupied.

NO RABIES HERE IN PAST SIX MONTHS

Dr. Amyot informed the Board of Health last night that there had been no case of rabies in the city for six months, and suggested that the Council be notified to that effect. He advised that every year dogs should be locked up during the warm weather, and freed in winter, but at no time should mad dogs be unleashed. Mayor Duncan remarked that the restrictions upon dogs had been so beneficial that he was inclined to favour keeping them locked up. However, the Council will decide the matter.

Huns Have Withdrawn

Activity on the American Front—Heavy Bombardment.

(Special to The Examiner.)
(By Fred S. Ferguson.)

WITH THE AMERICANS ON THE AISNE, Sept. 11.—Shelled out of his positions between Aevillon and Glennes by a heavy bombardment, the Germans have withdrawn to the high road between those towns, falling back a little further toward the Aisne on our right. The enemy still holds the strongly fortified height of Le Petite Montagne, and dominating positions east of the Revillon-Glennes line. Heavy rains have nearly halted the operations between the Aisne and the Vesle.

Increase for Mission Fund

District Meetings Closed Yesterday

At the conclusion of the afternoon session of the Methodist District meeting of clergy and laymen held yesterday it was decided to increase the givings to missions in this district $25. The churches have asked for an increase of $1000,000 to the Canadian Mission fund.

Session Opened This Morning

(Canadian Press.)

Toronto, Sept. 11. — With solemn devotional services in St. James Cathedral this morning the annual meeting of the General Synod of the Church of England in Canada began and will probably last for two weeks. Twenty six archbishops and Bishops were included among the delegates present. Right Rev. J. N. McCormick of Western Michigan, delivered an admonitory sermon.

Poison Lurks on the Rubbers of Fruit Preserve Jars

An Investigation is Now Being Undertaken by the Authorities Both Here and in Western Canada.

Acting on instructions from officials of the Ontario Government, an analyst has been asked to report on suspicious circumstances surrounding the illness of residents in Muskoka, believed to the result of poisoning from eating freshly-canned fruit. It is understood that the analyst has found phenol on the rubber rings used on the jars in which the fruit was canned. German agents are believed to be responsible for tampering with the rubber rings, and it is thought to be an insidious attempt of enemy spys to poison thousands of residents of both the United States and Canada.

Phenol is a poison similar to and acts like carbolic acid. When used on the rings of jars it will permeate the fruit therein, and produce at the least a nauseating effect on those eating of the contents. The rings used in Muskoka, it is understood, originally came from the United States. Quantities have also been located in Alberta and Saskatchewan. An investigation is now being undertaken by the authorities into the whole matter, both here and in the West.

A well-known Peterborough county young man has died in France, as the result of his wounds. M. Perdue, formerly a school teacher in Ennismore, succumbed to his wounds, which were gunshot wounds in the thighs and abdomen. He enlisted in the west with the 32nd Battery over three years ago. One brother, S. J. Perdue, is still in France, and was badly wounded at the battle of Chateau Thierry. Another brother, G. J. Perdue, has been invalided home, and is now secretary of the G.W.V.A. of British Columbia.

PTE. C. McGRATH WOUNDED.

Another 93rd Battalion boy has Been wounded in the person of Pte. Christopher McGrath. Pte. McGrath was in the well known 1st Battalion when he was wounded. The telegram reads: "Pte. Christopher McGrath has been admitted to No. 18 General Hospital, Camiers, on Aug. 3rd, suffering from a gunshot wound in the left shoulder" His brother, Joseph enlisted with the 8th C. M. R., and has been missing for over two years.

Private Thos. Ed. Barnes.

Mrs. T. E. Barnes, King George Street, has received a telegram from Ottawa, notifying her that her husband, Private Thomas Edward Barnes, was admitted to No. 7 Canadian General Hospital at Letreport on August 29th, with a gunshot wound in the left arm. Private Barnes enlisted with the 93rd Battalion, and was first wounded in December, 1916. This is the second time that he has been shot in the left arm.

WHY BLAME THE GOOD FOR THE BAD?

Just now, when so many makers of cloths are cheapening their products, a man needs to be especially careful where he buys his clothes. Because cheap serges and shoddy worsteds and tweeds will not make good suits, has nothing to do with the pure, all wool fabrics you pick from the Scotland Woolen Mills Company. There is no mistaking the high quality of our woolens, and this Fair Week should keep us busy measuring and booking orders for Suits and Overcoats.

"Peterborough Presents Possibilities Unsurpassed."

WEDNESDAY, SEPT. 11, 1918.

THE PETERBORO EXHIBITION

The annual Peterboro Industrial Exhibition, which in spite of war conditions, gives promise of being the biggest and most successful in the history of this event, will be opened to-morrow. No body of men have labored more unselfishly or energetically in the public interest, than the Board of Directors of the Peterboro Industrial Exhibition. Through lean years as well as fat ones, they have given unstintingly of their time and their money to ensure the success of the exhibition. Year by year the splendid results of their efforts have been seen until the Fair is on a firm, well-established footing, and during the last few months improvements have been inaugurated and carried out to such an extent that there will be many surprises for the visitors at the Exhibition to-morrow, or on the following days.

The self-sacrificing work of President Denne, and those associated with him, should be recognized by a huge attendance this year. The people of Peterborough should feel that the Exhibition is theirs—an institution in which they should take pride, and in the success of which they are as vitally concerned as the directors. There will be many features of educational value — manufacturers will demonstrate the latest devices in many lines and some idea of the extent of Peterborough's answer to the appeal for Greater Production may be obtained from the quantity and quality of the exhibition of farm produce.

The Exhibition is the great getting together time when friends from far and wide meet. There will be many things to see—aerial flights, vaudeville, horse racing and other attractions of the same kind, in addition to the educational side of the Exhibition.

Every citizen of Peterborough should make sure of visiting the Exhibition grounds during the next three days.

MOTORLESS SUNDAYS.

Over in the United States, where the Fuel Controller's request for the eliminating of pleasure motoring on Sunday ,for the purpose of saving gasoline, was made several weeks ago, the few car owners who ventured to indulge in a Sunday ride, were violently reminded of the unpatriotic nature of their action. Cars were roughly used and their drivers were everywhere hailed as "Pro-Germans," "Huns," "Kaiser lovers," and greeted with other epithets even more stinging than these.

Peterboro citizens can avoid such unpleasant experiences, and at the same time have the consciousness that they are helping in their country's war efforts, by leaving their car in the garage, or their motor boat tied up at its dock next Sunday, and on the following Sundays until there is a sufficient stock of gasoline to relieve the situation.

Many firms who handle gasoline have set the example by refusing to sell "gas" on Sunday. Surely motor owners are not less patriotic than these dealers, to whom the doing away of Sunday motoring means an actual financial loss. The sacrifice of a few hours of pleasure for the welfare of the country, is not much to ask, and The Examiner confidently looks forward to next Sunday as practicaly a motorless day.

No Peterborough citizen wants to be known as a Pro-German, or an ally of the Hun. He runs the risk of being awarded such a title if he persists in unnecessary motoring on Sunday, in the face of the urgent appeal to conserve gasoline.

AN ALLY OF GERMANY.

Geramny has a powerful ally working within the boundaries of Canada. Its operations are very effective. It enters munition plants and causes explosions. It cripples hundreds of factories which are laboring to produce war-time necessities. It waits until the grain in the fields is ripe for harvest, and then destroys it over thousands of acres, or else it bides its time until the harvested crops have been stored in elevators and obliterates them by the hundreds of thousands of bushels. It operates in every city and town and in the country districts. It is unceasing in its activities, working by night as well as by day, and for every hour of the twenty-four It enters countless homes, bringing devastation and sorrow; and last, but not least, it causes heavy loss of life.

This foe is not an "alien enemy," but comes of good Canadian stock. It is encouraged by millions of people who believe themselves to be patriotic. Without their help it would soon be overcome. The name of this great enemy is Preventible Fire, and its principal cause is Canadian carelessness.—Conservation.

AN IMPORTANT ANNOUNCEMENT

The announcement that the Hydro-Electric Commission of Ontario is to spend $1,250,000 upon the development of power at Ranney's Falls, is a most important and pleasing one for Peterborough, as it ensures an ample supply of power for the city's actual and potential manufacturing concerns. The situation that had developed since the Quaker Oats Company made the announcement, that they would require all their own power for their new plant, was becoming serious. There was a danger of a power shortage that might possibly interfere with existing factories, and certainly would have interfered with the prospects of the city securing new industries.

Mr. R. R. Hall's letters upon the power question were timely and awakened the public to the seriousness of the danger. The Mayor and members of the City Council are to be congratulated upon the manner in which they realized the necessity for prompt action, and upon the way the crisis was handled by them. The Hydro-Electric Commission when first appealed to did not make a very reassuring reply, and the Council immediately took the matter up with the Minister of Railways and Canals, as the Federal Government are owners of the excess power on the Trent The result is seen in the important announcement made yesterday.

The 10,000 h.p. to be developed at Ranney's Falls ensures an ample supply of power for Peterborough and means much for the industrial life of the city.

THE FORTY IMMORTALS.

Origin and Checkered Career of the French Academy.

The Institute of France had its inception in 1570, when there was founded in Paris by the French poet, Antoine de Baif, a literary and musical society, known as the Academy of the Valois. Charles IX. granted it letters patent on Nov. 20, 1570, as the Academy of Poetry and Music. It had, however, no stability. Attacked upon every occasion and criticised by its opponents, its members ceased to meet after 1584. Almost half a century passed before a revival took place.

For some time, since the year 1629, a small circle of enthusiastic students was wont to meet at each other's homes for the study of French language and literature. From year to year its membership increased, and in 1634 Cardinal Richelieu proposed to the society to have their private status changed into a public institution, with many rights and privileges. Upon agreement by the society it was henceforth known as the French Academy, with a charter from Louis XIII. of January, 1635. It consisted then of forty members, the "forty immortals," and at no time and under no pressure whatsoever has this number been increased.

True it is, also, that here royal prerogative and personal intrigue often added an inferior member, while the far superior remained excluded, for whom popular indignation created the world known "forty-first seat." For a century and a half the academy held stated meetings until Aug. 5, 1793.—Argonaut.

Applause In Ancient Rome.

The first nighters in the theaters of ancient Rome were much more punctilious in the matter of applause than modern audiences are. When the Roman theater goers were fairly well satisfied with a play they applauded by snapping with the thumb and middle finger. If they wanted the actors to understand that they were really satisfied with the performance they clapped loudly by beating the left fingers on the right hand. A more hearty token of approval was given by striking the flat palms of the hands against each other.

The Greatest River.

The Amazon is the world's greatest river. The Nile, Mississippi and Ganges are mighty streams, but in length probably and in breadth, depth, volume of water and reach of clear sailing the South American river leads them all.—New York American.

Milk Registered 15 P. C. Butter Fat

One Bottle From the Peterboro Pure Milk Co. Better Than Cream.

In the September milk test report presented to the Board of Health last night, one sample showed a percentage of butter fat, fifteen per cent., so extraordinary, that the members were inclined to doubt the correctness of the test. This milk was supplied by the Peterborough Pure Milk Company to H. M. Dobbin, and Mr. Stapleton stated that it was taken from a bottle of milk that had been haphazardly chosen from a number of them. The percentage is actually higher than that of cream. The statement for the month is as follows:

ALL INDUSTRIES PRESSED TO LIMIT TO WIN THE WAR

Government's Gigantic Programme for Utilizing Material to Reinforce Men at Front.

WASHINGTON, D. C.—Industries not essential to the war should prepare themselves for the greatest sacrifice they have been called on to make.

It is obvious that the greater the army the greater the need for supplies. Material resources, therefore must be strained to the limit. Hence

Although quantity production has the United States is devoting vast energy to material resources. It is in this respect that America's powe will be felt in the campaign of 1919.

Although quantity production has been reached in practically every form of war munition with the exception of aeroplanes the "peak" of production is still to be attained. When this acme of production is reached the rain of destructive material on Germany will begin in earnest, and the ultimatum of "surrender of face annihilation" will have assumed concrete form.

While the actual work of organizing industries rests with the War and Navy Departments and the Shipping Board, the generalship by which these agencies are co-ordinated lies with the War Industries Board, of which Bernard M. Baruch is head. This Board is now weeding out essentia from non-essential industries. The task is probably the greatest ever placed on any similar organization in any country.

When war was declared American industries were using practically all developed raw material in the country. Suddenly added to this was the war burden entailed in the expenditure of $24,000,000,000 of war business for the year, of which $6,000,000,000 was loans to Allies, most of which is to be spent here.

In steel there is a startling shortage. Government requisitions of steel for the pending six months calls for 22,000,000 tons. The total production in this country for a like period amounts to 16,500,000 tons, leaving a shortage for Government requirements alone, without regard to industrial requirements, of 6,000,000 tons. This steel must be found in some manner.

An idea of the way in which steel is used in various industries may be gathered from the fact that 17,000 tons of carbon steel are absorbed annually in the manufacture of corsets.

There is a shortage of zinc, copper tin, manganese. There will be a shortage in leather, wool and cotton. One pair of shoes will be called on to do the duty of two pairs. Shoddy will enter into the manufacture of clothing because of the necessity of conserving wool.

The Government realized that "the first great effort involved building a great merchant marine. To-day the Shipping Board announces that ship building has reached quantity production under the leadership of Charles M. Schwab that has the admiration of the world.

Aside from the shipbuilding question was that of inland transportation. Then there was the problem of coal production. Other problems were of fuel oil and intensified production of lumber for shipbuilding and air planes.

Grappling all these conditions the Government has organized industry to such an extent that to-day, from the far North-West to the Atlantic seaboard, there is a hum of industry that menaces autocracy.

America is mobilizing its industry for a long war, for one of thirty years if necessary, to assure victory.

First Shipment of New Fall Serge and Satin Dresses

The first hint of Fall comes with this shipment.

The collection includes some of the smartest and best designed models. Trimmings show individualistic touches of the new thoughts, whether in the design of the waist, or the use of buttons, which are very popular, and such other features that make them at once different and unusual.

The serge dresses are mostly in navy blue, made of a superior fine English serge and show the usage of buttons in various ways. Quite a number also with braid trimming.

One of the satin models has the front of the skirt in accordion plaiting as well as braid on the waist. Another satin dress shows the free use of chenille and buttons with a new panel back arrangement. Some have side-cascade tunics; others a deep silk fringe.

Others, as a matter of course, each in a new design priced at $15.00 to $40.50.

An Assemblage of Distinctive and Exclusive Modes in Fall Millinery

The range of millinery designs is so comprehensively broad and so intensely interesting that we confess our inability to settle upon the question where to begin telling you of them.

With all the favored style features, however, the one dominant thought that enters your mind is the hat that will become you most and yet be in full keeping with the fashion tendencies of the season.

We can only add that the millinery modes now on view present a comprehensive assemblage of all that is correct and authentic in Fall millinery an assemblage that provides you with splendid and individual choice.

Prices range from $2.50 to $17.

An Editorial Concerning New Fall Merchandise

From newspapers and various other sources of information you have probably noticed that certain new conditions will have a large effect upon the purchasing of your new Fall wearables and other items.

So this little talk will hold the close attention of all who desire to make most satisfactory and desirable selection.

Quite true, our early stocks may not be quite as complete as they shall be later. However, there is the greatest satisfaction in knowing that you have chosen from exclusive and early styles and, what is more, that you will receive fully one hundred per cent. service from everything you buy.

So first of all it is the part of wisdom to examine closely all new arrivals as they are shown in displays at the store.

Another important feature of choosing early is that you can put to immediate advantage all your purchases the moment cold weather makes its appearance.

So we repeat again—the best thing you can do to-day is to come to the store, become familiar with the new Fall styles as well as the range of prices so that you can make comparisons and learn to your own satisfaction the advisability of purchasing at this store.

ST. PETER'S DRAMATIC CLUB

Up-to-the-minute jokes, good humored hits at local people and conditions, pretty girls and funny men, all banded together and worked out with elaboration of detail in their settings, made the Nationality Minstrel Show given last evening by St. Peter's Dramatic Club at the T. A. S. Hall a successful event which was attended and enjoyed by over 300 people. The proceeds which were gratifying, will be devoted to the Knights of Columbus huts fund.

VICTORY CAMP SCENE.

The first scene presented was a cleverly worked out representation of Captain Cameron's Victory Camp.

Just outside the tent seven young people dressed in a medley of colors sat chatting and singing the latest songs, real live songs at that, and splendidly sung by the talented artists. The audience was particularly delighted by a really funny coon act, in which the nigger attempted to rehearse a play with his boarding house keeper. This contained all the features which make a coon scene funny, even with a ghost, proverbially horrifying to a colored gentleman.

CONCLUDING SCENE.

The climax of the evening was reached in the concluding scene. Here the stage was in total darkness, and as a verse was recited extolling the deeds of one of our gallant allies, a light was flashed on and the flag of the nation could be seen in the background, Canada, Australia, Scotland, United States, Ireland, Italy, France, Belgium and the Red Cross were all represented. Then Britannia, the tableau, was presented. Standing back high above the audience was Britannia, each lesser light of the Allies flickering and seeming altogether insignificant with the blaze and glory of Britannia.

Night Prowler in Byersville Has Alarmed Women

A woman's piercing shriek startled the residents of Byersville a few nights ago about eleven o'clock. It was a weird, terrifying cry of fright that was heard on the west end of Chamberlain Street, beyond the Salvation Army Hall. When the first neighbours hurried into the dark along the road they found a young girl unconscious. She had come to Peterborough from Tweed for a short visit. That night she had left the C.G.E. car at the corner of the Monaghan Road and Chamberlain Street, and started to walk west toward her friends' home. Several boys at the corner offered to direct her, but she replied that she knew the way. These streets across the boundary are unlighted, and as dark as a concession line in the heart of the country.

That night a number of the Byersville men searched the neighbourhood but without finding a trace of the prowler who had held up this girl. A few nights later a woman whose husband is overseas, saw the figure of a man on the roof of the kitchen of her home. She turned out the lights and left the house to telephone for the police, but as she hurried down the road a stone bounded along ahead of her.

Both these stories are verified by residents to whom they were related, and there are others equally authentic that have aroused the residents to action. County Constable Moore has been working on the case, it was stated.

Incidents have been patched together, leaving a suspicion that points to a certain man. It is no exaggeration to say that the neighbourhood has been alarmed, especially women and girls, who have since kept close to home at night, going out only when accompanied, and even then with feelings of uneasiness and fear.

CHILDREN ENTRUSTED TO THE SOCIETY.

In Police Court this morning the children of Mrs. Albert Rowe were entrusted to the care of the Children's Aid Society. Mrs. Andrew Larush, grandmother of the three children, sought to be made guardian of them. The Children's Aid Society will hold the children until word is received from the father, Pte. Albert Rowe, who is overseas. Mr. J. O'Brien acted for Mrs. Larush, and Mr. J. Wearing for the Children's Aid Society.

The Peterboro County Milk Producers Met Last Evening and Formed an Association

One of the Objects Aimed at is a Change in the Distribution of Milk—Interesting Address by Mr. E. H. Stonehouse, of Toronto—Mr. Armstrong Accuses Dairymen of Putting Money in the Bank.

The Peterborough Milk Producers' Association is the name of a new organization that sprang into being last evening following a largely attended meeting of milk producers, distributors and others interested in the dairying industry. The meeting was held in the lecture hall of the Public Library and the chairman for the occasion was Mr. R. F. Rogers. The sentiment of the meeting was not wholly in favour of increased prices for milk. "Let us play fair," said Reeve John McIntosh of North Monaghan, who endorsed the resolution calling for the formation of an association. A feature of the meeting was an address by Mr. E. H. Stonehouse, president of the Milk Producers' Association of Toronto. The meeting ran along merrily until Mr. Stonehouse got through, then chaos prevailed and the proceedings dragged along until eleven o'clock. Lack of competent leadership was the absent note and nobody seemed to care for the task of leading the producers out of the wilderness into which present-day circumstances have placed them. One object of the new association is to take up the question of direct distribution to the consumer. Many of them claim that there is too wide a difference between the price paid to the producer and the price received from the consumer by the distributor. As one producer put it—"we sell our milk for 5.20 a quart, and the distributor gets eleven and twelve cents for it."

Price Increased.

One effect of the address by Mr. Stonehouse was to convince the producers that they had no easy task before them. In Toronto the producers have been getting two dollars and a half for an eight-gallon can and now the price has been boosted to two dollars and eighty cents. In Peterborough the price ranges around two dollars per hundred weight. Mr. Stonehouse pointed out the difficulty of establishing a standard price owing to the varying conditions under which milk is produced such as the price of feed, cost of labour and local conditions generally.

Mr. Stonehouse, who was introduced by Mr. H. B. Cowan dealt with a number of rural problems including the question of uplift. "We can never be of any assistance to the farmer until he learns to help himself," said Mr. Stonehouse, who is a practical farmer himself. The desire to improve the farmers' conditions must originate in a practical way with the farmer himself. Speaking of rural depopulation, Mr. Stonehouse said that forty years ago the population of the country was divided up sixty and forty in favour of the country, and today forty per cent. of the people live in the country and the rest in the cities. The only possible way to retain the boys on the farm and induce others to take up the work is to make conditions more conducive and congenial.

A Successful Farmer.

Many city people yearn for a chance to farm. The most of them who start out last about two years. As a general thing a successful farmer must have a lifetime of experience behind him.

Taking up the question of the Toronto Milk Producers' organization, the speaker enumerated a number of the difficulties that marked its early career, and ultimately brought it to an untimely end. Finally the work was again taken up and the result is to-day the largest organization of milk producers in the province. At one time Mr. Stonehouse sold milk for eighty-five cents a hundred-weight and made about as much money as he does to-day with the higher price. "The difficulty of organizing the farmers is that farmers are not business men," said the speaker.

Cost of Milk.

Mr. Stonehouse said he would not attempt to estimate the cost of producing milk. The conditions under which milk is produced are too wide. Every farmer must find out for himself. One thing is certain and that is milk is the cheapest food produced to-day.

In organizing the farmers, the speaker said that one difficulty would be that a few would come into the organization and the rest would ride on the tail of the waggon and enjoy the benefits.

While there was a limit to the price that could be asked for milk there is no limit to the cost of production. This is governed by the ability of the producer. To ask too high a price for the product would be to invite destruction.

An Investigation.

Mr. Stonehouse intimated that as a result of the recent increase in the Toronto price for milk the whole question of milk production and cost, together with selling prices to the consumer, would probably be taken up and investigated by proper authorities constituted under government authority for the purpose of attempting to arrive at a fair basis of cost to all parties.

The speaker warned the farmers to steer clear of party politics in any organization they might form. "It is an old rock upon which many a farmers' organization has been wrecked," said Mr. Stonehouse. To confine and restrict the intelligence of an organization to party allegiance is ruinous," the speaker added. In conclusion Mr. Stonehouse said he did not approve of a farmers' party, but he did approve of a well defined farmers' policy with proper representation in the legislative halls of the country.

Money in the Bank.

At the conclusion of the address Mr. Joseph O'Reilly said he had estimated the cost of producing milk at one dollar and eighty-five cents a gallon. This did not include labour and other overhead expenses. This amount represents the actual cost of feeding a cow.

Mr. Samuel Armstrong, who resides near Indian River, said he was not satisfied with the price of cheese as fixed by the cheese commission, which this season was twenty-three cents. Mr. Armstrong said he was not inclined to be pessimistic and he was convinced that the majority of dairymen were putting money in the bank. He said the Toronto Association had been a benefit to the producers around Indian River. Mr. Armstrong estimated that the farmers around Indian River had benefited to the extent of two thousand dollars in one season alone, as a result of the higher competitive price established in the Toronto market by the Milk Producers' Association.

"Grass is the cheapest food we can produce, and it is just as cheap in 1918 as it was before the war. The rain which the Almighty sends to make the grass grow is just as cheap as it ever was," observed Mr. Armstrong, who intimated that he was pretty well satisfied with the prevailing prices for dairy products, although he was inclined to the opinion that the price of cheese was a little low.

"Don't expect too much from the consumer," cautioned Reeve John McIntosh of North Monaghan. "Do only what is reasonable. It pays in the end and you win the confidence of the people."

Mr. G. A. Gillespie.

Mr. G. A. Gillespie, who is one of the largest milk distributors in Peterborough, welcomed the prospect of an organization. Mr. Gillespie related a number of difficulties incident to the dairying industry, and also urged the farmers to adopt business methods in connection with the operation of their all-important business of farming.

When it came to a question of forming an organization the meeting showed signs of disingregation. Farmers who get up at five o'clock in the morning are not partial to meetings that run over eleven o'clock. The election of Mr. Joseph O'Reilly as president of the new organization pro tem, and Mr. Noble Kelly of Bridgenorth, as secretary, under similar conditions, was secured before the meeting finally broke up. A two-dollar fee will be levied for membership in the association.

Council Meeting to Consider Purchase of Street Railway

Mayor Duncan intends to call a special meeting of the Council in the near future for the purpose of discussing the Hydro-Electric Commission's proposal that the city purchase the street railway and gas plant. At that meeting the petition from citizens asking for the extension of the car lines in the south and west ends will also be considered.

That the Hydro-Electric Commission had been quietly pursuing their plans for power development in this district was evident, the Mayor said, from the fact that the money needed for the proposed new dam at Campbellford had been authorized by order-in-council about a month ago. This action evidently followed the first representations from the Council that Peterborough's supply of power was approaching a shortage. It is more than likely that the Council will decide to ask the Commission its price for the two utilities, which, it is suggested the city may take over now if they are desired.

AMERICAN LABOUR DECLINES PART IN CONFERENCE

Statement by Samuel Gompers, Who is Now In London.

Special to the Examiner:

LONDON, Sept. 11. — American labour will refuse to participate in conferences with enemy representatives, Samuel Gompers, president of the American Federation of Labour, declared in an interview with British journalists, made public here to-day. "I don't want to appear dogmatic," said Gompers, "but of this fact you may rest assured: there will be no recession from the position the Federation of Labour has taken in this war. This means that the Federation will refuse to participate in conferences with enemy representatives. The men and women of America are not vindictive, they want nothing but the right of democracies to live their own lives without being menaced by militarism or autocracy. And that includes the autocracy of Germany."

A Conference.

Representatives of all Labour and Socialist organizations of the Allied countries have been requested to meet in London next week in conference, called by Samuel Gompers. Our first business, says Mr. Gompers, "is to win the war and then negotiate. But imperialism and autocracy must be crushed before all things. No sacrifice is too great to achieve that end."

Business Will be Closed Up

Peterboro Home Re-Union Association Closes Successful Career.

A meeting of the Peterborugh Home Re-Union Association was held in Mr. G. N. Gordon's Office, on Saturday evening, to consider outstanding accounts, and make provision for closing up the business without delay.

This Association has done a large amount of good in assisting families to Peterboro where husbands were already located, who not only maintained themselves here, but also made provision for their families left behind, by sending weekly remittances to them. The Home Re-Union in assisting to re-unite these have brought to the city many estimable citizens, besides bringing joy and happiness to the families thus re-united.

The work of the Association has been carried on successfully through G. N. Gordon, Chairman, J. J. Turner, jr., Secretary, Walter Stocker, J. John, T. Pitchford, S. Jay and Mr. Guy, as members of the Executive.

At the present time the Association has on hand a balance of $100.00, and decided to discharge outstanding obligations, such as remuneration to various Office assistants, postage, and after these obligations have ben discharged a substantial balance of $66.00 will be given to the Navy League Campaign.

POLICE COURT FOR HOUSEHOLDERS WHO WILL NOT DRAIN GARBAGE

Employees at the Incinerator Report Endless Trouble Trying to Keep the Fires Burning—W. H. Buller is New Chairman of the Board of Health.

ONE CASE OF SCARLET FEVER

Mr. W. H. Buller was elected chairman of the Board of Health last night. The meeting was reminiscent of his mayoralty years as he assumed the familiar position at the head of the long table in the committee room at the City Hall, with Mayor Duncan on one side and ex-Ald. Harry Morgan on the other, and before they departed they were swapping recollections of the nights when they battled around the Council dugouts without the sign of a casualty or a strain on their friendship.

Mayor Buller welcomed the two new members appointed a short time ago to succeed Alderman Langford and Alderman Saunders, who were forced out by that little amendment to the Municipal Act.

One Case During Month.

The August report from the Isolation Hospital showed that only one patient, a scarlet fever case, had been admitted during the month. There were six other patients on the first of August, but they had been discharged during the month. The new practice of collecting accounts before the inmates have been cured is proving very satisfactory, it was stated.

"Hogging" Pig Production.

Dr. Amys reported that some of the citizens who received permission to keep pigs have abused this relaxation of the city's by-law. Some of them are keeping from four to six pigs, and one case was cited to the effect that a citizen had fattened three pigs and immediately sold them to the Matthews-Blackwell Company. Then three more were bought and the process began all over again. Behind this plan was the purpose of raising money to help pay off a debt on the householder's property. Dr. Amys pointed out that the permission was granted the citizens in order that their desire to raise pork for their own needs might be met. The wholesale methods of production that have been discovered simply create a nuisance, and it is the intention of the Board to limit the number of pigs to a maximum of two in every case, otherwise the present exemption from the by-law will be cancelled. Mr. Buller reminded Dr. Amys that he had full authority in this matter.

Recommend Sewer.

Mayor Duncan explained the recent request to the Board of Works for a sewer connection to Mount St. Joseph The Board recommended that it be built as a sanitary improvement. Dr. Amys felt that the interests of property holders on McDonnel street from Cambridge street to the Boundary should be considered, but Mayor Duncan remarked that the Council would look after the details of the arrangements.

Use More Wood.

A special committee composed of Mr. Morgan and Dr. Amys reported that they had appointed Mr. R. Hunt as caretaker of the Queen Mary Isolation Hospital at $50 a month beginning on September 1st. The appointment was approved by the Board.

Accounts Passed.

The following accounts were passed:

Mrs. R. Hosken	8 4.25
G. R. Record	2.00
G. A. Pringle	17.82
Jas. Juby	9.40
W. Brown	7.95
J. W. Edwards	10.11
R. Hunt	34.90
I. T. Braund	25.92
J. Steinberg	2.28

Disregard Garbage Rules.

Mayor Duncan reported that complaints have been made by the men at the incinerator that householders are not conforming to the garbage regulations. Household refuse is dumped into the cans without being strained, and as a result the fires are almost extinguished. Wood has to be purchased to consume this material and to offset the wet stuff. Earth from lawns and gardens, green vegetable stocks and similar material that is incombustible contribute to the troubles of the attendants at the city's fires.

If this careless practice is not discontinued, the Inspector will make an example of some of the offenders by hailing them before Magistrate Dumble. Dr. Amys said that some housekeepers avoid dirtying their sinks by leaving the straining of their garbage to the incinerator's grates. In this matter the patience of the city's Sanitary officials has reached the limit. Several appeals have been made through the press with only a slight improvement. The next notice will be the blue paper from the police.

Regular Monthly Meeting of the Children's Aid Society

Joint Accounts Will be Opened Up on Behalf of Children—List of Accounts Passed.

GENERAL BUSINESS

Saturday, October 12th, was chosen by the Children's Aid Society as Tag Day, at the regular monthly meeting held yesterday afternoon.

Mrs. Joseph Knox had previously volunteered to look after the work of Tag Day, and in view of her efficient management last year, her offer was accepted.

NO CHILDREN FOR ADOPTION.

At present there are no children in the home for adoption, due, Mr. Powel stated, to the cooperation of the Farm and Dairy, which had boomed the little ones through their paper. There are however five resident children who pay their board, and one girl who was picked up on the street, and at present works for her board at the home.

JOINT ACCOUNT.

After considerable discussion on the trust accounts of the children, wards of the Society, which though very small at present, may mount up, it was decided that these particular accounts should be put in the Union Bank, in their names jointly with Mr. Powell and the president's names. All cheques drawn must then bear the signatures of the agent and president. This was done to save trouble in case of the agent's death.

ENDOWMENTS GROWING.

Mr. Peck stated that while the interest on the endowments is exceedingly small it is hoped that in time the Society may become self-supporting, as more money will probably be left to its funds.

Mr. Pennyfather, who was appointed auditor early in the year, will with Mr. H. B. Cowan, who was appointed yesterday as associate auditor, audit the books of the Society before the annual meeting.

BOARD ACCOUNT.

Mr. Edgar asked Mr. Powell to prepare an account of the board money received from the wards who pay at the home. This will be done.

RESIGNED FROM BOARD.

A letter was received from Commandant and Mrs. McElhiney, resigning from the Board of the Society, and expressing their regret at leaving and the pleasure they had experienced while with the Society.

The Secretary was asked to write to them, expressing the Board's regret at their leaving and appreciation for their services.

CANNOT ACT.

Mr. Powell drew the Society's attention to a number of matters needing immediate attention, amongst others the case of a 5 months old child which had been given up by the mother into the care of people apparently capable of taking care of it, but said by others to be incompetent.

The Society decided however that they cannot take action in making the child a ward unless neglect is proved. The woman's husband, who has been overseas for a number of years refuses to have the child in his home.

A SPECIAL CASE.

Provision was made for the care of some small children, whose mother is very ill, by which they become a special case to be taken into the home for a short time. In a discussion of this case a definite rate of board was fixed at $2.50 a week to cover all cases.

MORE WARDS.

A number of destitute and neglected children have been reported to the Agent and will probably be taken into the Home presently.

MEMBERS PRESENT.

The meeting was attended by Mr E. A. Peck, in the chair; Rev. C. J Phelan, Mr. C. H. Pennyfather, Ald J. Edgar, Mr. H. B. Cowan, Mr. J. Wearing, Mrs. Evans and Mrs. Gibbs.

TRAINED NURSE ENDORSES TANLAC

Graduate of Dominion School Tells of Wonderful Results She Obtained.

"I have found out the value of Tanlac by trying it myself and I would advise anyone suffering from stomach trouble and a rundown condition to take it," said Mrs. Minnie Edmonson, residing at 79 MacKay Avenue, Toronto recently. Mrs. Edmonson, who is a graduate of the Dominion School of Nursing, has been a trained nurse for the past twelve years and, her statement, coming as it does, from one of so much experience in relieving suffering, will be of wide interest.

"For sometime," she continued, "my appetite had been poor and I suffered from nervous indigestion. I suffered constantly from a heaviness and pain in the pit of my stomach, together with a gaseous condition, that kept me feeling miserable and sadly nearly all the time. What little I did eat seemed to give me no nourishment, so I felt tired and didn't seem to have much life and strength. My nerves were rather bad and I was unable to rest well at night. My case had not reached a serious stage, but I knew if neglected it might develop into chronic indigestion.

"So I decided to try Tanlac, as I had read so much about it, and now I can't recommend it too highly. I have now taken two bottles and all the pain and distress has left my stomach. My appetite is fine my food seems to assimilate properly and I can eat what I want without suffering in the least from indigestion. The gas has stopped forming and all that disagreeable feeling after eating is gone, and my nerves have improved until I sleep splendidly. After Tanlac helped me so much I told my sister about it, who also took it for stomach trouble, with fine results. I have never made a statement about a medicine before but I certainly do think Tanlac is fine and gladly tell others about it."

Tanlac is sold in Peterborough by W. B. Warne Drug Co. Ltd., in Havelock by A.C. Denike, in Lakefield by Tanner Drug Co. Ltd., in Fowlers Corners by W. A. Hunter, in Gelbert by A. J. Scott, in Westwood by G. Pringle & Son.

Lieut. L. Stuart Met a Number of Peterboro Boys

Anticipates a Reunion in London—A Trip to See Major Bishop.

The following is taken from a recent letter received from Lieut. Lloyd (Hod) Stuart, Canadian Machine Gun Corps, Seaford, Sussex, England.

"It is some time since I have written you, but I have not received any Canadian mail for a long time and have been hoping to get a letter every day. You will be interested to know that I have moved again and this time have forsaken the infantry, I hope for good. I am in the Machine Gun Corps and am a "bally" mounted officer. The depot for England is at this camp and a fine camp it is too, right on the sea just six miles from Eastbourne and twelve from Brighton. These are two fine seaside resorts, the latter place being known as London-by-the-Sea. At the present time they are just full of people on holidays.

"They are a very decent bunch here and we are given all kinds of privileges, having practically every week-end off, so that we can go about. I have been in London three times during the past month and just returned Wednesday from nine days there. As usual I met hosts of Peterborough people—Capt. E. R. Hughes, Lorne Cann, and saw quite a bit of Walter Worth, who is there all the time. I saw a number of good shows, "Going Up" at the Gaiety and "The Lilac Domino" at the Empire—both of these for the second time—"Soldier Boy," "Tabs" and "The Man from Toronto." I only had on uniform once, and that was Sunday when I managed to get into a special service to the Women's Army, or the "W.A.A.C.'s" as they are called over here. It was in a fine old church, right by Trafalgar Square, and it was really wonderful to see the church filled with girls in khaki. I tell you, it set me thinking. The Horse Guards Band was there and outside those taking part in the service, I don't think there were half a dozen males there.

"Friday morning I took a party of mechanics up to headquarters to be interviewed by Major Bishop, the famous airman. It seems that they are forming a Canadian Air Squadron in the Royal Air Force and so want Canadian mechanics. I was quite surprised at him, for he doesn't look like a man who has brought down seventy-four Hun planes. He is very small, delicate-looking and speaks with a very meek voice. He doesn't wear all his decorations, although he has a good breast-full of ribbons at that.

In Hospital.

"Just before I left Witley, I was in Bramshott hospital with a sore ear for a few days, although they told me I should never have been sent at all. The day after I went I was over to Aldershot with Captain Carson, and he was complaining of feeling ill. I said jokingly that he might be over in the Ward with me before long. That night the nurse spoke about a bad case of appendicitis due to come from the operating room. The next morning I was walking past the patient's bed and saw that it was Carson. He was in a critical condition, but before I left was out of danger.

"I am meeting chaps from home here practically every day. The sixth reserve is right across the road from my quarters and that is where the people from Peterborough are. I go over to their mess quite often and have been the guest of Captain Widdifield and Lieut. Gordon Hall several nights at dinner. Shortly after I came up here I met Bob Langford. I hardly knew him, he looked so bronzed and fat. I also saw Barney Quinn. We had lunch together on Sunday and fell in with two American medical officers. He went off with them, but I excused myself, so I didn't see much of him. He is stationed near Bournemouth at a Tank camp. When he came over for a while he was only six miles from Witley.

A Reunion.

"Through Bob Langford I heard that Fraser Skinner had left for overseas. We immediately went over to the Segregation Camp, about a mile away to find him, which we did without any trouble, and I was surely glad to see him. Segregation camp is not very pleasant at any time, and I imagine Fraser was a bit down-hearted, for he was again segregated having been sleeping in a tent where there was a case of measles, mumps or something. He isn't even allowed to go to the canteen. Until to-day I have been over to see him once or twice and was able to get him some things he wanted. He is looking well, says the food is good and even remarked that he was going to eat army bread after the war. Fraser saw "Cham" Nicholls at Fresham Pond. We are hoping to have a reunion in London and I expect it will be "some" reunion.

"I have had several letters from Claire lately. He has been at Clearing Station with influenza, but by his last letter he expected to return to the battery in a day or two, so he would likely be back for this very big show that the Canadians have been in. They must have been in fine fettle, not having done anything big since Passchendaele last November. There will likely be heavy casualties though, and that is not pleasant to think of.

"Well, I guess this will be all for this time. Best regards to all, and write me soon and give me all the news. So long for this time,

As ever,

"HOD."

Advanced Rates of Exchange is Felt Even by the Anglican Missions.

The advanced rates of exchange in silver and gold, in China and other foreign countries, is a problem with which the various missionary societies have had to contend. The General Synod of the Anglican Missionary Societies of Canada have gone into the matter fully, and find out that an additional $10,000 to the missionary fund will be required. It is said that the missionaries in China cannot carry on the gospel work without increased support, and that an endeavor to do so on the same scale as formerly would necessitate them getting into debt. As this position would be untenable, a strong appeal for increased offerings for mission work will be made from the Anglican pulpits throughout Canada.

Riversides Easily Blank Oshawa in First O.A.B.A. Semi-Final

Manager Solomon's Outfit Win by 8 to 0—Kirn's Twirling Was a Complete Mystery to the Visitors, Whose Hitting Record Consisted of Only Four Safe Ones.

LOCALS HIT HARD

Manager Jake Solomon's champion Riversides right valiantly upheld the reputation of the Peterboro City League last evening at Riverside Park when they handed an 8 to 0 trimming to the Chevrolet team, winners of the Oshawa City League in the first game of the semi-finals in the O. A. B. A. A. for the Toronto News Cup. The second game will be played at Oshawa Saturday and the winner of the series will clash with the Toronto Grays champions.

The Peterboro aggregation had an easy time last evening. Kirn, twirling with a world of speed and perfect control stood the Oshawa tinsmiths on their heads all the way and they were dangerous only once or twice. Four hits were all they could annex off Kirn's delivery, two of these coming in the ninth and with the Riversides fielding in snappy style behind their big twirler the visitors were helpless as far as scoring was concerned.

On the other hand the Riversides took kindly to the offerings of Brisbois, the little lame pitcher of the Chevrolets, who seemed to have nothing but a small and an everlasting supply of good humour. The merry rattle of basehits punctuated every innings, the third being an especially stormy session for the visiting twirler, the Riversides pitching five hits in this session, three doubles coming in a row.

There was some fast fielding stunts, Kirn himself making several fine plays on hand hit drives to the box.

A big crowd of fans saw the contest in spite of the unusual hour of starting the game and the good work of fthe home team was appreciated.

The double umpire system was in vogue, Alex. Kay of Peterboro, giving the decisions on ball and strikes while Mr. Farr of Oshawa who is a member of the O. A. B. A. A. handled the bases.

First Innings

Blanchard to Penfound sent Sheehy to third and he dashed home on Guerin's ringing single to centre. Guerin stole second but Flanagan threw Kirn out at first. One run, one hit, no errors.

Second Innings.

Oshawa—Barker died on a roller to Cherrett. Gray was safe on Sheehy's fumble and stole second Penfound fanned and Kirn knocked down Hill's roller and nailed the runner at first. No runs, no hits, one error.

Third Innings.

Oshawa—Flanagan grounded to Kirn, Brisbois fanned. Brockman singled through short but Murray into wut Blanchard. No runs, one hit no errors.

Peterboro—Field was safe when McGrath dropped his liner to left Sheehy sacrificed neatly and was thrown out by Brisbois. McCarney's fly back of third base gave the latter two sacks but Field thought the ball was going to be caught and only reached third. The squeeze play failed when Cherrett missed the ball in an attempt to bunt and Gray's quick throw nailed Field scrambling back to third. Cherrett then came through with a lightning double down the right field foul line, scoring McCarney. Guerin doubled to right centre scoring Cherrett. Phelan's single to right scored Guerin. Phelan took second on the throw to the plate and when Gray threw badly to the middle cushion went on to third. Kirn bounced a hit off Flanagan's grove to score Phelan. Blanchard missed Murray's liner ti secand but on nd Murray's liner to second but Murty ended the innings with a fly to Barker. Four runs, five hits, three errors.

Peterboro —Field grounded as Flanagan. McGrath went to the foul line for Sheehy's fly to left. McCarney singled past Penfound but was out, called out for leaving the base line in attempt to steal second. No runs, one hit, no errors.

Seventh Innings.

Oshawa—The visitors were relined on four pitched balls in this innings. Gay lofted to McCarney. Murray grabbed Penfound's fly and Hills drooping liner found Cherrett's glove waiting for it. No runs, hits or errors

Peterboro—Gay threw Cherrett out on a roller in front of the plate Guerin went to second on Flanagan's fumble and poor throw. Phelan singled to right, scoring Guerin and stole second. Kirn fanned but Murray's solid smash, his third hit of the game sent Phelan home. Murty popped to Blanchard. Two runs, two hits, one error.

Eight Innings.

Oshawa—Murty made a pretty catch of Flanagan's fly to left. Cherrett threw Brishor"s out at first and Kirn broched Brockman's drive and got the batter at first. No runs, hits or errors.

Peterboro—Field lifted an easy one to Blanchard. Sheehy fanned. McCarney beat out a roller to McGrath who had taken Penfound's place at first. McCarney stole second. Cherrett smashed a single past McGrath sending McCarney home. Guerin was out on a epculair play. A wild pitch from Brisbois's struck his bat while it was still on his shoulder. Guerin fell in attempting to dodge and the ball rolled out to Brisbois who nailed the batter at first. One run, two hits, no error.

Ninth Innings.

Oshawa—The visitors had their best chance of scoring in the innings. Blanchard pened with a double over Field's head. McGrath tapped a roller into the diamond and Cherrett threw Blanchard out at third. It was a pretty play at both ends Murray handling the throw nicely. Barker die don a tap to Kirn, McGrath going to second. Gay dropped a Texas leaguer into short centre sending McGrath t third but Hawley then went to left field when McGrath shifted to first, died on strikes and the game was over. No runs, two hits no errors.

IMPPESSIONS FROM FRANCE

(By CANADIAN OVERSEAS.)

1—The Hill—

Behind stretch the green hills and the fields of La belle France; the heart of the peasant life.

The blue and red of the corn flowers and poppies mingle with the green and ever cast a colour over the fields and over the hills that far away roll into the clear blue sky.

On some hillsides the strawberry-red clover is being cut and many figures are moving about. They are the old grandfather and his womenfolk. It is left to them to till the land for which their husbands, brothers and sons are fighting. This land they love like their own kind and well it repays their care.

Here and there the blue and red of their garments flash across the fields as the breeze blows them in the sunlight. Now and then a French melody is wafted to the hill top as they toil on. How cherry they seem! No care, no sorrows, all contentment working for the land they 'ove.

That is the secret—La belle France—that is their life, their soul. It is for that they sing and work—for that they endure sorrows and toil so hard with a song on their lips.

The thorn pierces into their hearts. They mourn for the dear ones they have given and for the sorrows of their beloved country but from these same hearts a song comes forth for to them is given the task to work for their heritage, and like their menfolk to die for it if need be.

And so the blue and red of their garments give colour to the green fields of France as they toil and sing and love though sorrow lies deep in the heart.

2—The Valley—

Down in the valley towards the sea are the great humming hospitals—hut upon hut, tent upon tent—in long regular rows.

It is another bit of Britain in this foreign land.

The blue of the hospital uniforms mingle with the brown of the huts, the green of the grass and the many coloured flowers.

Along the roads the grey ambulances go back and forth, and out beyond, the sea glistens in the sun and its song is in tune with the waves that rise and the waves that fall.

In these hospitals life is peculiar. The past seems a myth. This is merely one other stage in a life of detachment, each stage complete and unique in itself. Each stage in this new life has a companionship of its own and in the hospital as in the trenches it is very vivid . . . but behond and behind all is misty.

When the men first come to the hospitals a mental drowsiness dulls their emotions and their thoughts, they change from men to children content to be looked after and amused, with never a thought for the future. Later this mental lethargy slowly drops off, emotion begins to move and the mental soul aches.

They begin to realize as they mingle with visitors and friends that what they have been through and what is still moving in them isolates them. It has been a slow realization and never very clear; they brood and brood over it. Each man has a disturbed soul which is wrapt in darkness and bewilderment—almost despair.

In each something is shaken, things do not fit and they do not understand. They try to feel that it doesn't matter after all—in the end it will be all right. They try to overcome this new sensation and fling themselves back into the old groves and into puzzlings that are not so deep. It is an attempt which does not succeed, and they keep on feleing their way trying to fathom it with hope and despair reigning in turn.

They have a half cynical pity towards the world. It is a pity which sees delusion in this life—sees life of little account — a detached, painful pity without warmth—the result of passing through death and living with death on all sides; the result of new knowledge in their souls—the knowledge of faces they have seen which are no more faces—of the beauty of young life, of its complete departure and the shortness of memory.

When a man dies in the ward stoicism returns. They say "We are forgetting what we learnt and are beginning to believe in the importance of this life, that it is all and everything; the trivialities of the days are dragging us back into delusion. Here is death again—we must not go back into the world on the old terms."

It is a refusal to let the soul be dragged back among the trivial desires and anxieties of life—a refusal whose original impetus dies and leaves something sullen and morose in the man's soul. It is the struggle of the new nature—a nature which cannot be shared nor often seen except among the comradeship of the trenches and the hospital.

They look out from the hilltop and see the peasants toiling in the fields—they look beyond at the life they left and they wonder. Over the fields and hills the rays of the sun are slanting, the fishing boats come in from the sea and are silhouetted against a crimson yellow sky and become purple on a water of mauve.

From the hospital siding the ambiances are slowly moving.

The evening meal is over and the "up patients" are thronging along the hospital roads to see if they can recognize a friend.

They look on calmly and their philosophy expects much of sufferers.

The sunset glow spreads over the sky in soft tints and twilight creeps over the land; the grey veil of the half-light deepens, the colour dies. Only outlines become visible, lights appear here and there and from a corner of the valley the sounds of music rise. Out on the hills the glow has spread and dimmed, the colours have gone from the fields and life is at rest and a little lonely wind creeps from tree to tree.

Out here the hill is haunted—the blow comes from the grass and travels through the soles of the feet, indoors the windows rattle — a soft sharp blow—every thud brings the thought that in the darkness men are awake and when it stops then will the attack begin. . . .

3—On the Outside—

Thoughts turn from the hill and the valley to life outside. In the valley a tie exists which becomes a legend in the outside world with little enduring except a half invented friendliness.

The discharged men look shabby in the dark civilian clothes; no longer do they cut the fine figures in khaki or the picturesque ones in the hospital blue; there is no scarlet tie—only the stripped and checked creations of a heartless brain.

The red shiny faces have disappeared, the much hated hospital meals of boiled beef and milk pudings have been superceded by the delicious meals with pickles and dainties. They have thrown off discipline and routine and joined the happy life. Once again they think, they work, they plan. They are anxious—they have acquired new thoughts, new knowledge, new experience, lost many old ambitions.

They are lonely for now they belong neither to the soldier nor the civilian.

They watch the khaki men with their brown gleaming faces; they watch them work, they watch them drill—no more of that for us they think, and they are glad of it.

But they are lonely. Everywhere these men are lonely. In the shop, in the factory, in the fields, in the office. In their own homes they are lonely.

Unfortunately woman busy at home hears only the bad parts of war and tires of hearing them, she is shut out from knowing the part that is good. Too busy to crawl down the winding paths after the man she cares for—to discover and share his strange depressions, irritations, silence, loneliness. Finally she ceases to know where Arras is because her husband isn't there any longer.

"I've got 'im home. I don't go in for all them maps no more." That is love, the voice of love!

This man has had his friends, has seen and known fraternity. With them he shared fear and horror though he wanted to get away before his body was blown to bits. Still, now that he is away he finds he is without them — watching them on maps and paper, a stranger to his family, becoming a stranger to his friends—alone.

An intercourse of envy goes on between the hospital inmates and the discharged men.

When he leaves the hospital the wounded think—going away out there—going to his own people—his home—free from all restraint, a man again. . . .

The veteran thinks . . . yes, all that . . . and I am glad but how they all talk together up there in the ward. The veteran sees them in the wards lulled and disarmed for the world by the days of care . . . free routine. He thinks when he sees them . . . what a wretched cramping life . . . endless montony and pain. It is a dark life and discharge brings freedom. But fre life is difficult and bound life is easy.

Was life before the war as good as he thought? It seemed all right then. Was friendship before real? He remembered his friends, they seemed all right, but now they did not satisfy him. Has he grown or has life shrunk?

Men poured from the battlefield into the hospital are like molten metal, they cool quickly into strange shapes. In the army something has been born . . . in the hospital it has been made solid.

So the new civilian is a stranger and whatever war does it separates the past from the future, the combatant from the non-combatant. They do not see alike, nor think alike, for they have not lived alike.

Down below in the valley there is the sound of running water . . . on and on and on. But there is no stream only the black oil-stained roads and an endless tramp of men and horses. As they move past the hospital the wounded wave to them and they return the greeting each envying the other.

They leave a soft white haze of rust as they tramp along the road. Over beyond the sand dunes the sea is sparkling diamonds in the sun, in the wards there is a mumble and a grumble, laughter and a groan, and out over the green fields and hills the blue and red garments of the peasants flutter in the breeze as they toil and sing and love. While out here from the ground the blow travels through the soles of the feet; indoors the windows rattle.

Therefore the Food Board asks you to be reasonable. The situation will be relieved in a few days, but nobody must look for an unlimited quantity.

ON OPENING DAYS WE WILL SELL SUGAR during the hours of 8 to 10 a.m., and 2 to 4 p.m., with a limit to each customer of four pounds. Further we are requested as a protective measure, to sell no sugar to children.

Lessons Taken From the Skies

Suggestions Growing Out of the Recent Flareup in Aquila.

What of the new star which blazed out the other day in the constellation Aquila? The astronomers are yet far from clearing up the mystery of it, and the man the street may be pardoned for having raised questions regarding the luminary which should not be asked. Was the "nova" a "sign in the heavens," some kind of a portent or warning? The nearest approach to such an interpretation came when British experts were asked whether the new sun was moving this way, and if there was any likelihood of it getting in to a head-on collision with the earth. These moments of alarm have now passed and the star, though diminished in brilliance from the first to fourth magnitude, is still shining — at a safe distance.

In the interim, and without any unriddling of the puzzle, we have come to realize that the celestial visitor is "new" only in a Pickwickian sense. It had been seen before; at least thirty years ago Harvard photographs of the constellation showed this particular star in exactly the same place which it occupies to-day. It was then a very faint object, even for the camera, and remained such in successive pictures until early in June last, when it took a turn for the brighter, and qualified as an astronomical sensation. Whether the star "exploded," got a tremendous jolt from a "dark sun," or simply plowed its way through a nebula, nobody knows. It is easy to trace a fire to spontaneous combustion when the flames arise in the next street; it is much more difficult to decide between rival theories when your conflagration is anywhere between 6,000,000,000,000 and 6,000,000,000,000,000 miles away.

The distance was deceptive, to say the least, and our happy-go-lucky method of thinking that everything we can observe is happening in the "now" led us to suppose that we were contemporaries of the "flareup." Light does travel at inconceivable speed—at the rate of 186,000 miles a second; and we get news of events in the sun in about eight minutes. But many of the stars are so bewilderingly remote that this particular outburst must have taken place not a week nor a month before it was seen, but hundreds, perhaps thousands, of years ago. In studying the constellations that have become so familiar and dear to us we are studying not what is, but the things that once were—the vast antiquity which makes up so much of the bulk of our universe.

Tremendous changes, of which only our far-off successors can know anything, may even now be in progress in the skies. And if there be sentient beings far afield who scan our habitation with instruments immeasurably superior to ours, they also are antiquarians in regard to us. In one world, according to distance, the observer might be witnessing the battle of Waterloo, in another the founding of Rome, in a third the fall of Troy in a fourth scenes from ancien Egypt, and its dynasties; deeper stil in space we imagine some celestia inquirer to whom has just come the vision of earliest man at last on hi feet and disputing with the cave bea for a place in which to lay his head It is an impressive thought that there are star systems so remote that even the swift messenger of light could not reach them with the story of our war until long after this planet had ceased from its nurture of life and had been teased out into the cosmic dust from which new world's incessantly come forth.

ANTIQUITY OF SEAL RINGS.

They Are Mentioned In the Bible and Their Origin Is Unknown.

The origin of seals is lost in the shades of antiquity. In Assyrian and Babylonian ruins seals are still found, and it is certain that their use passed from those countries to Greece and Rome, to all European countries and from England to America. Originally they were set in rings.

The earliest references to them in Biblical history is found in Genesis xxxviii, where it is recorded that, pending certain negotiations between Judah and Tamar, the widow of his son, Tamar demanded a pledge and Judah gave her his signet and other belongings. And when Ahab, king of Israel, tried to buy Naboth's vineyard and couldn't his wife Jezebel "wrote letters in Ahab's name and sealed them with his seal."

In the book of Esther, chapter viii, it is written that King Ahasuerus said to Esther and Mordecai, "Write ye also for the Jews, as it liketh you, in the king's name and seal it with the king's ring, for the writing which is written in the king's name and sealed with his ring may no man reverse."

Seals doubtless were used long before the stirring events described in the quoted chapter of Genesis, but no one took the trouble to write about them. From the time of Jeremiah to William the Conqueror the pen was practically unknown to king, noble or peasant, so the seal was absolutely necessary.—Kansas City Star.

BAND PICTURE HAD LARGE SALE

The war has had a material effect upon photography, but no branch has been more boomed than group picture, with the sudden partings and happy reunions of those who will probably never be together again. Groups have been particularly popular during the past four years. A striking example of this is the photo, taken by Mr. F. D. Lee, who recently succeeded Mr. Moule, of the new War Veterans' Band on August 25, and which appeared in The Examiner recently. This remarkably clear photo had an unusually heavy sale and scores were supplied with a copy.

THE HEAVY RAINS HAVE DELAYED THE FIELD WORK

Land Has Been Put in Fine Condition for Fall Plowing—New Lease of Life for Fall Crops—Cattle Are in Good Demand.

BEAN HARVESTING HAS BEGUN

The following is a summary of reports made by agricultural representatives to the Ontario Department of Agriculture:

The frequent heavy rains of the last week or ten days have more or less delayed field work, but the well soaked land, so long hardened by dry weather, has been put in fine condition for fall plowing, while pastures and late crops have been given a new lease of life.

The grain crops generally have been cleared off in a most satisfactory way, although here and there portions of a few fields remain out owing to the wet.

Meadows were never more in need of rain. Some of the new seeding had died out from the effects of the long drouth. Huron reports a good promise of clover seed.

Potatoes will not be up to the yield expected early in the season, but are on the whole clean and presentable.

Roots, especially sugar beets and turnips, are reviving wonderfully, as the rain has gone well into the soil.

Bean harvesting has begun, and promises a fair yield, although the recent heavy rains may affect the colour.

Some corn has been knocked down by the recent wet and windy weather. This crop has had considerable late growth, and the stalks are rather green and sappy, and some anxiety is being expressed as to whether there will be sufficient maturity by the time frost comes.

Essex reports some tobacco cut, with tonnage light and prices high.

In Norfolk several carloads of fall and early winter apples already have been shipped to the West.

A good deal of plowing is being done or is being arranged for. Some fall wheat has been sown, and now that the rains have put the land in good shape for plowing, a wide acreage should be got in. Lambton particularly reports that farmers there are making every effort to plant as much fall wheat as they can.

Brant states that considerable winter rye will be sown in that county.

Threshing is proceeding vigorously, and in many cases field estimates are being exceeded. In the township of Sombra, in Lambton Co., several cases are reported of oats yielding 100 bushels an acre. On several 100-acre farms in the same township, some are threshing from 2,300 to 2,500 bushels of grain.

Cattle and other grazing animals are picking up in condition, with the much improved pastures. Veal calves in Brant bring from 14c to 16c a lb. The prospects now are that all classes of live stock will go into winter quarters in good fit.

Hogs are in steady demand, and in fairly steady supply, at from $18.75 to $19.50 per cwt.

The present demand for field help is now confined mainly to experienced plowmen, who are hard to find.

ROYAL YEAST

Has been Canada's favorite yeast for over a quarter of a century. Bread baked with Royal Yeast will keep fresh and moist longer than that made with any other, so that a full week's supply can easily be made at one baking, and the last loaf will be just as good as the first.

NOYON WAS WRECKED IN A VANDAL SPIRIT

Germans Destroyed Town Hall and Calvin's House, but the Cathedral Escaped—But the Defeated Army Fled so Rapidly it Couldn't Explode the Charges.

WHOLE CITY WAS MINED

WITH THE FRENCH ARMIES, Sept. 12.—"Mines. Danger of death. Entry forbidden," ran an inscription in letters two feet high on barricades that shut the main street of Noyon as the correspondent's automobile jolted over a temporary structure which had replaced the causeway, destroyed by enormous mine crater, across the unfinished canal and halted in the square on the outskirts of the town. Another car had just arrived, and by it were standing two civilians, Senator Noel, the aged Mayor of Noyon, and his deputy, M. Jouve. In his black suit, a fit emblem of mourning for that scene of devastation, the Mayor seemed very frail as he waved his hand sadly toward the ruins.

"I am glad you have come to tell America what the barbarians have done to our city," he said. "Perhaps more than any town in France Noyon loves and admires your country, which has done so much for us, and I would remember that first of all towns in the war zone we hoisted the American flag on the Town Hall when the United States entered the war. For more than a week I have been waiting permission to enter the city, but the enemy has repeated last year's inhuman practice of scattering mines everywhere, and we cannot enter until they have been located and made harmless."

"I am expecting instructions from army headquarters at any minute," put in a captain beside him. "I think they will be favourable. A large number of contact mines already have been destroyed by section engineers, who alone have been allowed to penetrate Noyon, and they also have located many others electrically controlled. It appears that the Boche electric station for the region was at Grisolles. The unexpected swiftness of our advance caught the enemy napping, and enabled us to disconnect the mines unexploded at the switchboards so that the danger is now practically over."

A Tour of the Ruined City.

They had hardly finished speaking when a cyclist arrived with an order which contained the desired permission. I accompanied Senator Noel down the Rue de Paris leading to the central square. Despite his age and constitution enfeebled by captivity he made his way nimbly enough over the single plank that bridged a chasm torn by a mine in the main sewer that ran beneath the roadway. Devastation was as complete as the enemy could have wished. Houses on both sides were shells of crumbling walls, and the road was piled high with rubbish and heaps of stone.

"It is natural that much would be destroyed when the town was taken by assault," said the Senator, "but most of this is pure wantonness. The enemy has shelled the town day and night for the last eight days, and even now, when our advance has forced his guns out of France, he sent aeroplanes last night and the night before to wreak a last vengeance upon the city. Here was a girls' school, you would just know there had been a building; there was an almshouse for old men, it is in the same condition; everything must be rebuilt from the foundation."

We came to a square where used to stand the house of Calvin. That was one of Noyon's glories. A big pile of stones, in which not even a trace of a wall was distinguishable, was all that remained.

CATTLE MARKET

Union Stock Yards: Receipts yesterday 89 cars, with 1,163 cattle, 214 calves, 1,164 hogs, and 1,469 sheep and lambs.

Strong active market for all grades of cattle continues to be the rule for this week, and in the opinion of many, will so continue for many weeks, to come. While prices do not show any sharp advances, the general tone of the market is firm and the tendency higher. The demand is almost equally strong for fat butcher steers and heifers. Some of the best and most forward feeders, are in fact, being taken for killing, so urgent appears to be the demand for the butcher cattle.

Lambs are again very firm and about 50c higher.

Sheep steady.

Choice calves firm.

Hogs steady, but a little on the weak side.

Canadian packers have been advised by representatives of the British Government, that no further quantities of heavy bacon will be accepted for export. This means that hogs weighing 250 pounds are not required

"The Girl Who Had No God"

By MARY ROBERTS RINEHART
Author of "The Man in Lower Ten," "The After House," Etc.

"I have not seen her," he said, "I am always looking. Perhaps she is wise to break with us all. Still we loved her. I have never married, and she was like my own child."

He had taken a clerkship in London, he said. While, of course, he did not say so, Ward read between his words that he had done with the old life for good. He held out his hand, and the Russian took it.

"If I hear anything," Boroday said, "I'll let you know. Once or twice she wrote me; from Liverpool once, after she landed, and again from here. Then the police closed up the Dago's place, which was the only way she knew to reach me. I've never heard since."

"Then you think she may be in England?" Ward asked eagerly.

The Russian shrugged his shoulders.

"Perhaps, if she is living. She was not strong. Sometimes I wonder—"

So, after all, Ward took an extra pang away with him from the chance meeting. What if, after all, his watching and his waiting meant nothing? If she were gone beyond earthly finding? Death for him might be a beginning only, a door of eternity, but all the philosophy and hope of his faith did not fill his empty human arms. That night he walked the London streets until dawn.

He came back from Oxford at the end of his course there. Home was calling and work, blessed work, that brings forgetfulness.

On the last Sunday before he sailed he attended service in St. Paul's. He knew the church well. In his early days when philosophy had taken his young brain by storm and his faith had rocked, he had gone to St. Paul's. Something in the very solidity of the old church, in its antiquity, in the nearness of those dead-and-gone great ones of the earth, who had lived and died secure in its teachings, had steadied him.

And now, when it was his heart that failed, and not his soul, he went there.

It was there that he found Elinor. She was just in front of him, in the prim garb of an English army nurse. And it was no resemblance that roused his first interest. What he saw was only a slender girl kneeling and evidently in tears. She was very thin; he saw that, and her shoulders heaved convulsively. But as the service went on she grew quieter. When she rose from her knees at last, she was quite calm.

It was then that he knew her.

Ward watched her with an ache in his throat. She looked frail, sad. Always in his mind he had pictured her in her Summer garden, a flower herself among her flowers, or as she had looked that night in old Hilary's library, the night when, to save him, she had told him the shameful truth about herself. And now he found her here, wearing the garb of service, and on her knees!

So fearful was he of losing her that he stayed close as the congregation moved slowly out of the church. She did not intend to go; he saw that. She stepped out of the crowd and waited. He thought it probable that she was seeking what he himself had once sought—a quiet hour under a holy roof.

And so it was that they came face to face again. She put her hand to her throat, with the familiar gesture, when she saw him. For a moment, neither of them spoke. The ordinary greetings were out of place, and what was there to say?

It was Ward who spoke at last.

"It doesn't seem quite possible, Elinor," he said.

She had never been "Elinor" to him save in his thoughts. But neither of them noticed.

"I am sorry that you have found me. I have tried so hard to bury myself."

It was increasingly hard for him to speak. All the things that had lain in his heart for three years clamored for speech.

"You are—quite well again?"

"Perfectly. But you? You are thinner."

"I have worked hard and of course I have suffered. It was not easy to tear myself away from the few friends I had——"

And then at last, he broke into speech, rapid, incoherent. He blamed himself for his hardness that night in old Hilary's library, he condemned himself for a thousand things. She listened, rather bewildered, with the old wistfulness in her eyes.

"Why should you say such things?" she asked at last when he stopped from sheer panic. "You were right. I was a criminal. I have learned things since then. You were always kind to me. I have never forgotten."

"Kind!" He almost groaned.

She held out her hand. "I must go now. My time is not my own." She glanced down at her uniform. "Do you remember what you said to me once about the brotherhood of man? I have been trying to live up to that."

Ward took her hand. It was very cold.

"Do you remember that?"

"I remember almost everything you told me. Even the things, that night, while I was watching the clock. I remember them all."

The church was empty, save for a verger here and there, busy with his duties. Quite suddenly, Ward lost his composure.

"And I—I remember everything too. Your smile, your eyes that night when I was carried into the house—oh, my dear, my dear! you are written on my heart."

He bent over shaken and pale, and kissed the palm of her hand.

"It is you who are good," he said huskily. "I, who talked smugly of virtue and tenderness and pity, and who let you out of my life—I care for you more than I care for anything in this world. I want you—I want you."

Elinor's eyes turned towards the high altar with its cross. Always when she looked at it, she had seen the cross at Saint Jude's and the dawn, and sparrows drinking out of the wet gutter at her feet.

"I want you," said Ward, and waited, frightened.

But her eyes came back to him, clear and full of promise.

"I have always loved you," she said simply. "I will go with you. And your God shall be my God."

THE END.

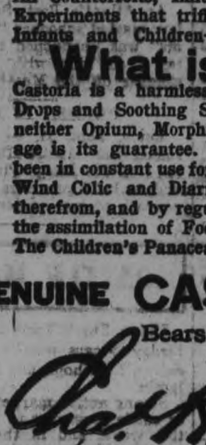
THE EXAMINER PATTERN SERVICE

LADY'S SIX GORED BOX PLAITED SKIRT.



The leading fashion authorities agree that the plaited skirt holds first place this season, and whether it is box plaited or side plaited depends on the preference of the wearer and also on the pattern of the material. As many of the smart skirts are made of broad striped or plaid material, the design must be taken into consideration when planning the style of the skirt. If very wide stripes are chosen and there is sufficient distance between, there is nothing more attractive than a well pressed box plaited skirt like No. 8875. As the model has six gores, it is possible to use contrasting materials instead of one if preferred.

The lady's six gored box plaited skirt No. 8875 is cut in six sizes—24 to 34 waist measure. Width at lower edge is 2¾ yards. All of one material the 26 inch size requires 2½ yards 54 inch material.

The Home Joker.

There's a funny man in Harlem who is everlastingly handing out jokes, conundrums and other facetiae to his wife, and she stands for them because they are an improvement on everlasting growling, as is the manner of some husbands when they are at home. Sometimes he gets the joke on her, and she doesn't like it so well, but still she submits lest worse follow. The other evening at dinner he suddenly thought of something.

"Oh, I say, Mary," he said, "have you heard the latest Broadway conundrum?"

"No, dear. What is it?" she asked, thinking to encourage him.

"I don't know myself, so I guess I'll go downtown tonight and hear it."

He went, too, but she went with him. —New York Sun.

The Bee's Stinging Apparatus.

A bee's sting, unlike that of a wasp, is always left in the wound, so the first thing to do is to remove it. Do not take it between finger and thumb, for that will cause it to open and release more of its poison. The right method is to push it out by rubbing up against it with the back of the thumb nail. To remove the pain there are many remedies, most of them homely. Here are a few: A slice of onion, ordinary laundry blue, sal volatile, honey, earth moistened with saliva. One or another of these remedies is always at hand.—Exchange.

MODERN BAYONETS.

Rigid Tests They Must Pass Before They Go Into Service.

Any soldier will tell you that nothing in his equipment wears better than his bayonet, for this few inches of steel seldom snaps or loses its shape however great the strain imposed upon it. This is because the modern bayonet has to pass through twenty-three severe tests before it is considered fit to be attached to a soldier's gun. A bayonet blade is forged from the finest steel, and the first stage of its manufacture consists of heating it until red hot, when it is placed under a hammer which deals 1,500 blows a minute. This process results in the original piece of steel being hammered out to twice its length. The bar is then heated again and rolled between two huge iron cylinders, which press it into the rough shape of a blade. Emery wheels then grind its edges until they are as sharp as a razor.

Altogether the bayonet passes through 200 processes before it is ready for the testing room.

The first test applied to the polished blade is the "striking" test. A steel arm grips the bayonet and with great force drives it against a solid piece of wood. A badly produced blade snaps like a needle, but a good piece of steel emerges from this severe test with its edges straight and unblunted.

Then comes the bending test. The point of the bayonet is firmly gripped in a vice, and it is bent and twisted into part of a circle. If it survives this ordeal the blade is placed straight up under a heavy weight attached to a lever. The steel is bent beneath the weight, and to pass this test it must lift up the mass of iron by its own elasticity.

However badly bent, a good bayonet should spring back perfectly straight, and it is tested for this quality before leaving the factory. The blade is placed on a curved block, the point being secured in a hole. The bayonet is then bent to the curvature of the block, and when released it must spring back to its original straightness to satisfy the rigid ruling of the inspector. Altogether a bayonet has to pass twenty-three tests with regard to its accuracy and strength.—London Answers.

CURIOUS FERRYBOATS.

Crossing the River at Simla Is a Comical Performance.

Perhaps the most curious ferryboat to be found in the world is at Simla. The river that flows to the northeast of Suni, the chief town of the Simla hill states, has few bridges, so, necessity being the mother of invention, a novel method has been adopted.

The skin of a buffalo is inflated with air and is placed, with the four feet upward, to float in the water. The owner then throws himself over it and the one or two passengers sit or lean on the top of him. By means of a small paddle in his right hand and the movement to and fro of his legs in the water the owner takes his passengers across.

The journey takes from three to five minutes, and the modest sum of a pice (one-half cent) is charged. It is only by repeated crossings in a day that a man can earn much, but so many natives use this means of going to and from their villages that the trade is not unremunerative.

Few things are more comical than these mussacks, whether moving in midstream or being carried back to the village at night on the owner's back. They are, of course, very light and are about two and a half yards long.

They seem to be safe, except in monsoon weather, when heavy rain has caused a rapid current, but at such a time two mussacks are often linked together, so that, being heavier, they can avoid the rocks.—London Strand Magazine.

Exhausting.

"I call your attention to a most exhausting performance over near the piano."

"What do you mean?"

"One lone man is trying to hold up his end of the conversation against three women."—Birmingham Age-Herald.

Progression.

"When I was poor and got sick I sent for a doctor."

"Well?"

"Now that I'm rich I get ill and send for a physician."—Philadelphia Ledger.

OUR DAILY SHORT STORY

At the Garden Gate

By GEORGE ELMER COBB

Bruce Tyrell and Aida Wrenn were acting out a sweet little love story all by themselves. So far they were only friends they told themselves, but their inner consciousness revealed to them that they were fast drifting into that delightful phase of super-existence where life is one rose-tinted, delirious whirl of ecstatic joy.

Aida was a schoolteacher. So was her sister, Marcia, in a rural district fifty miles distant. The family was a pleasant one, the mother of the old-fashioned, fast-disappearing type, indigent and sympathetic, the father a storekeeper of the town with trade enough to keep things comfortable. He was content, and not willing to set business expansion at the cost of risking his little capital and passing sleepless nights worrying over it. It was by mere chance that Bruce had become acquainted with Aida. The biggest rainstorm Hillsboro had ever known was on the program in grand display, one warm spring afternoon, when he was absolutely marooned upon a rise of ground near the roadside, with no shelter except an old stock shed. He was rather glad of the company of two horses which crowded out of the drenching rain with him. They were docile and friendly. It had begun raining just as the bell of the little crossroads schoolhouse called in the odd two dozen scholars from the playground. There was no afternoon recess, for the rain never let up until four o'clock. By that time the roadway was a rushing torrent and the water was up over the steps of the little frame building. At the open doorway stood the pretty schoolteacher, with a dismayed face over the grewsome prospect, while at the windows the pupils crowded gleefully, very much entertained by the novelty of their situation.

Conditions were less discouraging at the roof shelter. The water had been under shoe tops for an hour, but a run of a hundred feet in knee-deep water would have landed Bruce on the higher level. A sturdy framework of rails, apparently used as a bridge across some creek or ditch, had been swept from its moorings and had lodged directly against the side of the shelter shed. There came a final fearful downpour, resembling a cloudburst. Bruce saw that the water had come up clear over the threshold of the little schoolhouse and was pouring in over the floor.

"Something ought to be done for those refugees. They'll begin to get frightened soon. There may be no danger, but there will be some wailing among those little tots when it begins to get dark."

Bruce studied the watery waste between the shed and the schoolhouse, and then tried to calculate how far the floating, but stalled platform might be utilized as a raft. When he waded around to it the water was up to his knees, and he doubted not that it was waist high farther down the slant in the direction of the marooned pupils and their teacher. Across one side of the shed was stretched a long pole beyond which a food trough had been placed to contain fodder for the horses. It was thick, staunch and secured by nails at both ends.

"The very thing," decided Bruce, tore it loose, waded to the platform and got upon it. Then using the pole as deftly as he had manipulated it when a lad playing the castaway afloat on a home pool, he started his bulky bark in the direction of the beleaguered ones caged within the little schoolhouse.

He was inspired mightily to diligent effort as the schoolmistress appeared at its door, waving her handkerchief encouragingly. The little ones clustered about her and at the windows, keeping up a babel of excited cries and cheers. The experiment was a rare success, and as, for the first time close at hand, the eyes of Bruce rested on the lovely face of Aida Wrenn, he felt all his trouble well recompensed. In the three groups the little ones were rafted across the expanse to where Miss Wrenn, fully familiar with the topography of the vicinity, pointed out a rising bluff path. Dry shod and fluttering with rare excitement, the little ones dispersed, able to reach their homes in safety. Miss Wren insisted on remaining behind until the last of her charges were safely delivered from peril and discomfort.

"How can we ever thank you for your wonderful work?" she fluttered, as she stepped upon the raft. "What is that?" she added, with a quick backward glance. Then she shuddered. A grinding creak had sounded out; the underpinning of one end of the schoolhouse had given way. Lopsided, the structure toppled and rested four feet deep in the water, crushing the door and windows out of shape, a wreck.

Bruce Tyrrell found himself quite a hero in the eyes of the little community after that. But, still better to his method of appreciation, he became a welcome visitor at the Wrenn home. Aida's face was radiant whenever he appeared and all the world seemed sunshine to Bruce, subject of a first attack of that incurable disease—love.

There came a cloud over the spirit of his dreams one day. As he was passing through a little park square, he diverted his course, but his gaze was fixed on Aida, seated on a bench beside a young man, a stranger. They were so very close together that he seemed to whisper to her at times. Then as they arose to separate, Aida seized both hands of the handsome young fellow and held in a fervent clasp, meanwhile looking earnestly into his eyes.

"Who can he be? And she?" reflected Bruce in a troubled way. "Can it be possible that her heart is already engaged and that I am blindly hoping for a love that can never be mine?"

Bruce grew depressed and was half minded to cease his visits to the Wrenn home. He was magnanimous concerning Aida, for although their relations had been friendly she had really never given him any definite encouragement as a suitor. She was no coquette, he was sure of that, and he blamed his own sanguine nature for the daring presumption that Aida's handclasp had at times been lingering and tender, and that her eyes responded sympathetically to his own ardent glances.

"I can hardly break the engagement for this evening," meditated Bruce, "but tomorrow!"

Aida and himself were to attend a party at Wildwood, a few miles distant on the trolley line. Bruce called for her that evening. Never had she looked so beautiful. A pretty locket and chain he had never noticed before were her only jewelry adornments. Bruce sighed as he recalled that but for his discovery of the day, he intended to present her with a friendship ring he carried in his pocket. Her acceptance of it would have decided him as to the fact that there was some real depth to the interest she had manifested in him.

And, further, never had she been more charming in the kindly, pleasant way in which she received his attentions. He partly took heart of hope that he might be entertaining a suspicion without foundation. Still, he was constrained and unhappy all the evening.

As they left the trolley car on the return trip and proceeded towards Aida's home, the latter paused abruptly with a little cry of dismay.

"Oh, dear!" she exclaimed, her hand to her throat. "I have lost the locket."

"Are you sure?" questioned Bruce solicitously.

"Oh, yes, I had it when I got aboard the car."

She shook her dress and they retraced their way to the trolley station. It was bright moonlight, but their searching eyes discovered no trace of the missing article of jewelry.

"You had better let me see you home," suggested Bruce. "Then I will return and wait till the car comes back on its return trip. It may be that you lost the locket on the car."

"I shall wait up for your report," said Aida. "I am very anxious about the locket."

Bruce signaled and halted the car as it returned. At his first question regarding the locket and chain the conductor produced the lost article.

"Just found it under a seat," he explained, and Bruce hastened to impart the glad news to Aida. He turned the locket over and over in his hand. Its upper case came open.

"It is as I feared!" he half groaned, and well he might, for a bright ray of moonlight revealed a circular photograph within the case. It was that of the man he had seen with Aida that afternoon. Oh, there was no doubt now of the existence of a rival! Bruce had one thought only in his mind—to return the locket to Aida and forget her.

"Just a minute, please," spoke a voice behind him as he neared the Wrenn home, and Bruce faced a new, astounding circumstance. Turning, he confronted the original of the photograph.

"You are Mr. Tyrrell," spoke the other. "I have heard Aida—that is, Miss Wrenn—speak of you and have seen you once or twice before this. I also know you are her close friend. Will you do me a great favor? Are you going to her home?"

"Yes," answered Bruce, and gruffly, and darkly suspicious.

"Will you hand her this note?" and the other tendered a folded paper.

"Why should I?" resented Bruce, drawing back coldly.

"Must I tell you?" questioned his companion. "Yes, I will. Aida says you are a man to trust. Well, then, I am secretly married to Aida's sister, and the note tells her that Marcia will be here in the morning to break the news to her parents."

"Oh!"

It was passed by as a mere commonplace aspiration by Aida's brother-in-law. For Bruce it expressed relief, and hope and joy. With alacrity he accepted the commission and with delight. He listened later to Aida's explanation that her sister had left the locket at home on her last visit, and Aida had borrowed it for the occasion of the party.

And then Bruce felt that he should also unburden his heart, which he did, and graciously Aida listened to him, and the white moonlight irradiated two glowing, happy faces as Bruce kissed his fiancee good night at the garden gate.

Pigeon's Care of Wounded Mate.

A farmer standing outside his farmhouse saw a pair of his pigeons fly away. Shortly afterward he heard a shot, and the pigeons did not return in the course of the afternoon, as he had expected. In the evening, however, the cock pigeon returned in order to feed the young, and, having seen to this, he again flew away.

The following forenoon the same pigeon returned, helped itself to some corn strewn in the farmyard and again disappeared. Between 2 and 3 o'clock in the afternoon both pigeons returned, and it was then ascertained that the hen bird had one wing badly hurt by shot, but owing to its mate's care and perseverance it ultimately managed to return to its nest.—London Field.

Ship Output Is Growing.

The return of shipbuilding output in May is better, but it certainly justifies no slackening of effort in the yards. A tonnage of 197,000 was completed in the month, and that constitutes a new record. In the year which ended with May 1,406,000 tons were completed. The Government estimate was for 1,890,000 tons in the year 1918. Only about a third of that has been finished in the first five months, while the demand for shipping has grown, and we cannot afford to rest content even if the estimate is reached and exceeded. The Allies are now building faster than ships are being lost, but the heaviest losses fall on ships under the British flag, and up to the present our own resources have not kept pace with the destruction. While, therefore, we have reason for congratulation in the figures of May, we must heighten our efforts if we are to reach the position in which we shall launch a new ship for every one that is sunk.—Westminster Gazette.

Tea

What crimes are committed in thy name!

When properly made, Tea is an amiable, friendly drink, but some of the decoctions served up and called Tea are criminal libels upon the name. And yet the proper way to make Tea is so simple.

You cannot know the real joys of Tea drinking until you prepare it as directed, and until you use Lipton's Tea.

This emphasis upon Lipton's Tea is no braggart statement, because we grow it, blend it, pack it, and sell it ourselves. Consequently we guarantee its quality when it reaches you. No other firm selling Tea in Canada may do this.

Directions For Making Tea:

1—Always use an earthenware or china teapot.
2—Thoroughly warm the teapot by rinsing with hot water.
3—Put enough tea into the pot to suit requirements. Two teaspoonfuls of Lipton's is ample for five cups.
4—Always use freshly-drawn water, and have it briskly boiling when poured on to the tea.
5—Allow the tea to stand not longer than five minutes.
6—Add cream and sugar to suit taste.

IMPOSSIBLE PROBLEMS.

Squaring the Circle, Perpetual Motion and Defying Gravitation.

The circle has never been exactly squared. They have been trying during 6,000 years and have not yet found the length of the side of a square equal in area to any given circle. The reason of this is because the area of a circle has never been found, and this because the ratio of the diameter to the circumference is yet unknown.

The first eleven figures of the ratio, 3.14159265358, are a mere beginning. They have been computed out to 635 figures without the decimal coming to an end—that is, the figures representing the length of the circumference and of the diameter are known to be incommensurable, or impossible to express by two whole numbers.

The enormous labor of carrying out this dividing of 635 integers could have as well been saved, because the higher mathematics has proved that the ratio cannot be expressed in a finite number of terms. Hence the work of attempting to square the circle is wasted. Likewise the useless labors of perpetual motion seekers, searchers after the square root of one-half and overthrowers of the law of gravitation.—Edgar Lucien Larkin in New York American Dared Them to Shoot Him.

In 1864 Colonel Daniels of the Seventh Rhode Island became unpopular with some of his command, and a rumor spread that he would be shot at the next engagement. He heard of it. It was customary when guns had been loaded for some time to have them discharged into some convenient bank, and Colonel Daniels took advantage of this. Marching his regiment out with loaded rifles, he faced them toward a suitable elevation, and, taking position on the top of it and in front of them as at dress parade, he gave the commands "Ready!" "Aim!" "Fire!" and the pieces were discharged.

Needless to say, any man could have shot him with little danger of discovery, and, needless to say also, none of them did. There were no more threats of that kind in his regiment.—"Recollections of a Varied Career."

Travel In 1760.

In these days of rapid transit a paragraph from a Yorkshire paper of 1760 is interesting. It is an account of a London merchant's journey from London to Dublin and back. Leaving London on Monday evening, the traveler reached Liverpool on Wednesday morning in time to catch the packet for Dublin, which city he reached on Thursday. During that day he transacted his business in the capital and next morning sailed for Liverpool, arriving there on Saturday. Monday saw him back in London, and his journey was complete, having taken only eight days! "And," concludes the writer, "there is every reason to believe that it will be possible to beat even this performance in the near future."—London Opinion.

HEAVY ARTILLERY.

There's a Vast Difference Between a Howitzer and a Big Gun.

Not every civilian can tell offhand the difference between a gun and a howitzer. According to the Army and Navy Journal, the howitzer, in proportion to its weight, throws a shell very much heavier than that which a gun throws, but gives it much less muzzle velocity and has a correspondingly shorter range.

Take, for example, a modern gun that weighs forty tons, gives a muzzle velocity of 3,000 feet a second and has a range of anything up to fifteen miles. A howitzer of the same caliber would weigh only 6.3 tons and would give a muzzle velocity of only 1,100 feet a second.

The gun can be mounted only on board ship or in permanent fortifications, but the howitzer can be taken into the field. It has a special transporting wagon, from which it can be readily shifted to its firing carriage.

The foreign 6.3 inch howitzer is capable of being fired up to 65 degrees of elevation and at 45 degrees has a range of 10,900 yards, its maximum. The shell weighs 760 pounds and carries as a burster 114 pounds of high explosive. It is said that the shell contains no shrapnel, but that assertion is open to doubt.

Died In Her Coffin.

Mme. Henriette Teyssedre, who recently died at the age of eighty at her residence in the Rue de la Grange-aux-Belles, Paris, was buried in the coffin in which for the last thirty years she slept nightly. When three decades ago her husband died Mme. Teyssedre ordered a coffin of polished oak with silver corner pieces, silk and velvet lining and with images of saints painted on its sides. Her servant found her dead in it.

THE marketing of thin chickens is not conserving our meat supply nor is it the most profitable method to the producers. Present prices of market poultry admits of the liberal use of feeds and the marketing of well-fleshed birds.

The best birds to flesh or fatten are those of the heavier breeds, such as Wyandottes, Reds, and Rocks. The light breeds, such as Leghorns, seldom pay to fatten unless they are very thin in flesh.

The birds intended for fattening should be confined to a small pen or slatted coop. The process is not difficult if you will but pay attention to a few points that are essential.

Do not feed the birds for the first day they are shut up. You should give them something to drink, but it is best to give no feed. After the first day feed very lightly for two or three days and then gradually increase the ration, being very careful not to overfeed. We usually start chickens on very finely ground grains at the rate of three-quarters of an ounce of grain per feed to each bird, feeding twice daily. This can be increased gradually to two or three times this amount. Generally the most profitable gains are made during the first fourteen to sixteen days feeding. Such birds will not be excessively fat, but should be fat enough to cook and eat well. Some markets demand a fatter bird.

The most profitable gains are made on birds weighing from three and one-half to four and one-half pounds when put up to fatten.

The grains fed should be finely ground and, if at all possible, should be mixed with sour milk. Mix the feed to a consistency of a pancake batter. The more milk the chicken will take the better bird you will have in the end. Milk appears to have no good substitute for fattening chickens. If you cannot get milk then add ten to fifteen per cent. of meat meal to the ration and mix with water. The addition of a little green food daily will help matters. Many people get better results by feeding a little salt. About one-half pound to one hundred pounds of dry grain is sufficient. This mixes best by being dissolved in water and adding a little at each feed. Be careful not to use too much.

The best grains available now are a mixture of ground barley, cornmeal, finely ground buckwheat, and shorts. Oats are good if part of the hull is sifted out, as are also ground brewers' grains. We have used with good results a mixture of two parts of ground barley, two parts cornmeal, and two parts shorts, mixed with twice the amount of sour milk. In general feed about one-third shorts and then whatever finally ground grains you may have about the farm.

If at all possible mix the ground grains with sour milk.—Prof. W. R. Graham, O. A. College, Guelph.

BASEBALL OR FOOTBALL.

Which of the Two Games Calls For the Greater Courage?

A group of former varsity football players were arguing the interesting point as to which requires more nerve on the part of participants—football or baseball. One would think there would not be a dissenting voice to the opinion that the gridiron sport requires far more nerve. Yet there were several who strenuously debated this contention, holding that the mental strain was greater upon the man who plays baseball.

"I played varsity baseball and varsity football," said one man of the group "and I want to tell you that the only time I ever felt inward tremors was when I stood at the plate facing a pitcher who had a fast ball. There is something about the situation—or always was to me—which made me feel my helplessness, made me feel at the mercy of the pitcher, or rather at the mercy of his possible bad aim. In football you were fighting against one man and he had nothing to throw at you."

"I felt the same way," chimed in a former varsity guard. "When I came from prep school I had a reputation as a pitcher, but I never tried for the team because I hadn't the nerve to face the shoots of varsity twirlers." The curious thing is that this man in his day was one of the most daring and resourceful football players in the game.—Philadelphia Ledger.

Importance of Attending Exhibition.

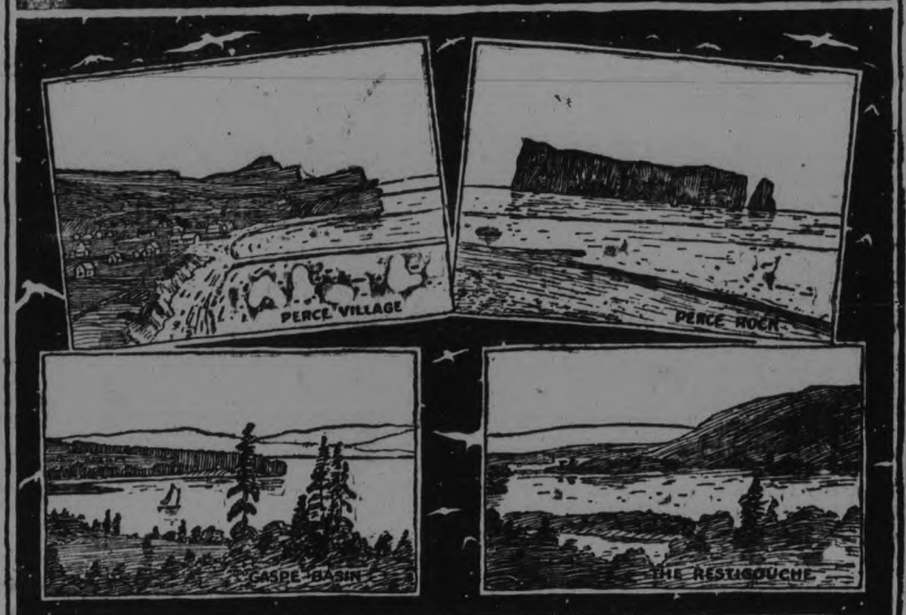
Fall exhibitions are a permanent feature in the life of Ontario, and particular interest and import to the farmer and his family. True many of the smaller shows might be greatly improved by the introduction of more new educative features, and some of the larger exhibitions have been criticized in the past for tardiness in placing agriculture in its due place, but at the present time, with things agricultural to the fore-front as they are, exhibition management realize the value of a strong agricultural and live-stock department and are making this a leading feature of their work. In fact, no fall fair large or small, could exist let alone prosper, without the products of the farm well represented.

Bearing this in mind, it is important that all attend their local fall fair and their nearest large exhibition. A well-managed fair is an education. The best live stock of the various types and breeds, the highest quality, grain, roots and vegetables, the newest devices to aid the farmer and his wife in their work, and the most up-to-date special attractions are all there and each has its value to those who attend with the purpose of improving their knowledge. It is worth while to watch the judging being done to get an idea of approved type and to have one's interest stimulated that he may go home and do better work in breeding live stock or in the production of farm crops. Study the work of the judges. It helps to fix in the mind the proper type of live stock of the various breeds and the requirements of all farm crops. The boys and girls should be taken to the exhibition and encouraged to study and learn as well as to enjoy themselves.

Exhibitions also have their place in the social welfare of the people. It is profitable to get away from work for a few days and mingle with others, there to discuss matters of interest to all, and to see what progress is being made in industry other than that from which the fair-goer gets his or her living. It makes for bigger men and women with a wider viewpoint. A little clean, wholesome amusement is necessary in order to get the most out of life.

Go to the exhibition with the idea of improving your education and at the same time to have a real good time. It is profitable to get away from work occasionally and the exhibition offers not only an opportunity for pleasure but also for profit. —Prof. Wade Toole, O. A. College, Guelph.

KNOW YOUR OWN COUNTRY



PERCE ROCK AND THE BEAUTIES OF GASPE PENINSULA

If the reader has looked on the map at the Gaspé Peninsula and thought of it as a bleak, inhospitable country, inhabited by a few fishermen, without beauty or value; dismiss such impressions at once, and think of one of the most beautiful spots in North America—a land of sunshine, world-renowned fishing streams, delightful scenery and rich and fertile valleys.

La Baie de Chaleur, an arm of the Gulf of St. Lawrence, divides the Gaspé Peninsula from the northern portion of the Province of New Brunswick. As the bay narrows into the estuary of the Restigouche, the scenery becomes bolder and more majestic, presenting one of the most superb and fascinating panoramic views in America. The whole region is mountainous, and almost precipitous enough to be Alpine; but its grandeur is derived less from cliffs, chasms and peaks, than from far-reaching sweeps of outline, and continually rising domes that mingle with the clouds. On the Gaspé side, precipitous cliffs of brick-red sandstone flank the shore. Behind them the mountains rise and fall in long undulations of ultramarine.

PERCE AND THE ROCK

At Percé, which has been described as the "most dramatic spot in the Gaspé Peninsula where the powers of description fail," the land pushes out into the bay in lines of lofty cliffs, with the restless sea eternally gnawing at their base. The village, which has excellent hotel accommodation, is in an undulating valley between the mountains and the shore cliffs, and in every direction there is a glorious panorama, the varying shades of brilliant greens of the verdant slopes and the equally brilliant reds of the sandstone cliffs—a riot of color—yet all combining to make one harmonious whole.

In the wonderful atmosphere of this part of the Gulf, the distinctness with which objects are presented to the view is surprising. In the case of the "Pierced Rock," it is almost startling. Seen from the cliff or Mont Joli, and but a seeming stone's throw away, this singular monument stands out against the sea and sky as sharply defined as if cut by the chisel of some Titanic sculptor. It is an island block of red-dish conglomerate and sandstone, 1,500 feet long and 300 feet in width, and rising out of the sea with perpendicular cliffs 286 feet high. Near the outer end is another smaller rock rising just as abruptly and to almost as great a height with a clear channel separating the two. Thousands of gulls and cormorants nest on the rocks and make a lively commotion during the day; with only a slight diminuendo during the night. This noise, however, serves a good purpose; for no friendly beacon could be more welcome to the mariner than the warning cries of the birds that out of the darkness, fog and mist proclaim the whereabouts of the rock and the dangerous reefs that encircle it.

GASPE BAY AND BASIN

Gaspé Bay is sixteen miles in length, and is six miles in width for about twelve miles from its mouth. Then it narrows into the beautiful Gaspé Basin, forming one of the finest harbors in America.

Gaspé village is gloriously situated on the lofty hills overlooking the Basin, and is a place of manifold attractions for the summer visitor who loves recreation and quiet, where there is plenty of boating, deep sea fishing and bathing, with pure and tonic air. The hotel accommodation is excellent, and each season brings a host of strangers from the larger centres to enjoy the rare charm of a Gaspesian summer.

Gaspé will ever have a place in the greatest war of history, for it was within the security and vastness of its marvelous basin there rode securely, in the fall of the year 1914, that magnificent fleet of war vessels which carried the thirty and odd thousands of soldiers with their horses, guns and equipment, the first of many Canadian Contingents to the battlefields of Europe, where they were destined to bring undying lustre and fame to the Dominion of Canada.

The Gaspé Peninsula is reached by rail from Matapedia Station on the line of the Canadian Government Railways.

Dog or Ox.

W. B. Wright says: "A dog drinking is the emblem of alertness. Watch him. If a leaf rustles he sees it and starts. Sights and sounds which elude your powers of observation arrest his. The most conspicuous distinction between the dog and the ox at water is this: The ox never heeds his master until his thirst is quenched; the dog never heeds his thirst till his master is obeyed. I have seen a hound panting with heat, his black lips baked, his tongue cracked, dart toward the cool spring. But his master's whistle arrests him at the brink, and he darts back without a drop. I have watched drovers call, pound, goad oxen at the ford, but the beasts would not budge until their thirst was slaked. Both types you may have seen among the recruits enlisted in the army of the Lord."—Christian Herald.

PRESENCE OF MIND.

It Cowed an Enraged Lion and Saved the Trainer's Life.

At Cape Town a lion tamer was going through a performance in a cage with a full grown lion that had been lately caught.

Suddenly it was seen that the brute was putting the trainer through his paces rather than being put through itself. Softly, crouching and creeping the big cat edged itself between the thoroughly unnerved man and the door of the den, fixing its victim with two rolling yellow orbs of flaming ferocity and sawing the empty air with its tufted tail as it crouched preparatory to springing.

Many men among the audience, used to the ways of wild beasts, saw and comprehended, but only one man possessed the knowledge and the presence of mind to avert the apparently inevitable. Pursing up his lips as though he were going to whistle, he emitted a hoarse, low, rasping hiss.

The beast heard and understood, for the sound was an exact imitation of the noise made by the giant constrictor when its huge body is coiled for the throw that never misses, that never relaxes and that no beast of the field is strong enough to withstand. Again and yet again the raucous sound rasped the stillness, and the angry brute drew back its head, its great eyes grew small and dull, the hackles rose and stiffened on its back, and it cowered, whining, on the floor of the cage.—London Saturday Review.

Jewsharp Artists.

Ability in performing on the jewsharp (which, by the way, has nothing to do with the Hebrews) was once the medium of bringing luck to a German soldier. One of Frederick the Great's warriors so charmed the king with his performance on two jewsharps that he gave him his discharge and a large money present and enabled him to amass a fortune playing at concerts.

The greatest performer on the jewsharp was a German, Charles Eulenstein, whose exhibitions in London in 1828 were very popular, but also, unfortunately, fatal to his teeth.—London Mail.

CHANGE OF WATER CAUSED DIARRHOEA

People moving from one place to another are very much subject to diarrhoea on account of change of water, change of climate, change of diet, etc., and what at first appears to be but a slight looseness of the bowels should not be neglected or some serious bowel complaint will be sure to follow.

The safest and quickest cure for diarrhoea dysentery, cholera infantum, cholera morbus, pains in the stomach, sickness and all looseness of the bowels is Dr. Fowler's Extract of Wild Strawberry.

Mr. T. T. Allard, Port Sound, Ont., writes: "In the fall of 1914 I was working on the 'Chiclet Gum' factory, on Carlaw Ave., in Toronto, when I had a bad attack of diarrhoea, owing, I think, to the change of water. One of the foremen advised me to get a bottle of Dr. Fowler's Extract of Wild Strawberry, which I did, with the result that I hadn't taken it before I was completely cured.

Dr. Fowler's Extract of Wild Strawberry has been a national remedy for the past years, and is sold by medicine dealers everywhere at 35c, a bottle. Don't let anyone palm off a substitute on you. When you pay your money for the genuine, you've a right to get it. Put up only by The Thomas Co., Limited, Toronto.

PETERBOROUGH, THURSDAY, SEPTEMBER 12, 1918

PETERBORO'S GREATEST EXHIBITION OPENED AUSPICIOUSLY TO-DAY

Exhibits Exceed Last Year's and Stock Pens Prove Inadequate—Display Building Houses Finest Show That Has Ever Been Made by Peterboro Merchants.

ATTRACTIONS ARE ALL HERE

Skies that should have smiled were sullen this afternoon when the Peterborough Industrial Exhibition was formally opened by Mayor Duncan, Mr. G. A. Gillespie and Mr. J. H. Burnham. It was the only disappointment in the first day of the greatest Fair Peterborough has ever planned. The morning hung heavy and dark, but cleared at noon with the promise of a bright, warm afternoon. Then a stray cloud speaked in with its contribution, and after that President R. Denne decided that it was time to dig up the rabbit's foot.

Despite this untoward feature of the opening day, all the other circumstances were highly satisfactory.

In all its essentials this year's exhibition is really the greatest that has ever been held. The stock pens, newly built during the past summer, are filled and overflowing, the flower show is exceptionally good, the vegetable display has never been so large in the number and size of the specimens. The poultry tent also reflects the increased interest in greater production.

Crowd Braved the Weather.

Thursday has always been a rather lame duck, trudging behind the two big days, when it should be up in the van. The directors made their preparation to raise its status, and immediately their venture is threatened by wet weather. However, about two o'clock this afternoon the attendance had set up a new record for the opening day, at least there were all the evidences of it, and the crowd seemed to be just beginning to come. The programme was delayed slightly, waiting for a definite clearing of the rain clouds.

New Turnstiles Working.

The new turnstiles were clocking the visitors through the new gates, and automatically registering the number of tickets taken. This evening and for the rest of the week they should strain themselves trying to count the crowd that files past them.

Bright, Gay Appearance.

This year's visitors will be unanimous in their appreciation of the improvements that have been accomplished by the directors. As you approach the grounds there are many signs of innovations. In fact the Park has been made over. A washed blue paint and whitewash have been used on the new gates and fences, the old building has been moved out into the centre of the east half of the Park, has been painted, roofed and generally rehabilitated even beyond recognition. The Midway, from the Lock Street entrance to the grandstand, is gayly decorated with bunting, flags of the Allies, and for night effect, lamps placed one every five feet. These are the first striking changes that will impress the visitor. The booths have been arranged for the purpose of making the grounds orderly, and also to group certain exhibits. There is a long show of automobiles, and across from them are located the manufacturers of agricultural implements and farm facilities. The Midway lacks the "pep" that was injected into it last year by the carnival that gave it the appearance of the biggest show in the country, but this year's row is long and as noisy as ever.

Races Will Be Good.

The entries for the races include four horses that have just arrived from the Ottawa Exhibition. Mr. Harold Baptie secured them, and states that cards should be as attractive as anything seen in this district. One of the Ottawa races this week found four horses out of a field of nine coming home neck and neck in a thrilling finish.

In the Display Building.

The exhibits' building is packed with the features. Merchants and manufacturers have shown their appreciation of the improvements that have been carried out. Easily the finest display that has ever been made at the Fair is Richard Hall and Sons' one thousand dollar room, with its handsome furnishings and appointments made by the company's home furnishing department. Visitors will not fail to notice this exhibit, and incidentally to view the pictures which are copies of originals, owned by the Governments of various countries. The Roy Studio have also an attractive gallery. Mr. E. Warne has a large display of Pathephone talking machines. The Peterborough Hardware Co., R. G. Sturgeon, and other merchants have also sections that will interest, including Mr. B. H. Britton's exhibit of musical instruments.

To-Day's Judging.

Mr. W. H. Ford began the judging of the flower and vegetable sections this afternoon. Visitors are especially directed to the grand show made by the Peterborough Branch of the Ontario Vegetable Growers' Association, comprising the following local gardeners: W. T. Arnott, J. Bell, P. Card, J. Coombes, Peter Decorlonis, S. Gentile, J. A. Holden, T. Holden, B. Johnston, G. Johnston, C. F. Kitney and Sons, Oke and Hagerman, W. J. Oke, F. Wise and J. A. Williams.

Mr. Burnham's Address.

In congratulating the directors on their energy and good judgment, Mr. J. H. Burnham, M.P., referred to the necessity of exhibitions more particularly in war-time. An exhibition shows what the old and the young of both sexes are doing at home, when the men of the nation and many of the women are at the front. The speaker drew a parallel between the present war and that between Rome and Carthage, which resulted in the annihilation of the baneful influence of a nation which had but one motto of which our "Business is business" is a true copy. Having no soul it had reached a low level of cruelty and honour that required its destruction or that of Rome and of all the culture and sweetness of civilization. It is worthy of note that Napoleon the Great, during all his wars, kept the exhibitions of the agriculture and manufactures of France heavily subsidized by the State. It enabled France to look at itself seriously in a glass, and kept the country from degenerating into disorganization and despondency, and enabling it on the cessation of war to go right on without ever having left off. "It is vital to our well-being that we meet and take stock of what we are doing as well as of ourselves and what we are."

PLEASURE AND PERIL GO TOGETHER

Pleasure and Peril go together ..... nlydnooooooooooooooomn

Jack Canuck and Uncle Sam have declared against motoring for pleasure on Sunday. The Allies need so much gasoline, and it is growing so scarce that its use for pleasure must be curtailed. The Fuel Controller has made known his request; it is the duty of every motor car owner to comply. Canada can save 225,000 gallons of gasoline next Sunday, which means a monetary saving—considering gas, oil and wear and tear—of more than $150,000. Serve your country by foregoing a pastime. Pleasure and peril go together.

Allied Battering Ram is Taking a Vacation

The Line is Fairly Established From the English Channel to Switzerland—German Power of Resistance is Immeasurably Less Than it Was in 1917.

(United Press.)
(By Wm. Philip Simms.)

Paris, September 12. — Foch continues to give Ludendorff fairly vigorous local raps as he plasters the Germans tighter against Hindenburg's wall of concrete and steel, but generally speaking the line to-day is fairly established from the English channel to Switzerland.

The allied battering ram is, for the moment, taking a vacation. The sole topic of conversation here is whether the battering ram will start swinging again before winter, or will friend and foe settle down until spring, approximately where they are?

MAN POWER LOWER.

The Germans boast that their lines are impregnable and say that the allies will never be able to break down their resistance. Certainly figures seem to prove the German power of resistance is already immeasurably less than it was in 1917. During the Arras-Vimy offensive of 1917, the British captured 19,343 prisoners and 257 guns in April; 3,412 prisoners and one gun in May. In the Messines drive they took 8,686 prisoners and 67 guns during June, 4,039 prisoners and 9 guns during July. In the Flanders Ypres drive the British captured 10,697 prisoners and 38 guns in August; 5,296 prisoners and 11 guns in September; 128 prisoners and 15 guns in October. Since the start of the allied counter offensive this year, the British have captured 75,000 prisoners and 750 guns. Whereas in 1917 the British took approximately only one gun for each 700 prisoners, this year they took one gun for each 100 prisoners, proving there is greater dash on the part of the British, less resistance from the Huns—or both. The total allied captures in 1918 are approximately 125,000 prisoners and 2,100 guns, or about one gun for every 60 prisoners.

Plainly the German soldiers have improved since 1917 only in running.

Miss Katherine Stinson Tells Examiner How She Learned to Fly

Started to Fly When Thirteen Years of Age - Is Not Afraid to Fly at the Exhibition.

WILL GO TO CUBA

"Am I afraid of flying this afternoon?" said Miss Katherine Stinson, this morning, when called upon for an interview. "Why, no! except that the crowd may get their feet wet. I am neevr afraid; why should I be?"

While she is the most talked of girl in Peterboro to-day, as a result of her wonderful exhibition of flying, Miss Stinson passed this morning about the streets clad quietly, and was the last girl the waiting crowds would have picked out as the heroine of the day. Interviewed at the Empress where she is staying, she was delighted to tell her experiences, answering any question without reserve, and gladly giving any information sought.

WANTED TO MAKE MONEY.

Her story as she told it is interesting. "I started to fly," she said, "six years ago. You see I had just completed my musical education, and did so wish to obtain a European course; so decided flying at fairs was as quick a way to make money as poseible. I had always wanted to fly, so in spite of all manner of protestations and objections, I finally learned to do so. Later my sister Madge became enthused and she too took up flying. Well we flew for two years, and then came the war.

STARTED AVIATION SCHOOL.

In 1915 the British government called for 350 aviators. Men were passed as physically fit and given leave to learn to fly where they might find convenient. At theis time my brother was in Dayton, Ohio, and tiring of waiting to obtain his certificate there for flying, he obtained permission to complete his course at his home in my plane in Texas. Accordingly he came home and brought four Canadians who had been waiting in Dayton to complete their course. From then on we had Canadians with us learning to fly until at the present time we have 70 Canadians and hundreds of American graduates of our school at the front."

WILL GO TO CUBA.

When she arrived in the city Miss Stinson had just completed arrangements with the American government to fly in Cuba and South America. "But I'd rather go to France," she said, "and do something really big. I'd like to do anything towards war work and would gladly sacrifice my flying to drive a motor ambulance. I always have several strings to my bow, and at present have Red Cross and my South American tour in view. Everything I do is double-wired—even my plane."

FLEW 670 MILES.

Her most exciting trip, she said, was when during the first Red Cross campaign she flew from Buffalo to Washington, a distance of 670 miles, in 675 minutes (flying time), and with collections made en route handed over $1,000,000 in cheques to Secretary McAdoo.

While in Peterboro, she will not leave the immediate vicinity of the Fair Grounds but will keep 2,500 feet oveh them.

HUN SCHEME IN RUSSIA

Germany Has Launched a well Planned Campaign to Strip Russia of All Obtainable Loot.

WAR INDEMNITY

(Special to The Examiner.)

WASHINGTON, Sept. 12.—Encouraged by American recognition the Czecho Slovaks of the world, both inside and outside of Austria, are mustering their strength and influence to the full support of the Entente cause, according to an authoritative disclosure here to-day.

Germany has launched a well-planned campaign to strip Russia of all obtainable loot before she is compelled to retreat to her own frontiers by the Entente military pressure on the West front and in the East, diplomats here declared.

The German scheme in Russia has suddenly changed with the unexpected reversal of Teuton military fortunes, it is asserted, and henceforth her policy to the East will be marked only by the speed and facility with which everything of value is pried loose from the various Russian factions and nationalities and carted off to Berlin.

The initial payment of the Russian war indemnity in the face of strong opposition among Germans who steadfastly contended that the outrageous indemnity would wreck all hopes of permanent relations between Russia and Germany is held to point strikingly to the evident German aim.

Miss Harstone Gave Interesting Address to Red Cross Workers

Increasing Need for Red Cross Supplies at the Front.

A large and interested gathering of Red Cross workers heard Miss Jean Harstone's splendid address yesterday afternoon at Red Cross rooms. Mrs. T. F. Mathews presided.

With a map drawn by herself, the speaker gave the audience a good idea of the situation of our hospitals She spoke principally upon the work of the motor ambulance corps with which she is connected and of the great and incessant need of Red Cross supplies. In speaking of the air raids she told of how at one time, the patients from the base hospitals had to be removed to the woods every night for three consecutive weeks to escape being bombed. Later when the Huns found where the Red Cross were sheltered the patients had to be spread about in different places.

In conclusion Miss Harstone spoke of the great work done by England in relieving the coal shortage of the allied countries. This year she said this shortage will probably be very serious.

ONLY HONEST WRATH SAYS THE KAISER

Germans Do Not Know Hatred, He Claims

(Special to The Examiner.)

AMSTERDAM, Sept. 12.—Germany has no hatred, only honest wrath, the Kaiser says in a speech to Krupp workers, according to a despatch here to-day. "Germany's enemies began the war because they were envious of Germany's prosperity," said the Kaiser. "Their envy became hatred when their calculations failed. Germans do not know hatred—only honest wrath, which deals the enemy a blow, and then when he is prostrate and bleeding we extend him our hands and look to his recovery. Germany is only fighting for existance and must fight the battle through.

ENGLISHMEN ARE ARRESTED IN RUSSIA

STOCKHOLM, Sept. 12.—Eleven Englishmen and eleven French citizens have been arrested and imprisoned in the fortress of St. Peter and St. Paul, in Petrograd, according to apparently reliable information received here to-day from the Russian capital. The Englishmen incarcerated include R. H. N. Lockhart, the British Consul-General at Moscok, who was condemned to death by the Bolshevik Government, but who escaped execution.

Americans Opened Up an Offensive This Morning On a Ten Mile Front

Ten Villages Captured in the Opening Attack—Tanks Are in Action—The French Are Assisting.

IMMEDIATE OBJECTIVE

By Fred. S. Ferguson—United Press.

WITH THE AMERICANS ON THE METZ FRONT, Sept. 12.—The first American offensive started at five o'clock this morning between the Meuse and the Moselle Rivers.

The attack was carried out by the First Army, under the direct command of General Pershing.

The French are assisting toward the right and also toward the left. This despatch is filed at St. Mihiel.

Ten Villages.

The Americans have captured ten villages and advanced several kilometres on a fifteen-kilometre front (about ten miles). The immediate objective of the attack is limited to a specified line. Tanks are in action.

The greatest number of American troops and artillery yet involved in any single operation is engaged in the attack.

St. Mihiel is on the Meuse, directly in front of Metz, approximately 35 miles from that city, and about 23 miles from the Lorraine border. It is at the apex of the St. Mihiel salient.

British Official.

(Canadian Press Despatch.)

LONDON (Official), Sept. 12. — British forces have affected a crossing of Canal Du Nord to the northwest of the town of Havrincourt. The canal line forms the main defense of Cambrai on the southwest. A short distance to the north have pushed to the westerly bank of the Canal, east and north of the canal, east and north of Moeuvres th established themselves there. British troops have captured the towns of Vermand, Attilly and Vendelles, along the northwest of St. Quentin. In the advance towards St. Quentin the British have progressed as far as the western outskirts of Holnon Wood, southeast of Attilly. The Germans offered stiff oppositions in Havrincourt and Moeuvres sectors, which the British overcame.

French Official.

Paris (Official), Sept. 12. — Only raiding operation and artillery activity on the French front are reported in to-day's War Office statements.

The New Attack.

(Special to The Examiner.)

WITH AMERICAN FORCES IN FRANCE (By Reuters), Sept. 12. — French and American forces to-day launched a new attack on a 20-mile front in the Lorraine region. After a barrage lasting four hours the American and French infantry swept forward and took possession of several points on the German first line. The assault was everywhere successful. The weather is fine. The attack by the French and Americans was a most daring one, and so far has been successful. The attack was preceded by a barrage lasting four hours. The attack on the southern side of St. Mihiel salient was made along a distance of twelve miles. The attack on the western side was on a front of eight miles. There has been great concentration of Franco-American artillery and Entente airplanes are operating in large numbers.

A New Line.

(Special to The Examiner.)

PARIS, Sept. 12.—The Germans are constructing a new line of defence from Antwerp to Metz, according to advices here to-day. The forts of Antwerp are being restored and improved. When completed, the new defence system will be known as the Parsifal line.

A line of defence such as described in this dispatch would run across the middle of Belgium down to Metz, the important fortress in German Alsace. A retreat to such a line would mean surrendering all of France and half of Belgium.

The Americans and the French also attacked on the western side of St. Mihiel salient, pushing the enemy back in the region of Fresnes (at the northern base of the salient). This action was on a front of twelve milometres (about eight miles). The French are on the peak of the salient keeping pace with the Americans pinching the sides.

More than a hundred tanks, manned by Americans, aided in smashing the powerful concrete reinforced first line of the enemy. In the region of St. Baussant (twelve miles east of St. Mihiel) the tanks drove forward at sunrise behind a dense smoke screen. The town of Montsec (seven miles east of St. Mihiel) was kept shrouded in a smoke screen all morning to prevent effectively German observers.

The weather is ideal for the offensive. The Allies have complete supremacy of the air.

Massacres In Revenge

"Blood for Blood" is the Demand of Bolshevik Press.

Special to the Examiner:

STOCKHOLM, Sept. 12. — Massacres in revenge for the murder of Moses Uritski, Petrograd Police Chief, and the attack on Lenine were demanded by the Bolshevik newspaper "Krasnaya Gazette," according to a despatch received here to-day.

The article was headed "Blood for Blood," and said: "We will turn our hearts to steel and, without mercy, we will kill our enemies by the scores and hundreds. Let them be killed by the thousands for the blood of Lenine and Uritski."

Peterboro Soldiers Wounded

Names of a Number Appear in Latest Casualty Lists.

On to-day's casualty list from Ottawa appears the names of several local soldiers:

Pte. E. Mein, son of Mr. Robert Mein, Harvey Street, who went overseas with a Toronto unit, has been wounded.

Pte. D. W. Gerow, who enlisted here with the 93rd Battalion, and was transferred to the Mounted Rifles, is also on the wounded list. His relatives are in Toronto.

Pte. Albert Edward Miller, who went overseas with the 109th Lindsay Battalion, was admitted to No. 55 General Hospital, Boulogne, on Aug. 27, suffering from a gunshot wound, according to an official message received to-day.

Pte. H. Pilgrim, a Douro boy, who enlisted here with the 247th Battalion, is also reported wounded in to-day's list from Ottawa.

Dr. E. V. Frederick is Going to Siberia

WELL KNOWN PETERBORO DOCTOR HEARD FROM.

Dr. E. V. Frederick, of the Royal Army Medical Corps, has written one of his friends in Peterboro, from Hong Kong. He is on his way to Vladivostok, Russia. Dr. Frederick apparently will be attached to the Siberian Expedition. For the last year Dr. Frederick has been in India and Palestine, and for some time he was quartered at Bagdad, in charge of a hospital there. He speaks of meeting Capt. Arthur Howson in Bombay, when Captain Howson was on his way to Kashmir; and on the boat from Hong Kong to India he met several of his friends who had gone through college with him.

Dr. Frederick reports that the Mesopotamia campaign is gaining ground and everything is moving in good order, and from that front of the war, there is no question about a hurried and complete success.

CHILDREN KILLED IN PRUSSIAN WRECK

AMSTERDAM, Sept. 12.—In a collision yesterday between a children's excursion train and a freight train near Schneilemuehl, Prussia, 33 children, two railway officials and one woman were killed, and seven children were injured. The collision was due to the excursion train running by a signal.

AMERICAN OFFENSIVE

The Present Objective May be Metz or the German Front in Lorraine South of Metz.

DANGEROUS POCKET

(By J. W. T. Mason—United Press).

NEW YORK, Sept. 12.—The American offensive has started against the German positions south-west of Metz. The objective may be Metz, or it may be the German front in Lorraine, south of Metz, in the general direction of the Rhine.

The probability at present is that the Americans have as their immediate purpose the closing up of the St. Mihiel salient, which would throw the Germans back on Metz and straighten the Allied front along the German frontier. The St. Mihiel salient is the most dangerous pocket now remaining along the whole of the German West front. If its destruction is the immediate purpose of the American attack, an assisting assault may be developed by the Franco-American forces who are known to occupy the line on the west side of the wedge between St. Mihiel and Verdun.

A Right Angle.

The pocket is in the form of a right angle, beginning at Verdun, then running about twenty miles south to St. Mihiel, and turning eastward for 25 miles toward the German border. The Meuse and the Moselle Rivers are the boundaries of this 25-mile stretch along which the Americans to-day have started their offensive. The country is rather difficult for military operations. It is hilly, and has been heavily protected with artillery by the Germans. Nevertheless Von Hindenburg may well have been forced by his search for man power to have decided to relinquish eventually the St. Mihiel wedge. It is highly improbable, however, that he has completed his preparations so soon for this operation. The Americans may well, therefore, have caught him off guard by their sudden attack to-day.

RECRUITING HERE FOR THE SIBERIAN FORCE

Peterborough men who wish to volunteer for the Siberian Expeditionary Force have their opportunity now, inasmuch as Lieut. A. C. Lord has arrived in the city to recruit this force. Lieut. Lord may be found at the office of Mr. H. J. McCannon, 160 Simcoe Street, and will supply all the necessary information. CASUALTIES AMONG MILLBROOK BOYS

The casualties among the boys who went from this district have been quite numerous lately. Recent cablegrams report that Sergt. W. A. Murney was killed in action on Aug. 28th, Pte. Alvin Gray wounded in legs on Aug. 31st. Pte. Fletcher, gun shot wounds, Dr. Walsh, wounded, Sergt. Todd, wounded Gn. Howard Collins wounded, Pte. A. Donaldson, injured by kick of a horse, Pte. G. FRANK JENNE Says:

Do you realize that to-day you must pay more for the same article than you did a few months ago, or else take inferior goods, which is false economy. The reason is clear—raw materials do not nearly supply the demand, and the cost of labour keeps increasing. Cashmere hose, and woollen underwear, are apt to be hard to buy this winter—better have a look over your supply of winter undergarments now, and for real good hose and underwear, "Come to me."

"Peterborough Presents Possibilities Unsurpassed."

THURSDAY, SEPT. 12, 1918.

SHOULD BE SENT NOW.

"It is cold as well as wet. Woollen underclothing, socks, mitts and night caps are welcome friends. They should be mailed to the boys now, rather than when half the winter is over at Christmas."

The attention of the many patriotic ...cieties who are sending comforts ...the Peterboro boys in France, as ...ell as of the friends of the individ...al soldiers is called to the very im...portant statement from Mr. J. THEN AND NOW.

The Kaiser, while entertaining a ...uppet potentate, the new Hetman of ...he Ukraine, and amid their recipro...al hochs and hurrahs, has been tell...ng the gentleman how the war was ...brought upon the world by the ma...chinations of the Entente Allies, and ...ontinued by them with criminal mad...ness." This is the usual tenor of the ...aiser's utterances these days, and ...ill become more pronounced yet. ...etribution for the real criminals, the ...aiser and his advisers, advances ...ith sure steps, and the squeals in ...ermany will be proportionate to its ...dvance. The Kaiser did not trouble ...o talk that way at the start, nor any...ne else in Germany. "We willed ...t!" cried Maximilian Harden, and ...obody offered amendment.

Still, one is inclined to wonder a bit at such utterances as the Kaiser's latest, when the recent revelations of men like Dr. Muehlon, ex-director of Krupps, and Herr August Thyssen, formerly one of the greatest coal and iron magnates of Germany, have been allowed to pass without contradiction from Berlin. Herr Thyssen brought the responsibility directly home to the Emperor. After detailing promises made to himself and others as early as 1912 of lands in Australia, privileges in a conquered Canada, and huge indemnities for Germany from defeated European nations Herr Thyssen, it may be recalled, said:

"These promises were not vaguely given. They were made definitely by Bethmann-Hollweg on behalf of the Emperor to gatherings of business men, and in many cases to individuals. I have mentioned the promise of a grant of 30,000 acres in Australia that was made to me. Promises of a similar kind were made to at least eighty other persons at special interviews with the Chancellor, and all particulars of these promises were entered in a book at the Trades Department.

"But not only were these promises made by the Chancellor; they were confirmed by the Emperor, who, on three occasions, addressed large private gatherings of business men in Berlin, Munich and Cassel in 1912 and 1913. I was at one of these gatherings. The Emperor's speech was one of the most flowery orations I have listened to, and so profuse were the promises he made that were even half of what he promised to be fulfilled, most of the commercial men in Germany would become rich beyond the dreams of avarice.

"The Emperor was particularly enthusiastic over the coming German conquest of India. 'India,' he said, 'is occupied by the British. It is in a way governed by the British, but it is by no means completely governed by them. We shall conquer it, and the vast revenues that the British allow to be taken by Indian princes will, after our conquest, flow in a golden stream into the Fatherland. In all the richest lands of the earth the German flag will fly over every other flag.'

"Finally the Emperor concluded: "'I am making you no promises that can not be redeemed, and they shall be redeemed if you are now prepared to make the sacrifices which are necessary to secure the position that our country must and shall occupy in the world. He who refuses to help is a traitor to the Fatherland; he who helps willingly and generously will have his rich reward.'"

Dr. Muehlon's story was as definite; and Dr. Muehlon and Herr Thyssen have the confirmation of Baron Wangenheim, the German Ambassador to Turkey, who in the hour of German intoxication previous to the first German defeat on the Marne, told his American fellow Ambassador Mr. Morgenthau, all about the pre-war council he had been summoned to at Berlin, where the Kaiser completed his own "machinations."

These are things to keep in mind as the Hun war offensive decreases, and the Hun peace offensive will swell.—Ottawa Journal.

(Toronto Telegram)

German generals clamored for a war of movement. That of the sort of war that German generals are getting in large quantities just at present.

AWAKE AT LAST.

(New York Sun)

If we had Foch's inexhaustible human material we would long ago have been in Paris.—A German military critic.

England, tired out France, bled white; America, utterly negligible—yet the German at last sees in the three "in exhaustible human material."

NO WAY TO WIN THE WAR.

Youth Who Enlisted as Woodcutter Succeeds in Joining Infantry.

ORANGE, N.J., Sept. 12.—Unsuccessful in four attempts to enlist in the American Army and rejected after having joined the Royal Flying Corps because of physical defect, Edward H. Jones, son of Mrs. Edward F. Jones, of 8 Whittlesey Avenue, is now at the front with the Canadian infantry. He enlisted in the Canadian Forestry Corps, and while in England succeeded in being transferred to the infantry.

In asking his mother's permission to be transferred the young man wrote:

"I am no better than any other mother's son to die for the cause. Cutting wood is a hell of a way to help win the war!"

C.G.E. COMPANY OBJECTS TO THREE CLAUSE OF AWARD

Has Notified the Employees and Also the Department of Labour That it Accepts Board of Conciliation's Dicision.

WITH THREE EXCEPTIONS

The employees of the Canadian General Electric Company received copies of the following letter yesterday afternoon giving the company's decision in regard to the award of the Board of Conciliation which was appointed by the Government to consider the claims of the men of the mechanical department.

Peterborough, Sept. 11th, 1918.

To all Employees:

With reference to the award of the Board of Conciliation this Company has decided to accept the award in its entirety, except on three points.

The Company cannot accept the award as to Clause 9, regarding shorter working days, nor Clause 10, limiting apprentices.

As to the rates of pay in the award, while the Company is willing to accept the rates, cannot agree to antedating them as on June 1st, but is willing to antedate them to July 15th, the date of the appointment of the Board.

If this is agreeable to the employees the Company will make the rates effective the next pay roll, and in the course of a few days will prepare a roll for the additional amounts, July 15th to September 1st and issue cheques covering this period.

E. G. PATTERSON,
General Superintendent.

Letter to Government.

The following is a copy of the letter forwarded to the Department of Labour by the Hon. Senator Nicholls, president of the C.G.E. Company:

August 29th, 1918.

F. A. Acland, Esq.,
Deputy Minister of Labour and Registrar, Ottawa, Ontario.

Sir:—

I beg to acknowledge receipt of your letter of 26th inst., enclosing a certified copy of the findings of the Board of Conciliation and Investigation established to consider the differences between this Company and its employees at Peterborough. I may say that in view of trade conditions, and further in view of the fact that the proposed increase of wages applies to contracts which have already been accepted without provision having been made for such extra cost, I consider the increase as recommended by the Board of Conciliation to be burdensome and onerous, but in view of war conditions and with a sincere desire to avoid conflict I may say that I am prepared to accept the award of the Board in regard to wages and other matters, excepting only three matters with which I cannot agree, and which cannot be accepted by this Company, and I further submit that the matters I object to were not within the scope of the Board to consider or discuss. When I agreed to the Board of Conciliation, as per my letter of July 19th to your Department, I distinctly mentioned that I had in view the terms of the memorandum of the Government published on July 12th last.

My objections are:

1—That the award should not be retroactive to June 1st, but should date only from July 15th, the date application was made for a Board of Conciliation.

When we agreed to the appointment of a Board of Conciliation we, not unnaturally concluded that the award when made would have effect only from the time that the Board of Conciliation was appointed.

2—I submit that it was not within the purview of the Board to limit the number of apprenticeships.

I distinctly stated in agreeing to the appointment of the Board that we did so under the memorandum of the Government which makes provision that union shops should be considered as such, and non-union shops should also be considered as such. In our business we have to have a number of apprentices to learn testing and other phases of the business which are not altogether mechanical, and we must reserve the right to decide as to the particular number and class of employees that we shall employ.

3—I cannot accede to Clause 9, which reads: "During slack periods before any reduction is made in any branch of its employees the working hours shall be reduced to eight hours a day for five days a week."

Such a clause would tie our hands absolutely in operating our works, and it is obviously to the interest of every humane employer to operate the works as far as possible in times of slackness, if for no other reason than the selfish one, to maintain his force without diminution against possible recurrence of busy times, but to make a bargain that such shall be done without reference to the circumstances as they may occur at the time would be impossible for us to consider.

Again, as another illustration, provided there is a fuel shortage during this winter, it might be very much more in the interest of the commonwealth for us to run full time three days a week than to run shorter hours during the whole of the week.

This is one of the matters of internal policy that cannot be settled by agreement, and with this opinion I feel sure you will coincide.

Apart from these few minor objections I am prepared to accept, without prejudice to an appeal to the War Labor Board, the award in its entirety notwithstanding the fact, as stated previously in his letter, that the terms are entirely onerous and burdensome.

Claims Things Are Satisfactory

The Strike Situation of the Dominion Express Company.

Montreal, Sept. 12. — Mr. T. E. McDonnell, the vice president and general manager of the Dominion Express Co., emphatically denies the statement made last evening by the strike leaders that 15 of the men brought from Toronto to replace the strikers, quit work on Tuesday night, and that another 30 of the Toronto men on learning details of the strike, refused to work yesterday morning. "The statement is a pure fabrication" said Mr. McDonnell. "We brought 91 men from Toronto in one lot and between 40 and 50 since, and we have them all carefully checked up and know that they are at work." Asked as to how the situation is generally to-day, Mr. McDonnell replied "Very good. On the western lines there is no trouble at all. The Toronto service is normal; and they were able to spare the men there to come to Montreal to help out. On the lines west of Port Arthur only 21 quit, and their places have been filled."

Military Cross for Capt. Rogers

Word was received on Saturday that Captain Claude Rogers, who is at present with the Canadian Engineers in France, has been awarded the Military Cross for distinguished service. While no particulars were received of how Capt. Rogers won this distinction, it is presumed he earned it for distinguished conduct while with the First Army on railroad construction during the summer.

THE LATE COLONEL STAPLES.

WAS ONE OF AMERICA'S BEST KNOWN HOTEL OWNERS.

He was Proprietor of the Largest Hotel at Alexandria Bay—Amassed a Fortune in Many Fields.

Watertown, N. Y., Sept. 12. — The body of Col. Orrin G. Staples, proprietor of the Thousand Island House, at Alexandria Bay, and one of the best known hotel men in the United States, was taken to his home in Washington, D.C., where the funeral was held, with burial in Rock Creek cemetery.

Colonel Staples' death occurred very suddenly at his cottage near the Thousand Island House, at ten o'clock on Sunday night, a few moments after he had retired. He had apparently been in the best of health, and had gone to his room after spending the evening with guests. He complained of being ill and died in a short time.

Colonel Staples was one of the most successful business men produced by Jefferson County. He was born in the town of Watertown in 1838, and made his home here until 1883. Starting out for himself with $16, he amassed a fortune through speculation in almost every field. His estate is believed to be over $1,000,000.

IF YOUR EARS RING WITH HEAD NOISES

If you have roaring, buzzing noises in your ears, are getting hard of hearing and fear Catarrhal Deafness, go to your druggist and get 1 ounce of Parmint (double strength), and add to it ½ pint of hot water and a little granulated sugar. Take 1 tablespoonful four times a day.

This will often bring quick relief from the distressing head noises. Clogged nostrils should open, breathing become easy and the mucus stop dropping into the throat. It is easy to prepare, costs little and is pleasant to take. Anyone who has Catarrhal trouble of the ears, is hard of hearing or has head noises should give this prescription a trial.

Haig's Order Marks an Era in World War

Foe Now Likely to Withdraw to Hindenburg Line for Stand.

LONDON, Sept. 12.—Field Marshal Haig's historic order issued Tuesday set besides his famous "back to the wall" order of six months ago pointedly marks the end of one of the most critical periods in British history. That the country has triumphantly issued from that dark period is unGrudgingly and gratefully attributed to the timely assistance given by the American nation, not only in the field of arms but also in the economic field.

It is universally felt that Field Marshal Haig's order marks the beginning of a new period in the world struggle to which the nation is able to look forward with hope and confidence. There is growing evidence that the enemy will withdraw to the Hindenburg line and try to make his stand there and begin a new phase of its defensive warfare.

For the moment there is a comparative lull in the fighting operations, partly due to adverse weather conditions.

The British public is now speculating with confidence on where and how Marshal Foch will strike his next blow and it is firmly believed that it will not be long before the great American forces will be found taking a more prominent part in despatches from Germany and Austria bring evidences of a new and rapid growth of the peace offensive movement and the tottering of the enemy's home front. Prominent among these despatches to-day are renewed reports of a coming political crisis in both Germany and Austria.

New Men to Front.

There is nothing definite or official in these reports, but should they materialize they will bring to the front new men able to inaugurate new lines of diplomacy, especially in the direction of support to the idea of a league of nations. Rumours are persistent that Dr. W. S. Solf, Secretary of State for the Colonies, is about to succeed Imperial Chancellor Von Hertling, and that Count Czernin will return to the helm of foreign politics, either as Premier or Foreign Secretary.

It is stated, but denied, by The Berlin Vorwaerts that Philip Scheidemann and Matthias Erzgerger, the former a Socialist and the latter of the Catholic Centre party, would be members of the new Solf Government, and that the members of majority parties in the German Reichstag are holding conferences to draft a programme of war and peace aims, which they will endeavour to get the new government to adopt.

According to an Amsterdam despatch to the Exchange Telegraph Company, Admiral Von Hintze, the German Foreign Secretary, was summoned to the great headquarters to meet General Ludendorff and Field Marshal Von Hindenburg and report on his conferences at Vienna.

Count Czernin's Interview.

Fuller reports of Count Czernin's interview in the Vienna Neue Freie Presse, which, according to some Vienna newspapers, was warmly approved, if not actually inspired by Emperor Charles, show that Count Czernin declared, among other things:

"We must not again try to stray from peace by understanding, or otherwise the war will continue until friend and foe alike have perished.

"The opposition to disarmament," Count Czernin is quoted as saying, "is the greatest of all obstacles to peace. Therefore I regard this opposition as a serious mistake."

Concerning the League of Nations, Count Czernin said:

"I must admit that the League of Nations is envisaged by Entente statesmen and intends to secure Entente predominance, and therefore is inacceptable to us. But I deny that no single form could be found that could impose equal right and duties upon all states."

Count Czernin concluded his interview with a call for peace as follows:

"From the banks of the Danube this call ought to go forth to the world:

"'Wake up, wake up from the bad dreams of blood and force, for a new and better future must be shaped. War as a political means must be combatted. The day will come when millions in all countries will repeat this call.'"

Food Board Flashes

A great deal of our indiscriminate eating on this continent is due to lack of imagination. How many of us really study the food question, apart from the matter of cost? Could we, like Maupassant, lend wings to our fancy, we would see a great army of men and women toiling that we might eat. If we were to count over the various food supplies in common use we would vision argosies coming from all quarters of the globe. We would see food coming to us on the heads of Indians, on the backs of donkeys, drawn in carts by huge water buffalo aboard the "ship of the desert," on wheelbarrows or propelled by Chinese coolies, and in addition to steamships, railroads trains, auto trucks and delivery cars are all playing their parts in the work of catering to discriminating appetites.

It is only now that we have war, when transportation facilities are curtailed and many countries are cut off from commerce, that we fully realize how much we depend on our import trade.

It is one of our war-time responsibilities to increase the production of all food-stuffs and particularly those of which there is a world-wide shortage.
